46 MORE QUAKES, TIDAL WAVE FURY ADD TO ALASKA'S GRIEF

By United Press International

Sickening aftershocks and killer tidal waves, backlash of possibly the strongest earthquake ever recorded, dealt additional casualties and grief Saturday to Alaskans counting their dead by the scores and homeless by the thousands.

Quake-caused fires, snow and bitter cold added to the misery in the areas blacked out and isolated by cut communications lines. Damage was estimated at $250 million. Casualties also occurred in California and Oregon.

As many as 85 persons were reported dead and at least 100 missing. Hundreds more were injured in the Good Friday quake that wrenched an 800-mile arc of the 49th state from Sitka west to Kodiak.

But the governor's office downgraded its original estimate of as many as 600 dead.

At least six were known dead in Anchorage.

By 7 p.m. Alaska time, 46 aftershocks were reported, at least six of them intense enough to be classed as severe in themselves.

through the night funneling supplies, food and water to stricken regions. Lack of electricity hampered the search of wreckage for victims in the 30-degree temperature.

Gov. Brown declared wave-battered Crescent City, Calif., a disaster area.

"Another quake . . . bad . . . bad . . . bad . . . God, why can't they stop this business?" an amateur radio operator tapped out from shattered Anchorage, until late Friday a bustling, modern city of 100,000 in all its environs.

President Johnson declared Alaska a disaster area and a major federal relief and mercy air mission was mounted.

Snow that fell earlier stopped as fires crackled from shattered gasoline storage tanks.

Downtown Anchorage looked like London in the blitz. The area was ordered evacuated at 4 p.m.

Anchorage Civil Defense officials reported looting in the devastated downtown and residential areas. Eskimo scouts of the Alaska National Guard, armed with bayonet-tipped rifles, patrolled the cordoned-off 72-block downtown area.

The five-story J. C. Penny store collapsed inwardly. It was feared there were victims inside.

A six-story apartment house was flattened. A two-block section of the main street sank out of sight in the fissured earth. A car perched on a 30-foot pile of dirt.

"The room started going from left to right, up and down," a survivor moaned. "I ran outside and the building fell down."

Houses were tipped and tilted. Some were smashed to the ground as by a giant hammer.

10 DIE, 15 MISSING

4 Waves Demolish Calif. City

By JACK SCHREIBMAN

CRESCENT CITY (AP)—This wrecked Northern California logging and fishing seaport counted at least 10 dead and 15 missing Saturday, victims of four tidal waves flung inland by the violent earthquake in Alaska.

More than 60 were injured.

The waves struck from 10 p.m. Friday until just after midnight, devastating 29 blocks of stores and houses in this town 340 miles north of San Francisco.

More than 300 buildings were flattened or knocked askew. Property damage was estimated in millions, perhaps in excess of $30 million.

The town's 3,000 residents fled — but belatedly. Although two radio stations broadcast warnings, residents were deceived by the first two light waves.

Then two mammoth waves struck. Some witnesses said they were up to 15 feet high. Powerful backwash as great masses of water receded did the big damage.

* * * *

SHORT - CIRCUITED wires set Texaco and Union Oil gasoline storage tanks ablaze near the waterfront. One went up with a roar. Towering flames shot into the night sky. They still burned long after daylight.

Along Front Street bordering the harbor, stores crumbled and bits of their wreckage floated out to sea.

Tidal waves washed masses of mud and rock four blocks inland.

* * * *

HOUSES WERE washed completely off their foundations. Trees were uprooted. Asphalt topping on streets was sheared off.

Streets and U.S. Highway 101 were clogged with flotsam, bushes and tree limbs.

Fear gripped the fleeing populace. One man, Oren Magruder, died of a heart attack.

There were reports of at least three cases of premature births at Seaside Hospital.

* * * *

TWO MARRIED couples were among the identified dead. They were Mr. and Mrs. Earl Edwards and Mr. and Mrs. William Clawson.

Another victim was identified only as "Frenchie." Bodies recovered included

UPROAR IN ZOO IS WARNING

TACOMA, Wash. (AP) — Birds and animals in the Point Defiance Park zoo here signaled the great Alaska earthquake Friday night 1,500 miles away with a deafening din.

"I was on our porch overlooking the zoo around 7:30 when suddenly there was a tremendous uproar in the zoo," said J. H. McMenamin.

"First it was the ducks and geese. Then the lions, coyotes and all the rest joined in. The noise was deafening.

"Only once before was there such an all-out hullabaloo — when we had a big earthquake here in April, 1949."

Johnson Aide Views Damage

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) President Johnson's disaster relief chief arrived here by plane Saturday night and met immediately with state, local and military leaders to organize the recovery efforts for quake-stricken Alaska.

Edward A. McDermott, director of the Office of Emergency Planning, left the presidential plane after a 3700-mile flight from Washington, and went at once to the meetings at Elmendorf Air Force Base.

Vesuvius Plane Crash Kills 45

NAPLES, Italy, Sunday (AP)—An Italian airliner crashed on Mt. Vesuvius in a driving rainstorm Saturday night, killing 45 persons including 7 Americans.

Officials of Alitalia airline said today there were victims from five countries in the Easter Eve tragedy.

They listed them as 18 from France, 8 from Italy, 6 from Switzerland and an Englishwoman as well as the Americans. The five crew members were Italians.

The plane, a four-engine turbo-prop Viscount, was coming in for a landing at Naples' Capodichino Airport 90 minutes before midnight when it rammed into the side of the famous volcano and burst into flames.

The passenger manifest listed among the Americans aboard a Maj. Lawrence Mancini of Brooklyn, his wife, Fay, and two children, Jill, a girl, and Steven, a boy.

The other Americans were listed as a Lt. Robert I. Adkison and a Mr. J. H. McFadden, both of New York, and Thomas Vendur of Norfolk, Va. There were no addresses.

The plane was on the last leg of a flight that originated in Turin in north Italy when it crashed.

Officials said the wreckage was sighted early today on the northwestern side of the still-active volcano, which rises 4,013 feet above the picturesque Bay of Naples.

Several squads of firemen reached the wreckage first and radioed that there were no survivors. They

GAS ENDS HOUR'S SEIGE

L.B. Youth Barricades Self, Holds Police Off

By GEORGE ROBESON

A 19-year-old boy, angered at his parents for refusing to give him a pain pill, barricaded himself in his bedroom at 247 Prospect Ave. with two rifles and held a dozen police at bay for more than an hour Saturday night.

The youth, Henry Baker Turley, was captured after police filled his bedroom with tear gas. He was not booked but was taken into protective custody.

* * * *

LT. WYNN HAYNES said young Turley had three teeth pulled last week and was in pain, according to his parents. The youth asked for a pain pill Saturday night, but his parents felt he had taken enough.

In a rage, Turley locked himself in his second-floor bedroom wih his two rifles and threatened to kill anyone—including his parents—who came near him, officers said.

Patrolmen and motorcycle officers surrounded the Turleys' home. Other officers stationed themselves on the roof of the house next door.

* * * *

ONE OF THEM, Officer Dick Johansen, fired three tear-gas shells through Turley's bedroom window. The youth hastily threw up a mattress against the window, deflecting a fourth shell.

Finally, he announced he was leaving the room to go to the bathroom. Officers Ray Woolhether and Joe Malcolm rushed upstairs and grabbed Turley when he stepped into the hall.

Officers later found Turley had not loaded either of the rifles.

L.A.C. Says:

Capitalists Should Stick Together

According to the Communists—and some of our left-wing legislators—capitalism is a dirty word. These people would destroy it on the theory that everything should be equally divided among all the people. It is evident that the capitalists must stick together in fighting this philosophy if they are not to be destroyed. It is therefore important that we take a look to see just who are these "capitalists."

One definition in the dictionary is "one who has capital." On that basis, a large percentage of the American people qualify. Compared with Russia, Red China and many other countries, all our people are capitalists because all but a few of them own many things of which ownership is denied to the people in Socialistic or Communist societies. Our people have something to protect and should recognize the fact that they have a battle on to protect it.

The family with life insurance is a capitalist because it owns an interest in the company that guarantees to repay it with the investment money paid into the company. The company, in turn, reinvests a large part of that money in automobile, chemical and other industries. Including all individuals, there are about 118 million policyholders in life insurance companies. The safety of their investments is dependent upon the free enterprise system under which these companies operate.

Every individual with savings in a bank or saving and loan association is a capitalist. Their savings are used to finance new homes and office buildings, as well as automobile purchases and many other segments of our economy. When government goes into the financing business it is in competition with these investments. Some of our people encourage the complete domination of such financing—making all borrowers dependent upon government agencies. An estimated 125 million people are capitalists in that they have their savings in their free enterprise system.

Then there are over 20 million workers who are members of company pension or profit-sharing plans. An estimated $65 billion are involved in these private plans. There are over 17 million individual shareowners in our private corporations. Owners of individual business enterprises number around 10 million people. All these are capitalists in that they have accumulated some money and invested it in private enterprises.

Every automobile owner is a capitalist. He has his money invested and must pay taxes for its ownership plus taxes on gasoline, tires, batteries and other appliances. More than 30 million people own their homes and should be concerned over the increasing trend toward government competition. None of these ownerships is permitted in the anti-capitalistic countries that insist they will "bury all capitalistic nations."

No other people in the world have so large a percentage of their people who own these things. It would seem time that we all take a closer look at our blessings and realize that as capitalists we enjoy the greatest prosperity and comfort ever known in history. They should realize that the rights of freedom of enterprise and capitalism are constantly being attacked. This is true as concerns Communists. But it is also true as concerns the attitude of many of our public officials who constantly seek ways of usurping the rights of individual capitalism.—L.A.C.

2 Southland Women Slain Near Vegas

LAS VEGAS (UPI) — Two women from San Gabriel, Calif., were found shot to death early Saturday on the desert outskirts of this city and a man who left their blood-soaked car at a downtown parking garage was booked for investigation of homicide.

Police identified him as Roy Warman Osborne, 36, of Portland, Ore.

The fully-clothes bodies of Mrs. Inez Mulloy, about 50, and her daughter, Mrs. Norma Widick, 22, were found lying face down on the desert in a remote area 10 miles southwest of here, near a little-used road leading onto Interstate 15, the main Los Angeles-Las Vegas highway.

* * * *

BOTH HAD been shot in the head and the contents of their purses—minus money—had been dumped out about 100 yards away. One also had been run over by the car used by the slayer to flee the scene, authorities reported.

The women had arrived in Las Vegas Friday to get a truck abandoned there by Mrs. Widick's estranged husband Gaynard Dean, who had been reported missing Thursday in San Gabriel.

Police said the women registered at a downtown hotel Friday night but failed to use their room. Early Saturday their 1957 Chevrolet sedan was left at a parking garage.

* * * *

AN ATTENDANT summoned police when he found the interior of the car soaked with blood and a 38-caliber revolver on the seat.

Police staked out the car and arrested Osborne when he returned. Detectives said his fingertips were found on the gun and the car. He denied any knowledge of the then-missing women.

Following discovering of the bodies, Osborne was booked on the homicide charge. The case and Osborne subsequently were turned over to the Clark County Sheriff's office.

* * * *

SHERIFF'S DEPUTIES said Osborne would make no statement following discovery of the bodies.

Sheriff's detectives said both women apparently had been shot inside the car and their bodies dumped onto the desert. The slayer was believed to have taken the women's car, driven up the road, made a U-turn and run over the body of the younger woman on the way back to the main highway.

The bodies were spotted by two Las Vegas men flying in a private plane.

Southland Safe in Coastal Niche From Big Waves

By JIM MELTON

Three factors protected the Southern California coast from tidal waves triggered by the Alaskan earthquake, a California State College at Long Beach physics professor said Saturday.

Giant waves caused by the quake lashed cities on the Gulf of Alaska and rolled across the ocean to Japan and Hawaii. On the U. S. Northwest coast, a 17-foot crest hit British Columbia and a 12-foot crest brought disaster to Crescent City, Calif.

In Long Beach harbor, the water rose five feet and there were powerful surges, but it was only a sample of what happened elsewhere.

* * * *

DR. GEORGE Appleton explained the three things which cut down the waves before they reached here:

1. There is a broad continental shelf off the Southland coast. As the waves rolled over the relatively shallow water they began to dissipate.

(There is some deep water close to the coast—the Catalina Trench, for example, but this is a minor valley in the ocean floor and doesn't change the overall pattern.)

2. From a global viewpoint, the Southern California coast lies in the shadow of Northern California. The bulge weakened the waves, but first they had a direct shot over open water at Crescent City.

3. There is a general attenuation of a wave as it travels, although a more distant point might get higher crests because of the other two factors.

Another Cal State scientist, Dr. Bert L. Conrey, professor of geology, pointed out that at Crescent City the "continental borderline" (the term "continental shelf" is the subject of a legal debate and scientists and using "borderline") is much narrower than the 90- to 120-mile border of relatively shallow water off Long Beach.

* * * *

APPLETON AND Conrey said the term tidal wave is a misnomer—the big waves have nothing to do with tidal action. Scientists call them seismic sea waves or use the Japanese name, tsunamis.

Dr. Appleton said a tsunamis is nothing more than a colossal version of what happens when you drop a pebble into a pond. Ripples spread out from the source of the disturbance.

What moves isn't the water, but the disturbance. The reaction can be explained, also, in terms of sound waves rippling through the air. It's the disturbance, not the air, that moves.

* * * *

THE EARTHQUAKE sent out two kinds of shock waves. One, transmitted by the earth, moved very fast because of the solid medium. The second was transmitted much more slowly through the water.

Conrey said seismic sea waves travel at an average of 450 miles an hour. The speed varies with depth of the water, decreasing in shallows. Using depth tables, scientists were able to calculate the approximate time of the waves' arrival here.

Smaller quakes which followed the main tremor are sending out their own waves, but they shouldn't be dangerous here. Size of a wave depends on intensity of the tremor causing it.

Air Crash on Vesuvius Fatal to 45

said the Viscount burned when it crashed and that they had to extinguish the flames when they reached the site more than four hours later.

The twisted and charred metal was found 500 yards from a volcano observatory located 1,995 feet up the side of Vesuvius. Not far away is a hotel.

Police said the wreckage was on the Carda Peak of Mount Somma, across a small divide from the main crater of the volcano. Although Vesuvius has not erupted since 1944, it still smokes and experts say new eruptions can be expected at any time.

Nab Wave Gawkers

HONOLULU (UPI)—Many of the tourists that flock to this city wanted to see a tidal wave so much that police finally had to arrest them for their own protection.

The tidal wave alert siren sounded about 9 p.m. HST Friday, but police said that brought as many down to the beach here as walked away from it.

Guests at the plush Waikiki Beach hotels simply moved up a few stories and had a ringside seat for any tidal wave that might come.

Police drove through streets near Honolulu's beaches, ordering rubbernecks on their way. A few of the troublesome ones were put in the paddy wagon for their own safety. Finally, police got a school bus somewhere and forced pedestrians too near the beach to ride to safety.

But when the wave came, it turned out to be pretty harmless after all. It looked more like a high tide than any tidal wave, but police still had no regrets for their efforts.

"It happens just about this way every time we have a tidal wave alert around here," one veteran officer sighed.

Tidal Wave Havoc in Crescent City

Wave Panic Hits Mexicans

MAZATLAN, Mexico (AP)—Over 80,000 residents and tourists fled this Pacific Coast city Saturday and took to the hills in fear of a tidal wave. Rumors had swept the city that back-up waves from the Alaska quake would hit here, 900 miles south of Los Angeles.

The port captain later announced there was no danger and by nightfall just about everyone had returned.

Governor Sees Crescent City Havoc as 'Really a Tragedy'

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Gov. Edmund G. Brown arrived in Sacramento Saturday with muddy shoes, a wrinkled shirt, a torn beltloop on his trousers and reports of death and destruction in Crescent City.

Brown's plane, the Grizzly II, touched down at 3:40 p.m. PST after a flight from the stricken northern California community. He toured the town for three hours Saturday morning.

* * * *

"IT'S REALLY a tragedy," the governor said. He added that water in the Crescent City harbor was continuing to surge and recede even as he walked around buildings torn from their foundations and heavy trucks overturned.

"I was a little frightened because I didn't know how far the waves were going to come in," Brown told newsmen at the Sacramento Airport.

Brown said that he spoke to a 9-year-old boy who had been staying in a shorefront motel with his parents when the tidal wave struck.

"There was just a little water in their room on the first wave," the governor said. "Then it receded and they went back to bed."

* * * *

THE GOVERNOR said the boy told him he awakened about two hours later, looked out the window and saw three feet of water swirling around the wall. Brown said the boy shouted to awaken his parents and all three moved up to the second floor.

While awaiting rescue, the family saw an elderly man and his wife walking in water outside the motel.

"The wife fell down and the man tried to pick her up," Brown said the boy told him. "Just then a car with nobody in it came along and hit them."

The boy told Brown he never saw them again.

Red Cross Handling Inquiries

The Long Beach office of the American Red Cross and the Paramount Civil Defense office are operating on a 7-day-week schedule to handle inquiries from Southland residents about relatives in earthquake-torn Alaska.

The Red Cross office received more than 800 inquiries Saturday. Many of them were from relatives of servicemen stationed in the Anchorage area, according to manager Roland R. Bach, and these were handled quickly—there have been no casualties among military personnel in Alaska, he said.

* * * *

BUT 426 inquiries were sent by teleprinter to the Red Cross in Anchorage, via Seattle. Bach said 28 disaster workers in Anchorage are supervising hundreds of volunteer Red Cross workers whose job it is to track down persons for whom inquiries have been made.

"This may take several days in many cases," he said. "Many people up there have been displaced from their homes."

The Red Cross telephone number, manned around the clock, is HE 7-2941.

INQUIRIES about Alaskan relatives may be made also by calling the Paramount Civil Defense office at Paramount City Hall, 634-2123. Requests received there are sent to Alaska by amateur radio operators who have volunteered their services to the CD office.

Meanwhile, the Port Hueneme Naval Construction Battalion asked all members of Mobile Construction Battalion No. 9 to report to the battalion center at Port Hueneme for airlift to the Alaska disaster area.

VAST HOLE OPENED IN ANCHORAGE STREET

Force of the earthquake that walloped Anchorage, Alaska, Friday is graphically depicted in this photo of downtown Fourth Avenue, the main street, as stunned citizens gape down into the yawning hole.

More Quakes Wrench Alaska

The tidal wave spawned by the shock rolled across the Pacific at 500 miles an hour. Shocks sent round the world threw six-foot waves against Texas and Louisiana shores on the Gulf of Mexico.

This was the situation in the more heavily-populated areas:

ANCHORAGE — The heart of the city torn to pieces. The new high school smashed beyond repair. Homes wrecked. Possibility of victims in the debris.

KODIAK — Downtown area smashed by quake and 17-foot tidal wave. Casualties heavy.

VALDEZ—As many as 28 dead; almost 30 missing.

JUNEAU — No damage to the state capital. Gov. Egan holding emergency meetings.

SEWARD—Waves as high as 15 feet reported. Damage heavy. Casualties.

SITKA — Little damage, a dock collapsed.

CORDOBA — Badly damaged and burning. One airman killed at nearby St. Elias.

VANCOUVER ISLAND, British Columbia — 17-foot wave ripped 50 homes from foundations; hundreds more damaged. No deaths reported.

DEPOE BAY, Oregon — Tidal wave swept across family of six sleeping on beach; one child drowned, three others missing.

Oddly, Hope, a town across Cook Inlet from Anchorage, was reported to have suffered little or no damage.

Sewers were smashed. Telephone service was nonexistent and much information was being relayed by amateur radio operators. Electricity was out in some areas.

* * * *

A LOYOLA University seismograph expert in Chicago, the Rev. Donald Roll, S.J., said the Good Friday tremor may have been "the biggest earthquake of all time."

The quake registered 8.6 on the Richter scale, more powerful than the 1906 quake that leveled San Francisco and the 1960 quake that killed more than 5,000 in Chile.

Waves tossed yachts and small pleasure craft like matchsticks in ports up and down the Pacific Coast. A 10-foot wave rolled into Santa Catalina Island off Long Beach, Calif.

* * * *

THE WORST aftershock Saturday, shortly before 11 a.m., registred 5 on the Richter scale.

Scores of injured were being airlifted to bases in Washington and California.

The Army rolled waterwagons into Anchorage to provide safe drinking water.

Massive quantities of food, medicines, other supplies and medical personnel were flying into the not-badly-damaged military installations in the state.

* * * *

OF THE 31,000 servicemen stationed in Alaska, only one fatality was reported. The Defense Department listed the victim as an airman stationed at St. Elias, near Cordova, which was near the center of Friday night's quake.

The U.S. Coast and Geodetic Survey reported the earthquake released 10 million times more energy than the atomic bomb that destroyed Hiroshima.

The Pentagon reported that U.S. early warning systems against surprise attack, spread over the northern part of the continent, were undamaged. The system was operating at "full capacity," according to a spokesman at Elmendorf Air Force Base just four miles from Anchorage.

* * * *

"MOST PEOPLE in Anchorage who were in the stores and business buildings had time to get out before the big shock came," said Anchorage police officer Robert Clemens. "Everything is rubble downtown. I couldn't even estimate the damage."

There were cracks two feet wide in downtown streets.

A ship in the area radioed that the entire waterfront of the town of Seward was ablaze.

Gen. Alfred Gruenther, president of the American Red Cross, sent a telegram to Gov. Egan pledging the agency's full resources.

* * * *

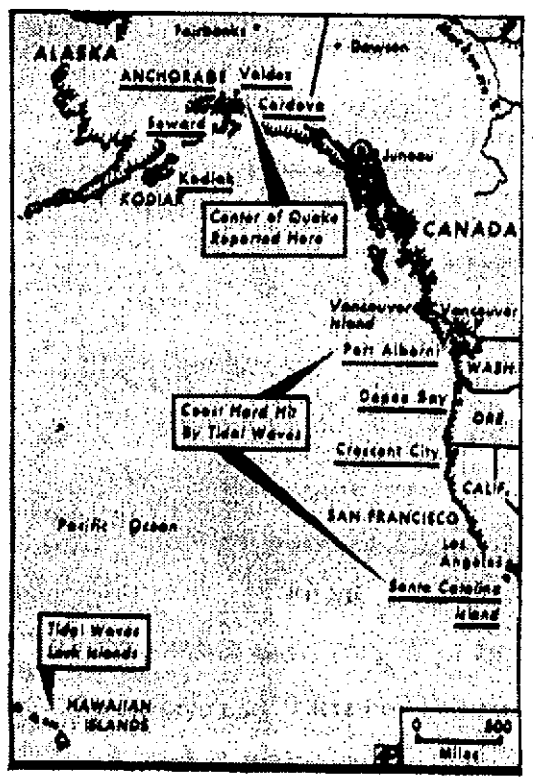

THERE WAS this breakdown of federal aid being sent to the stricken areas:

—Tactical Air Command planes flew 162 doctors, nurses and other medical personnel from bases in North and South Carolina. They brought with them portable hospital facilities.

—All federal stocks of food in Alaska were turned over to Gov. Egan. The Air Force also prepared to airlift food from the states of Washington, Oregon and other West Coast areas.

—Twenty-seven Red Cross disaster relief workers were being flown to Alaska from various sections of the United States. The organization also shipped 2,000 family emergency kits containing necessities of everyday life.

University of California seismologist Michael Clackford said the quake "was equal in magnitude to the most powerful quake ever recorded in North America."

WHERE DISASTER STRUCK

Map locates cities in Alaska, including Anchorage, which were hit by earthquake. It spawned tidal waves that spread death and destruction down the North American coast.

2,500 Leave Homes Around Golden Gate

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — More than 2,500 persons were evacuated from coastal towns north and south of the Golden Gate about Friday midnight as a precaution against a tidal wave stirred up by the Alaskan earthquake.

Tides caused little damage in the area outside the gate but did wreck boats inside the bay and wrenched loose piles supporting a 500-foot pier in San Rafael's Loch Lomond area.

* * * *

DEPUTIES went door to door to evacuate coastal dwellers at Stinson Beach, Bolinas and nearby communities north of the gate and at Pacifica to the south.

Yachts broke loose at St. Francis Yacht Club here.

At Sausalito the 66-year-old ferry Berkeley — now a market place — snapped its moorings but escaped serious damage.

The pier where the ferry is tied up was damaged.

The little harbor at Fisherman's wharf dropped its level four feet suddenly and as suddenly went up four feet. Boats bobbed crazily.

* * * *

THE COAST Guard said flotsam filled the Oakland Estuary where several small boats were set adrift.

More than 300 boats either were damaged or sunk at San Rafael's Loch Lomond yatcht harbor. Estimates of damage there to boats and piers ranged in excess of a half million dollars.

2 STRANDED IN BOAT

Wave Damage Here Primarily on the Nerves

By ANDY PARK

The tidal aftermath of Alaska's earthquake swept through the Pacific basin early Saturday after several hours of confused and conflicting reports threatened to cause panic in some areas of Southern California.

Continuing surges in the wake of the first wave from the quake caused minor damage throughout the Southland Saturday and left two men adrift most of the day in a 16-foot runabout in the wave-tossed channel between Santa Catalina Island and Long Beach.

John Reid, 26, of 7852 Santa Catalina Ave., Stanton; and Richard Gonzalez, 32, of 12648 Maryviane St., El Monte, tried to return from Avalon to Pacific Landing Saturday in their twin-engined boat but four-foot waves almost capsized them.

* * * *

THE BOAT, owned by Reid, was hit by a large wave 30 minutes out of Avalon and both engines were flooded.

"Water just began to pour over the side," Reid said. "There was nothing we could do."

From 10 a.m. until nearly 5 p.m., they drifted midway in the channel.

"We didn't see a single ship or plane all day," Gonzalez said. "We just kept trying to start the engines manually until I thought my arm would break."

* * * *

SHORTLY BEFORE 5, the Italian freighter Italmare, enroute to Long Beach from the Panama Canal, spotted the men waving an oar.

"They circled us once," Reid said, "then they pulled alongside, lifted us aboard with a harness and picked up our boat. Boy, was I glad to see them! That sea was really rough."

The Italmare was three hours late in docking at Berth 24 due to the delay in picking up the men and difficulties in navigating the harbor channel.

* * * *

A JAPANESE ship, the Brooklyn Maru, proceeding to the berth immediately in front of the Italmare, almost went on breakwater rocks when heavy outgoing tide threatened to overwhelm a tug towing the ship.

Earlier Saturday, frantic reports from Southland radio stations based on a Coast Guard report of 10-foot waves headed toward Long Beach and the Palos Verdes Peninsula caused homeowners to begin evacuating to higher ground.

One report urged those below 30 feet above sealevel on the peninsula to flee immediately to higher ground. Callers began flooding newspaper and police switchboards.

AT 12:30 A.M. the Coast Guard search and rescue unit in Long Beach announced that previous reports of 10-foot crests at Catalina Island were "erroneous" and that reports of 12-foot waves at Monterey heading toward the Southland were "based on faulty information."

Doug Bombard, harbormaster at the isthmus on Santa Catalina, told The I, P-T Saturday that the only surge felt there was "a four-foot variation in tide about 1 a.m."

The Monterey police department told The I, P-T at 12:45 a.m. that "a four-foot surge in tide has passed here without damage."

* * * *

HOWEVER, the Long Beach police department kept extra officers on duty until the surge had passed. Police departments in Seal Beach and along the Orange County coastline kept people off the beaches as a precautionary measure.

Father Tells How Waves Took 4 Tots

TACOMA, Wash. (AP)—Mr. and Mrs. Monte G. McKenzie lost the oldest of their five children in a fire eight months ago. Friday night, tidal waves from an Alaska earthquake left them childless.

The McKenzies were sleeping on the beach in a state park near Newport, Ore., when the giant waves hit.

In a telephone call to his pastor here, McKenzie said the first wave swept over the children and they began screaming. Then a second wave hit.

* * * *

"THERE was only a foot of air at the top of the lean-to we were in and we had to struggle to get to it," McKenzie said. "Logs were thrown at us like matchsticks."

When the wave receded, the McKenzies found their four children had been swept to sea. The body of Ricky, 6, was recovered. Still missing are Louie, 8, Bobby, 7, and Tammy, 3.

Their oldest, Susan, 9, died of burns last August when her clothing caught fire as she was trying to start a bonfire.

WORLD NEWS BRIEFS

Ditched Plane's SOS Pinpointed

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—The U.S. Coast Guard said Saturday search ships picked up a "weak SOS signal" in the Pacific Ocean where a DC4 business plane, carrying nine persons, crashed some 10 hours earlier on a Honolulu-to-Los Angeles flight.

The signal, apparently from a life raft, spurred hopes that the call was sent by survivors. The Coast Guard said it had a bearing and that ships and planes were rushing to the position.

It was the first message picked up since the aircraft sent a distress call at 6 a.m. PST saying it was 1,000 miles southwest of here and "there's a bad fire in the Number Two engine . . . We might have to ditch."

"We don't know officially, but there doesn't appear to be any doubt that the plane went down into the sea," a Coast Guard spokesman said. "As far as we're concerned, it ditched, in cloudy weather and rough seas."

Pilot of the plane was identified as Harry Baker, 60, of Fallon, Nev., pilot for Facilities Management Corp. headquartered in Hawthorne, Calif.

Mrs. Kennedy Advances in Ski School

STOWE, Vt. (AP)—Mrs. John F. Kennedy, widow of the President, advanced to a more difficult intermediate trail Saturday in her second day on skis and Caroline was joined by 3-year-old John Jr. on a beginners' slope.

MRS. KENNEDY

"It was perfectly wonderful," the former First Lady said, her face rosy from the crisp weather, as she left the steeper slope at Spruce Peak.

Mrs. Kennedy had received her first ski lesson Friday.

Caroline, 6, and "John John," as his father, the late President was fond of calling him, spent Saturday on a beginners' slope nearby.

The former First Family is spending several days here in northern Vermont. Also here with their children are Atty. Gen. and Mrs. Robert F. Kennedy, Sen. and Mrs. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., and Mrs. Eunice Shriver, wife of Peace Corps director Sargent Shriver.

LBJ Names 4 Women to High Posts

JOHNSON CITY, Tex. (AP)—President Johnson Saturday named four more women to top government posts paying up to $22,500 and announced he expects to name many more.

For the first time, a woman was placed on the Atomic Energy Commission and on the Export-Import Bank. Mrs. Mary Ingraham Bunting, 53, president of Radcliffe College got the $22,500 post on the AEC.

Miss Marguerite Jay Tibbets, about 45, a State Department Foreign Service officer, will be ambassador to a country not yet disclosed.

The Republican vacancy on the Export-Import Bank, a $20,000-a-year post went to Mrs. Elizabeth S. May, 56, dean of Wheaton College in Norton, Mass.

Mrs. Lee Walsh, longtime Washington newspaper reporter and woman's editor of the Washington Evening Star, has been named deputy assistant secretary of state for evaluations.

Johnson also put a woman on a new commission to study Puerto Rican statehood, commonwealth and independence. She is Mrs. Patricia R. Harris, 45, assistant professor of law at Howard University in Washington. She will receive $100 a day when on the job. A Negro, she is also a member of the President's commission on the status of women.

65 Pennsylvania 'Sitters' Jailed

CHESTER, Pa. (AP)—About 65 civil-rights demonstrators who resisted police trying to break up a sitdown in the heart of the city's business district were hauled off to jail Saturday. At least six were injured and treated at hospitals. One policeman was hurt.

The demonstrations—there were three Saturday—were parts of a series promised throughout the Easter weekend by the Chester Committee for Freedom Now, protesting alleged defacto segregation in Chester schools.

Tear Gas Halts NAACP Disorder

WARRENTON, N.C. (UPI)—Police used tear gas Saturday to break up a crowd of singing, yelling demonstrators here. Seventy were arrested.

Robert Blow, state assistant youth adviser for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People said demonstrations would continue and that a mass meeting would be held today.

27 Integrators Arrested in Florida

ST. AUGUSTINE, Fla. (AP)—Police arrested 27 integration demonstrators, many of them college students from New England, at three downtown lunch counters Saturday as the focus on racial problems in Florida moved south.

However, in Jacksonville, the biracial committee formed in the midst of the violence earlier in the week issued its first report, giving priority to seeking the voluntary integration of "all establishments serving the public."

German Measles Called Epidemic

ATLANTA (AP)—An outbreak of German measles, hazardous to the offspring of women who contract it during pregnancy, apparently has reached epidemic proportions in the United States.

The Communicable Disease Center of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare says the disease, known as Rubella, has begun spreading into the South and West.

Drug Firms Hiding Tester Fee Details

WASHINGTON (AP)—Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, D-Minn., said Saturday more than 15 drug manufacturing firms are concealing from the government all details of payments to doctors who test the companies' products.

Humphrey said disclosure of the size of the fees and the basis of payments could shed important light on whether the tests are objective.

The senator cited testimony in his investigation of the drug industry that some tests of drugs for safety and effectiveness have been fraudulent. But he emphasized that the testimony showed "the overwhelming mass of testers are absolutely honest."

Witnesses before the Senate government operations subcommittee also have told of some drugs inadequately tested before release on the market and found later to have dangerous side-effects fatal in some instances, crippling in others.

Humphrey's remarks were in a statement which accompanied the release of 1,000 pages of testimony and exhibits received in a continuing inquiry into drug industry practices.

Humphrey said the Food and Drug Administration apparently is powerless to compel disclosure of any information about testers' fees.

Elsewhere in Long Beach, 14 Masonic Lodges are cooperating in a joint Easter Sunrise service in Monte Vista Temple, Orange Avenue and Market Street, at 6. Breakfast following the service will be served by the Lakewood DeMolay chapter.

Across the world in Vatican City, the bells of the Eternal City burst into joyous song at the stroke of midnight.

A gentle rain fell as tens of thousands of Romans and pilgrims gathered for Easter vigil services in which the church marks the end of the Lenten period of mourning and the Resurrection of Christ.

* * * *

FIRES WERE kindled in the churches, candles and flowers were placed on altars stripped bare of adornments since Good Friday, and as priests recited the "Gloria in Excelsis" (Glory in the Highest) at midnight, bells sounded to end three days of silence.

Pope Paul VI did not take part in any public Easter vigil service. Sources said he passed the first moments of Easter Sunday in prayer and meditation within the Apostolic Palace.

The pontiff spent Holy Saturday praying and preparing for his Easter message of peace and Christian unity. He was expected to appeal for an end to persecution of the church behind the iron curtain.

* * * *

FRIDAY NIGHT the Pope, who carried a wooden cross in a Good Friday ceremony among the ruins of ancient Rome, blessed a torchlight procession of taxi drivers in St. Peter's Square.

An estimated 500 cabbies, who drove across Rome in procession to the Vatican, greeted the pontiff with a blast of their horns when he appeared in the window of his study. The Pope thanked them for "the music" of their horns and said he would pray for their safety.

Within the ancient walled city of Jerusalem, church bells pealed triumphantly as Jews and Christians celebrated a weekend of Holy Land joy and thanksgiving.

BELLS SILENT since Holy Thursday rang first from the Church of the Holy Sepulchre — believed the place of Christ's entombment — when clocks struck midnight in the chilly Easter morning.

Jews celebrated the anniversary of their deliverance from the bondage of Egyptian slavemasters. In a rare coincidence of the calendar, the Easter and Passover seasons occur simultaneously this year.

An estimated 5,000 pilgrims filled the hotels and most convents of the Jordanian side of the divided city, many drawn by Pope Paul's historic visit to the Holy Land last January.

ORTHODOX JEWS marked the beginning of Passover with traditional seder ceremonies, recounting the Old Testament exodus from Egypt to the Promised Land led by Moses.

For thousands of Christians who flocked to the places where Christianity was born almost 2,000 years ago, Holy Saturday dawned bright and clear. Hundreds of the faithful prepared for the Easter celebration by attending services at the Church of the Holy Sepulchre.

The services began with the blessing of the fire at the Stone of Unction and concluded with a Pontifical High Mass before the marble alabaster chapel marking Christ's tomb in the rotunda of the basilica.

Oil-Field Unitizing Program Continues

By GEORGE WEEKS

Regardless of tideland-fund controversies, the city of Long Beach will go ahead this week with a long-planned expansion of unitization in the harbor waterfront district and adjacent uplands.

After repeated delays, the State Lands Commission has approved the Unit V unitization agreement. Participating interests — the city and numerous private oil producers — are expected to sign this week, completing the formalities.

The new unit is the last in a series launched in 1961 when agreements were executed for Units II and III and for Unit IV. It will bring repressuring, through water injections, to all remaining oil-developed tidelands areas not yet given the antisinkage treatment.

* * * *

IT ALSO IS estimated to increase the city-state share of tideland-oil income by $15 millions and to add $4 million to upland oil revenue available for bond redemption and interest. The current rate of 32,000 barrels of water injected daily will be increased ultimately to 124,000 barrels.

Encompassed in the unit is a 1,500-acre subsurface area extending from the most southerly offshore production to as far north as Pacific Coast Highway and from the Los Angeles Flood Control Channel to Santa Fe Avenue.

Only the Ranger Zone — most productive of the seven oil-bearing strata in the Wilmington Field—is included in the new agreement. However, the city already controls the five lower zones and it will be able to inject also in the Tar Zone as a result of consent agreements obtained from minor producers.

New wells are to be drilled in connection with the unit operation from a city-owned site north of Anaheim Street and west of the channel. In some of the northerly reaches of the unit area, this will be the first water-flooding.

* * * *

THE LANDS Commission accepted the agreement after the city inserted a clause specifying that nothing in the pact would affect either the city or state rights in the eventual determination of the tideland-upland boundary.

Producers in the area number more than 50. The larger private producers include Socony Mobil, Standard, Superior, Humble and Richfield. The city will operate the unit for the tidelands and Socony Mobil for the uplands.

City Atty. Leonard Putnam and Deputy City Atty. Harold Lingle won the commission's consent to the program.

Jerrie Hops to Morocco, Joan Balked

CASABLANCA, Morocco (AP)—Mrs. Jerrie Mock, 38-year-old flier from Columbus, Ohio, arrived Saturday aboard her single-engine plane, in which she hopes to travel around the world. This leg brought her from Santa Maria in the Azores.

She landed after a six-hour flight and was met at Casablanca Airport by U.S. Consul General James F. Green and other officials.

Another woman hoping to fly around the world was stalled in Paramaribo, Surinam, by plane trouble. Experts there expressed doubt Mrs. Joan Merriam of Long Beach, Calif., would be able to get away in her twin-engine Piper Apache for Natal, Brazil, before Tuesday.

Legislators Try Again on Monday

SACRAMENTO (AP)—With 27 days of meetings behind it, the 1964 legislature resumes Monday with none of its major issues resolved.

Failure to agree on the biggest bill of them all—Gov. Brown's $3.67-billion budget measure — forced the lawmakers to end their 30-day budget session without a budget Thursday, three days before mandatory adjournment at midnight Easter Sunday.

The governor summoned them back in special session for another try at enacting the big spending program. At the same time, the legislature will try to settle these questions:

School Finance—A host of school financing measures are awaiting action, but there's no indication of what the legislature will decide.

Assembly Speaker Jesse M. Unruh's bill to pump another $75 million in state aid into the public school system—while attempting to reduce districts from 1,583 to 380—has been approved by the Assembly Education Committee. But it is awaiting Assembly Ways and Means Committee approval.

Tidelands — A compromise to settle the dispute between the state and the City of Long Beach over tidelands oil revenue still is before the Assembly Ways and Means Committee.

Bonds — This is the issue that has stymied the legislature.

Brown wants all of his November ballot to insure a $770 million in bond issues on the fall vote on the anti-Rumford Housing act initiative and an initiative setting up a private lottery. Brown opposes both initiatives and wants time to campaign against them.

Assembly Republicans insist that $620 million in state school construction and state building bonds go on the June primary ballot. Unless the school bonds are voted on in the spring, they say, construction funds will run out. Their refusal to vote for the budget until they get their way has stopped the Democrats.

CHRISTENING the "Long Beach Jr.," second model of the atomic cruiser Long Beach, is Sue Siefarth, Miss Seattle Boat Show of 1964 with Cdr. J. R. Korein, officer in charge of the Navy Recruiting Station at Seattle, standing by. The model is at Seattle.

'LONG BEACH JR.'

Second Model of A-Cruiser Built

A second model of the USS Long Beach—this one christened Long Beach Jr. — has been placed on active duty at the Navy Recruiting Station in Seattle.

The 21-foot-long model will be used throughout the Northwest "to acquaint our civilian friends with the Navy's role in the defense of our country," Cmdr. J. R. Korbein, officer in charge, told Long Beach Mayor Edwin W. Wade.

MANUFACTURED by personnel attached to the recruiting station, the model has such mechanized details as operating screws, rudders, radar antenna, sector-searching forward Terrier missiles, running lights and a firing Talos missile.

The Talos is propelled 40 feet up a wire by a compressed air charge.

* * * *

CMDR. KORBEIN said that the decision to build the model was influence by the fact that the USS Long Beach is one of the most advanced ships in the U.S. Navy.

The original model of the atomic cruiser, produced by the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Co., is on display in the Long Beach Arena.

CSLB Variety Show April 4, 5 Features Foreign Student Acts

The second annual International Variety Show, sponsored by the International Club of California State, Long Beach, will be presented next month in the college's Little Theater.

Performances will be given at 8 p.m. Saturday, and at 2 p.m. April 5.

About 20 countries will be represented in the show's acts presented by foreign students. Television and motion picture personality Keith Andes will serve as master of ceremonies for the second year.

* * * *

PROCEEDS will be used to supply library materials for a Latin America university, according to Dr. Paul Opstad, foreign students adviser to the college. The World University Service, international student-to-student aid organization, will administer the funds.

Proceeds from last year's production were given to WUS and to Ira Gwin, returning Peace Corps member, for a scholarship to continue his studies at CSLB.

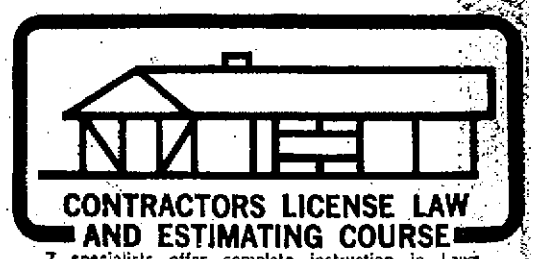

Sergeant Shriver, Peace Corps director, personally commended the International Club, describing the scholarship as the first of its type from a student group.

* * * *

STUDENTS from international clubs at Orange Coast College and UCLA also will perform.

Among the nations represented will be Japan, Cambodia, the Philppines, various Latin American countries and Mexico.

10,000 at Hawkeye Picnic Here Told Old Home State's Growth

Ten thousand expatriate Iowans heard Saturday their native state is doing its best to keep today's younger generation from following them westward.

Predicting a bright future for the Hawkeye State was U. S. Sen. Jack R. Miller of Sioux City. He was keynote speaker at the Iowa Association of Southern California's 64th annual midwinter picnic, held this year in Recreation Park.

Distinguished Iowan awards were presented to Joseph Crail, president of Coast Federal Savings and Loan Assn., and William Larrabee III, vice president of the Northrop Corp. They were honored for "contributions to the welfare and advancement of their native and adopted states."

* * * *

REPUBLICAN Miller said he disagrees with Iowa's predicted nine-percent population growth between now and 1975. He figures it will be closer to the national average —25 percent.

"Iowa farm and business leaders, educators, industrialists and government officials are joined together . . . to see to it that our state shares fairly in America's economic growth so that greater job opportunities will be available for our high school and college graduates," the senator said.

"We are bending every effort to encourage sound expansion of existing businesses and the establishment of new business in Iowa so that more of our young people can look forward to building their future in Iowa instead of in the Southwest and Far West."

Iowa's "wholesome, open living conditions" will become an increasingly decisive factor in the state's growth as people "grow tired of the traffic and crowded conditions in other parts of the country," Miller said.

He told the ex-Hawkeyes of Iowa's agricultural and industrial gains, of new plants and products.

"But most important," he added, "is the inherent strength of the people of Iowa, with their dedication to sound economic and moral principles."

* * * *

HE DIDN'T find fault with the folks who have moved to California, though. In the senator's view, that was due to their sturdy Iowa principles.

"Iowans do not believe in something for nothing. If jobs are hard to come by, they don't just sit and wait for relief, as too often is the case in some other states. They move elsewhere to find jobs."

As a result, Iowa's unemployment rate last year was two percent, Miller said, far below the national average.

Sen. Miller sees a bright future for Iowa. He hopes it's bright enough to halt the migration to California.

MacArthur's Illness Serious but He's Better

WASHINGTON (AP) — Gen. Douglas MacArthur continues to make satisfactory progress from major surgery, Walter Reed Army Hospital said Saturday.

The only bulletin issued during the day said the five-star general rested well during the night and that:

"The pneumonitis of the right lung continues to subside. His general progress continues satisfactory, although he remains in a serious condition."

Pneumonitis is an inflammation of the lung. It developed in midweek. MacArthur was operated on Monday for internal bleeding which developed after an earlier gallbladder operation.

Martell to Direct Anti-Sub Warfare

JOHNSON CITY, Tex. (AP) —President Johnson Saturday assigned Vice Adm. Charles B. Martell to a newly-created post as director of the nation's anti-submarine warfare programs.

The 54-year-old admiral, now commander of the 2nd Fleet, will supervise and coordinate all anti-submarine warfare planning.

COLLEGE THINKS IT'S FUN

H (for Hamburgers) Hour Comes Monday

The much-ballyhooed Hamburger Rebellion on the campus of California State College at Long Beach will come off as scheduled Monday morning, leaders of the revolt said Saturday.

To many of the hundreds of students expected to picket the cafeteria in protest of food prices and quality, the picketing is campus fun with a serious and good cause behind it. To the college administration, the picketing is campus fun. Period.

Jerry Tubbs, manager of the Forty-Niner Shops (the campus book store and the embattled cafeteria) passed the word that the store will sell "picket kits" with which to protest the college eatery. The kits, at $4 each, will contain 12 blank placards and felt pens in various colors. He expects a brisk sale.

BUT THE PICKETERS, called the Committee to Sack Saga (the cafeteria food service is supplied by Saga Food Service, Inc.) object to treatment of their cause as a big farce. Ruben Lopez, chairman of the Sack Saga group, said: "Behind what might appear to the college to be 'Cute Campus Capers' is a serious problem."

And the committee doesn't need to buy the book store's picket kits, either. It has already made its own signs, that say things like "We Ate Here—Color Us Sick," and "Eat at Bob's" (or Hody's or Hoff's, nearby restaurants.)

Only one small victory has been won by the committee so far, when the cafeteria dropped a charge of 2 cents for little cuplets of ketchup. But ketchup is not the whole answer, no matter how freely it flows, and the Hamburger Rebellion is under way.

AMONG SNOWY PINES, A GREEN-AND-WHITE PLANE

Nature's Beauty Shrouds 3 Violent Deaths

The sky, even more than the sea,
Is terribly unforgiving of the Slightest mistake.
—Old Air Force saying.

By GEORGE ROBESON

When you saw it, you understood why it took a week to find it, why it was a hopeless search until the snow melted.

The wreckage of the green-and-white plane had been hidden in rugged green-and-white terrain all that time. Civil Air Patrol search planes had criss-crossed a 2,600-mile area looking for this light Navion that vanished March 21 with three Long Beach area men aboard.

The wreckage was sighted Friday by Jim Hanson, 51, of 3162 Cedar Ave., who had joined the CAP search the day before. Near it were the bodies of Jim Lantz, 20, of 5827 Gossamer St.; L. Dean Book, 43, of 5809 Gossamer St.; and Albert F. Schlenz, 46, of 4736 Pixie St., Lakewood, the pilot.

Saturday morning I circled over the wild Agua Tibea mountain country north of Cleveland National Forest with two pilots of Long Beach CAP Group 7—Major D. G. Ruggs, of 3593 Mulford Ave., Lynwood, and Capt. Al Solding, of 1901 Josie Ave.

Beneath us, at the scene, the dead plane lay like a crumpled, discarded tin can in a mountainside cut, all but obscured by tall evergeens at the 4,100-foot level. Until Friday, the slope had been patched with snow, creating total camouflage for a green-and-white plane.

Dipping past the top of the ridge, 200 feet above the wrecked fuselage, we knew something of the last moments of the plane and its three occupants. A twisted wing lay at the ridge-top. The plane, for a reason that may never be known, had lost altitude crossing the high, up-and-down country, dipped a wing and tore it off. Then the crumpled plane had tumbled crazily down a heavily-wooded slope.

Then there was quiet. The three men were dead. Snow began to fall from a gloomy overcast. It would be six days before that snow would melt to show a search pilot a glimpse of foreign white in the green trees.

Our single-engine Cessna bobbed now and then in the mountain air currents.

"You have to know what you're doing when you're this close to the trees," said Maj. Ruggs. "A downdraft can kill you. With experience, you learn to judge the winds."

THE WEEK IN REVIEW

LBJ Seeks Wage-Price Stability, Rights

By HARRY SHARPE
By United Press International

President Johnson made urgent pleas last week for wage-price stability, civil rights for all, and Social Security-type medical care for the aged.

All are election-year issues.

* * * *

HIS FIRST appeal was addressed to the United Auto Workers (UAW) convention at Atlantic City, N.J. The AFL-CIO union opens contract talks July 1 with General Motors, Ford and Chrysler, and will demand a big wage hike.

The President said he hoped responsibility would prevail on both sides of the bargaining table to avert an inflamatory wage-price spiral that could choke off vital economic expansion.

In Detroit, Walter W. Heller, chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers, was simultaneously urging the industry not to "sideswipe the promise of the economy" with a wage-price fight.

Union President Walter P. Reuther has declared the big three are enjoying record profits and hence can afford pay increases without raising their prices.

AFL-CIO Preident George Meany backed Reuther with a challenge of Johnson's wage-price guidelines which tie wage raises to increased production.

The President directed his civil rights appeal to Southern Baptist leaders in a speech assailing "preachers and teachers," who are sowing "dissention and distrust."

* * * *

"THE MOST critical challenge we face today," he said, "is the struggle to free men—free them from the bondage of discrimination and prejudice."

Even as he spoke the Senate geared for a prolonged Southern filibuster starting Monday against the House-passed racial rights bill. Negro leader Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., warned that Negroes nationwide would "take direct action" if the filibuster jeopardizes the measure.

Jacksonville, Fla. was the scene of bloody racial violence which subsided only after a bi-racial committee was named to settle differences.

The President pledged to another AFL-CIO meeting that he would press for a passage of medical care for the aged this year. He said his war against poverty would be fought on many fields "and one of these is medical aid for the elderly." He added: "We are not going to let older folks fight high medical expenses in their late years, or alone. We are going to help them."

* * * *

A MAJOR earthquake hit a wide area of Alaska late Friday. The heaviest damage and loss of life was in Anchorage. Valdez, Seward and other small communities also were hit. A tidal wave swept into Kodiak. Tidal waves—caused by the earthquake—also hit various areas along the Pacific Coast.

The Soviet Union finally bowed to White House pressure and released the last two of three American fliers shot down 18 days ago over Red East Germany after straying off their course. The third flier, badly injured, was freed earlier.

Secretary of State Dean Rusk had warned Moscow that friendly Russo-American relations were at stake. The State Department sharply denied Russian charges that the fliers were on an espionage mission.

* * * *

THE RUSSIANS also released from an East German prison Miss Gabriele Hammerstein, 40-year-old New York singer who was jailed two years ago on still undisclosed charges. The red-haired Wagnerian soprano had been sentenced to six years. Her family had appealed for clemency.

Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara revealed that South Viet Nam's strategic air and ground forces are being expanded in a stepped-up war against North Viet Nam Communist guerillas.

He foresaw a long and costly struggle and did not rule out the possiblity that the conflict would be carried to Red strongholds. South Viet Nam is Red China's coveted gateway to rich Malaysia.

Sen. J. William Fulbright, D-Ark., chairman of the powerful Senate Foreign Relations Committee, jolted the administration with demands for "a candid re-evaluation" of U.S. policy toward the Communist world, especially Fidel Castro's Cuba. He also called for re-negotiation of the Panama Canal treaty which has split the U.S. and Panama.

Republicans charged him with appeasement and also suggested he was floating trial balloons for the President. Fulbright countered that if the GOP wants to make foreign policy a campaign issue "let's talk about it and try to get some accurate assessments."

The White House said Fulbright "spoke for himself."

* * * *

SECRETARY of State Rusk took direct issue with Fulbright on Cuba. He said bluntly that "Castro is a threat to this hemisphere" and will remain so as long as he is under military obligation to Russia and pursues a policy of hostility to his neighbors. But he said he "fully agreed" with a number of other things Fulbright said and conceded that "we are in a period of change."

Among other things, the senator suggested the U.S. should "abandon the myth that trade with Communist countries is a pact with the devil . . . our allies trade with them whether we like it or not."

On other news fronts, the President and Mrs. Johnson flew to their Texas ranch to spend Easter. Their daughters stayed in Washington.

Defense Secretary McNamara warned Congress that Johnson's $1 billion request for foreign military aid was $400 million short of the safety margin, but that the President didn't ask for more because he felt that Congress wouldn't vote a larger sum.

French President Charles de Gaulle, whose relations with Washington continue strained, was reported in line for another invitation from Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev to visit Moscow.

FOREIGN PRESS VIEW

U.S. Foreign Policy Criticized

By United Press International

European newspaper editions last week criticized U.S. foreign policy, the administration and new outbreaks of violence on the racial front. But the Supreme Court came in for praise.

"No one can say the Supreme Court of the United States lacks courage," the Manchester, England, Guardian said.

The Guardian praised the court's decision that a Cuban decree nationalizing American sugar interests was the act of a sovereign state and could not be challenged in the American courts.

"The proper forum for a decision on the legality of such seizures is the international court at The Hague," the Guardian said. "The Supreme Court has made a contribution to the improvement of relations between the two countries.

In Vienna the Socialist Arbeiter-Zeitung said, "It must be feared the spirit and dynamism of the Kennedy era will be gradually lost under the present administration. The most alarming symptom of such is that the best assistants in the White House are quitting one after another."

In Paris the newspaper Combat said the racial riots in Jacksonville "are full of gloomy perspectives at a time when the . . . Senate is getting ready to debate the bill to strengthen the civil rights of the Negroes."

The East Berlin Communist newspaper Berliner Zeitung said: "In Jacksonville the policy was carried out that the Republican (Sen. Barry) Goldwater, the political leader of all Fascist forces in the U.S.A., would like to extend to the whole nation. He also would like to extend the policy to Cuba, the other Socialist states and to all states that do not dance to the American tune."

In West Germany, the Hamburg newspaper Die Welt said: "It would be wrong to assert that the Americans are showing no more distrust toward the Germans . . . the contrary is the case. Very often those who are talking in enthusiastic words about Germany are raising the question 'May one trust the Germans and Germany?' "

Around the world in Asia, the Korea Republic commented on the White House statement of American policy in Viet Nam. It said American policy is to maintain the status quo with calls on the South Vietnamese people for more efficiency in fighting Viet Cong with stronger American support.

"We welcome the indications by (President) Johnson that the U.S. is opposed to both neutralization and running the risk of expanding the war," the newspaper said. "The present strategy is, after all, not completely hopeless."

In Hong Kong, the New Life Evening Post said that it was high time for the United States to make a thorough review of its foreign aid program.

The independent Chinese-language paper said in an editorial that the United States has spent more than $10 billion in the past 20 years on foreign aid in about 100 countries.

However, American aid in the Far East and Southeast Asia brought only "catastrophe" to the countries that received it, except Japan, the editorial said.

"What is the reason for the failure in the foreign aid field then?" the newspaper asked. "It is high time for the United States to make a thorough review."

The Seoul Shimoon newspaper said that South Korea cannot get by without some sort of foreign aid.

"Our view is that the Korean economy still depends largely upon U.S. aid and even if Korea-Japan economic ties are strengthened, it is hardly expected that economic ties will bring as much help to Korea as the U.S. aid has," the newspaper said.

Writer Dies

OAKLAND (AP) — Robert Ormond Case, once a prolific writer of fiction and articles on national affairs, died here Friday.

His widow, three daughters and a son survive.

Farrell Sets High California Standard

One thing you'll notice about Standard life underwriters—they manage to keep busy. Joe Farrell of Long Beach helped organize and for the past five years has been director of the St. Joseph "Gay 90's Review," an annual event that has earned thousands of dollars for church youth activities.

Joe serves his friends and neighbors in another way, as a life underwriter for the Standard Insurance Long Beach Agency. The enthusiasm and energy he puts into that job has just earned him the rating of top man of the month among all of Standard's California representatives.

Although Joe Farrell is a mighty busy insurance man, you may be sure he'll do his part to make the next "Gay 90's Review" another success. He'll find time to bring you a higher Standard of insurance, too. Call Joe, any time.

Beach Combing

With Malcolm Epley

In accordance with an old custom, Easter Morning's Beach Combing becomes the Easter story, as told by St. Matthew. Nothing more can be said here, except to wish all readers a Happy Easter and an inspirational dividend from contemplation of the significance of the day.

FROM ST. MATTHEW 28

IN THE end of the sabbath, as it began to dawn toward the first day of the week, came Mary Magdalene and the other Mary to see the sepulchre. And behold, there was a great earthquake; for the angel of the Lord descended from heaven, and came in and rolled back the stone from the door, and sat upon it.

His countenance was like lightning, and his raiment white as snow; And for fear of him the keepers did shake, and became as dead men.

* * * * *

AND the angel answered and said unto the women, Fear not ye: for I know that ye seek Jesus, which was crucified.

He is not here: for He is risen, as He said. Come see the place where the Lord lay. And go quickly, and tell His disciples that He is risen from the dead; and behold, He goeth before you into Galilee; there shall ye see Him: Lo, I have told you. And they departed quickly from the sepulchre with fear and great joy; and did run to bring his disciples word.

And as they went to tell His disciples, behold, Jesus met them, saying, All hail. And they came and held Him by the feet, and worshipped Him. Then said Jesus unto them, Be not afraid: go tell my brethren that they go into Galilee, and there shall they see me.

* * * *

NOW when they were going, behold, some of the watch came into the city, and shewed unto the chief priests all the things that were done.

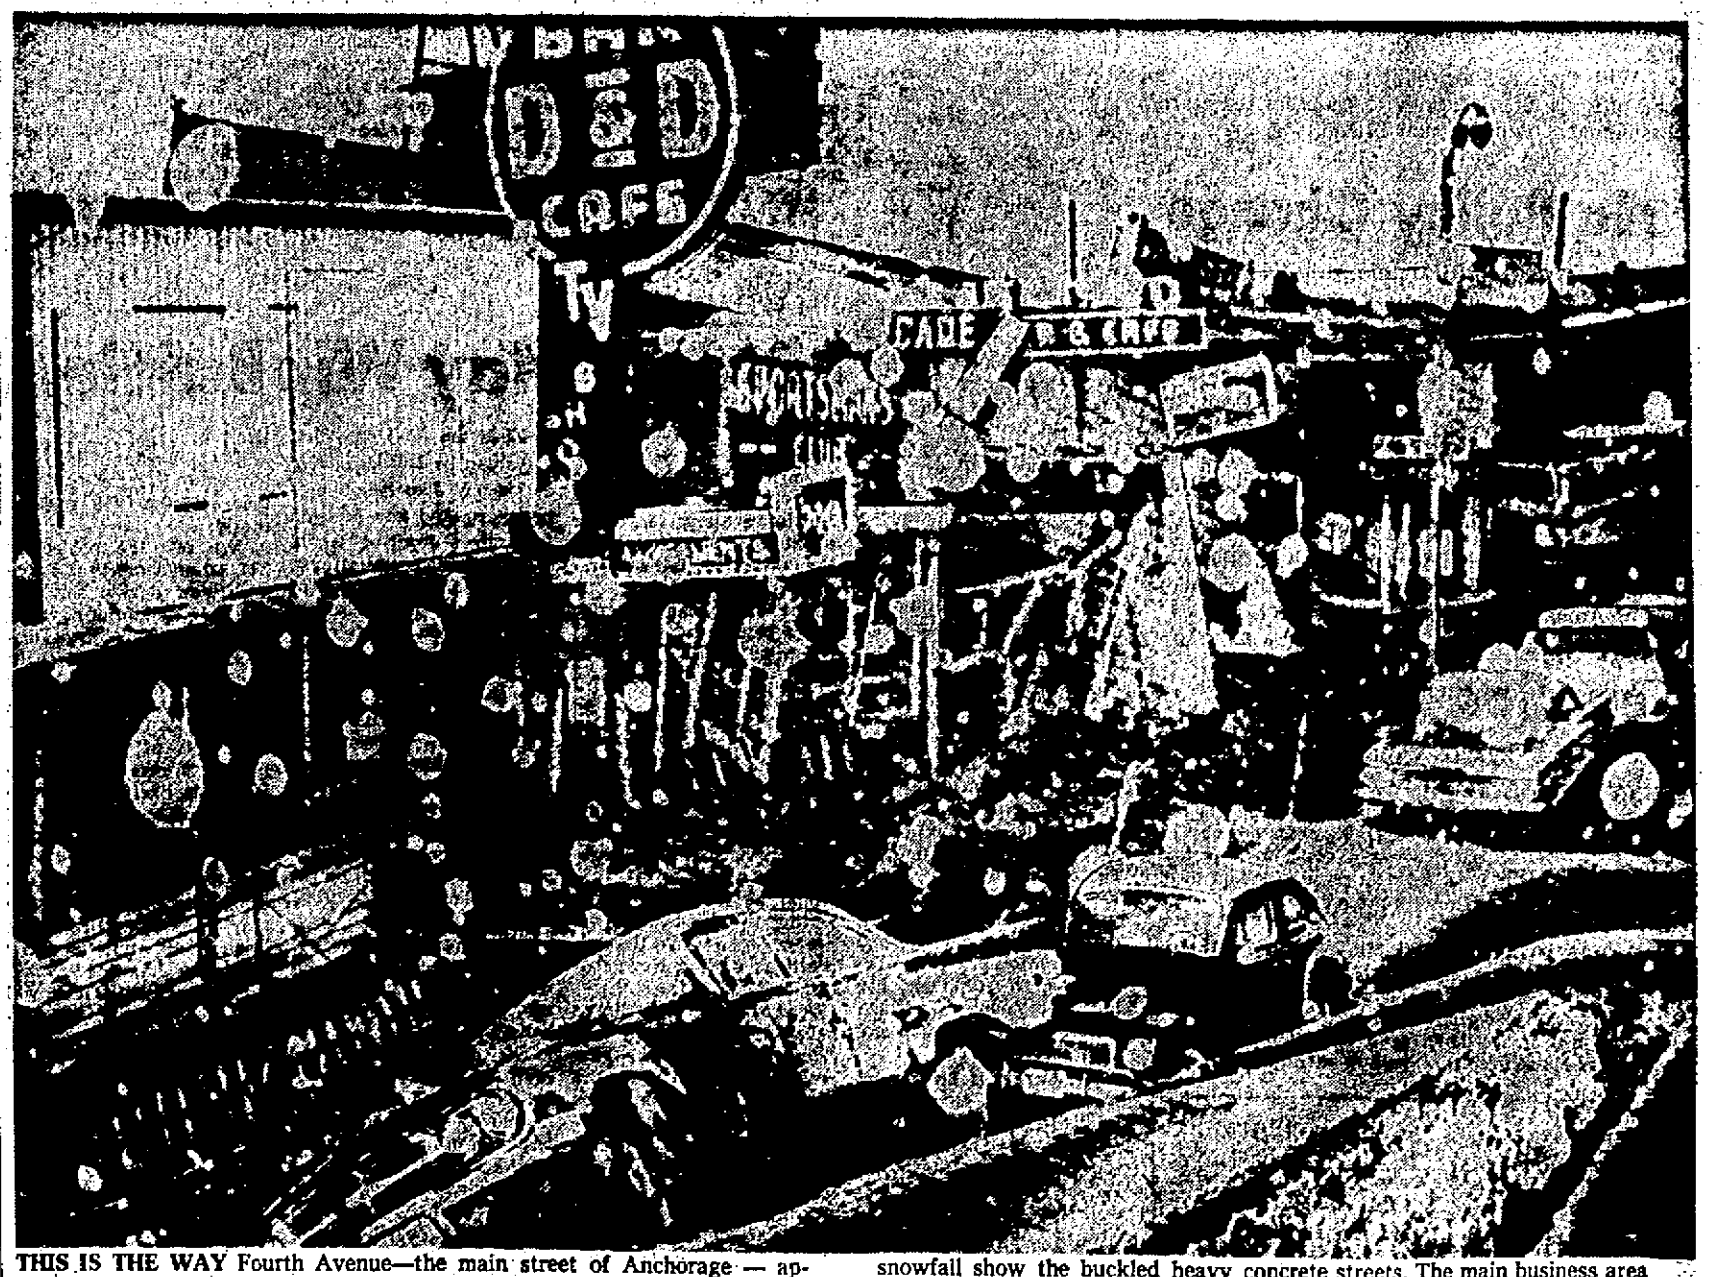

And when they were assembled with the elders, and had taken counsel, they gave large money unto the soldiers. Saying, Say ye, His disciples came by night, and stole Him away while we slept. And if this come to the governor's ears, we will persuade him, and secure you. So they took the money, and did as they were taught: and this saying is commonly reported among the Jews until this day.

* * * * *

THEN the eleven disciples went away into Galilee, into a mountain where Jesus had appointed them. And when they saw Him, they worshipped Him, but some doubted. And Jesus came and spake unto them, saying, All Power is given unto Me in heaven and in earth.

Go, ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost;

Teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you; and lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world. Amen."

THIS IS THE WAY Fourth Avenue—the main street of Anchorage — appeared shortly after a major earthquake struck Friday. Films taken during snowfall show the buckled heavy concrete streets. The main business area was closed off and troops patrolled d istrict to prevent looting.

EDITORIAL

Civil Rights Act

BECAUSE THEY HAD the courage to support the U.S. Constitution and give their approval to the Civil Rights Act, Congressman Craig Hosmer and other members of the House of Representatives are receiving a barrage of hate mail from racial extremists.

To illustrate how far the extremists have gone off the deep end in their fanaticism, some of the letters accuse Hosmer, a moderate Republican, of being un-American and pro-Communist! Yet, all he did was cast his ballot in favor of time-honored American principles which are perpetual planks in the platforms of both the Republican and the Democratic parties.

The Civil Rights Act is not a perfect document, and some amendments may be justified. It is not a cure-all, and in some of its details it seems to infringe on one man's freedom in order to preserve another man's rights. Time and usage will expose weaknesses and indicate necessary changes. By and large, however, the measure is a step forward in the campaign to protect and promote the rights of a group of citizens who have suffered from discrimination.

In some sections of this country, Negroes seeking to register to vote have been given difficult tests —tests not given to white applicants—designed to disqualify them. The Civil Rights Act aims at restoring to these Negro citizens the right to vote, which is a foundational stone of the Constitution and of the democratic process.

Similarly, the bill is designed to guarantee citizens of all races, colors, and religions equal access to public accommodations, and to assure a Negro youngster equal opportunity when he goes looking for a job.

True, these rights are covered in one place or another in the U.S. Constitution, but it has become clear that federal legislation is necessary to implement constitutional provisions in some of the backward areas of our society.

This is the mission of the Civil Rights Act. Congressmen who support that Act deserve the praise, not the censure, of constituents who believe in the Constitution and equal rights.

Pontoon Bridge

ONE OF THE WEAKEST points in the highway network of this area is the unwieldy pontoon bridge which spans the entrance channel in the harbor.

Having sharp dips, it is a traffic hazard. Raising periodically to allow ships to pass through, it causes nightmarish traffic jams.

Motorists who must use this route to Terminal Island will be happy to learn that their plight is not ignored. If anticipated financing remains available, construction could start next October.

This bridge will offer a better connection across the harbor area with the new Terminal Island-San Pedro Bridge. But this is not the only, and not even the major, reason for replacing the pontoon bridge.

The Terminal Island-San Pedro Bridge is crossed by an average of 8,500 cars a day, but the pontoon bridge is used by 16,000 to 18,000 vehiclees—most of them traveling to and from the naval facilities on Terminal Island.

Thus the construction, as soon as possible, of a span to replace the pontoon bridge is vital to national security as well as to general transportation in the area.

With these two factors in mind, city, harbor, and road officials must continue to press for the earliest possible erection of the new bridge.

No Policy Change

WHEN SEN. FULBRIGHT said early this week that Castro is a nuisance but not a threat to the nations of this hemisphere, speculation was heard that he might be setting the stage for a softer U.S. policy toward Communist Cuba.

Friday, however, Secretary of State Dean Rusk took sharp exception of Fulbright's statement. He said Cuba is a definite threat to other Latin American countries, and he added that the U.S. will continue its no-trade policy toward Cuba.

The speech by Fulbright must have been Fulbright's own idea; or if it was a straw in the wind, the administration discovered immediately the direction of American opinion on this subject.

Sen. Soaper Says:

By BILL VAUGHAN

FAMILY feeling is an unreliable emotion. A favorite son, for example, is one who is going to be dumped after the first ballot.

* * * *

THE MAN at the next desk says his diet is working extremely well. It hasn't shaved off any pounds, but just sticking to it has done wonders for his self-esteem.

AS SENATOR from California, Pierre Salinger could keep expenses down. There would seem, for one thing, little reason for him to hire a press secretary.

The Spear Is Still There

DREW PEARSON

British Socialist Says FDR Killed Socialism in America

WASHINGTON — The only man I know with eyebrows heavier than those of John L. Lewis is Albert Carthy, whom I met the other day in the airport in Trinidad, British West Indies. Mr. Carthy is secretary of the Socialist International, and his eyebrows stand out at least three inches as compared with only one inch for the former head of the United Mine Workers.

PEARSON

I met Mr. Carthy thanks to an institution which the Socialists theoretically believe in—namely the British government-owned BOAC airline which, while taking him and me to the inauguration of President Raul Leoni in Venezuela, ran off the runway in Trinidad.

The BOAC pilot turned too abruptly on the runway and one wheel went over the side. British government employes fussed and fumed, finally decided it would take them 12 hours to get the wheel back on the runway. Actually it took them 24 hours to get the plane in the air again.

I was convinced that free-enterprise American mechanics could have put a jack under the plane and slid it back on the runway within a couple of hours. However, since government operation didn't work that rapidly, since the President of Venezuela was to be inaugurated next morning, and since I was flying especially to Venezuela for that occasion, I chartered a special plane from Capt. "Reds" Cooper, the trip to Caracas and during subsequent inauguration festivities, I found him to be a very human, kindly gentleman despite his formidable eyebrows and formidable title.

* * * *

CARTHY has behind him 11 million dues-paying members and a total of 70 million membership, which consists of such men as Willy Brandt, the Mayor of Berlin and head of the Social Democratic party in West Germany; Giuseppe Saragat, Foreign Minister of Italy and head of the Social Democrats in that country; and Prime Minister Tage Erlanger of Sweden, who has led that country's elected government longer than any man in history.

Mr. Carthy is British and was formerly secretary to Lord Attlee, the Labor Prime Minister of England after the war. He is also close to Harold Wilson, who may well be the next Prime Minister of England; also represents the French Socialists, one of whom, Gaston Deferre, Mayor of Marseilles, was recently received by President Johnson and will run against President De Gaulle.

These Socialists, once considered the mortal enemies of Wall Street and of British big business, are now probably the most vigorous battlers against both European and Chinese communism. They are in power in the three Scandinavian countries, close to power in West Germany and England, and are part of the coalition government of Italy.

Mr. Carthy pointed out that three American cities had been under Socialist mayors for some years — Milwaukee, Reading, Pa., and Bridgeport, Conn. Roosevelt's New Deal killed the Socialist party in America, he observed, and added that the Eisenhower administration had not killed any of Roosevelt's so-called "socialistic" reforms.

He claimed that India "which you criticize for being socialistic" actually is no more socialistic than the United States "You have just as many subsidies for business," Carthy said.

I disputed this. But when I got back to Washington, I looked up the official U. S. budget figures on subsidies and found that direct business subsidies for 1964 totaled $1,864,000,000, while the 1965 budget listed direct subsidies of $1,664,000,000. These take the form of payments to U. S. airlines, shipping lines; do not include indirect subsidies such as defense contracts which total around one billion annually for General Dynamics, Boeing, Lockheed, General Electric, and North American Aviation.

"In 1929, when I was secretary to Clement Attlee, I had occasion to help draft a platform of the British Labor party," said Carthy. "If at that time I had written the same platform which the Tory government accepted in 1959, I would have been thrown out as an extremist.

"Yet, in 1959, the British conservative government accepted nationalization of the railroads, socialized medicine, nationalization of the steel industry."

Mr. Carthy agreed with me, however, that British government operation of the BOAC airline was not efficient. He felt as I did that 12 hours to get a wheel back on the runway was too long.

* * * *

WHEN YOU look behind the scenes at that draft-Bob Kennedy movement in Wisconsin, you will find some interesting actors.

Leading man was Spiros Kallas, who organized the draft-Bobby movement and became its secretary. It so happens that Kallas is one of the founders of the Mortgage Guarantee Insurance Co., otherwise known as MAGIC—the same insurance company that figured prominently in the Bobby Baker case.

Survey in 'Typical' District Shows Anti-Rights Answers

TWO POLLS in a mid-Los Angeles County congressional district have given a fair tipoff on why proponents of the Rumford Act against discrimination in housing would rather see the matter decided in the November general election than in the June 2 primary in California.

At issue is the initiative, sponsored chiefly by the California Real Estate Association, which would kill the act.

HOUSER

Friends of the Rumford law have grave doubts about its survival chances. They feel its defeat would be a virtual certainty if the initiative comes on the June primary ballot when the voter turnout is much less than for the November general.

June favors the initiative in other ways. State Republican Chairman Caspar Weinberger tacitly acknowledged several months ago that the GOP would carry the main burden of an anti-Rumford vote. Since most of the zing of this year's primary resides in GOP decision making on its presidential candidate, the Republican vote stands to be bigger by far than the Democratic vote in June.

Rumford people also fear that antidiscrimination is now getting a lot of lip service that will dissolve into prejudice in the privacy of the voting booth.

The poll also concurred with findings made by Democrat H. O. Van Petten, one of the candidates fighting for Clawson's seat this election.

Clawson told the House his 23rd is a multi-racial district in the center of Los Angeles County about equidistant from Los Angeles and Long Beach; its registration goes 65 to 35 per cent in favor of Democrats and its people "are a cross section of industrial America living in 13 incorporated cities ranging in size from a few hundred population in Vernon to about 90,000 in Downey."

More than 26,000 replied to questionnaires mailed to 102,000.

Clawson claimed his seven questionnaire questions were not worded to solicit predetermined replies. However, question No. 7 might not have been as innocent as he represents: "Should the government, state or national, regulate the sale of your home or personal property?" His response was 96.8 per cent saying No.

THE SURVEY showed 84.3 per cent opposed creation of a federal agency to supervise solution of racial disputes in local communities.

It was 84 per cent against any federal FEPC to outlaw job discrimination in private business.

And 76.6 per cent said the U.S. Attorney General should not have authority to file suit to desegregate local public schools and colleges.

On public accommodations, 74.4 per cent said public establishments should not be compelled to serve all persons regardless of race, color, religion or national origin.

In the 23rd District, 61.3 per cent opposed changes in laws to increase job opportunities for Negroes and to provide better education and job skills.

THE RESPONSE was even on the question of whether discrimination should be unlawful in any program or activity receiving federal funds.

Congressman Clawson's reading of the results was not one of any prejudice in his district. In Clawson's view, the survey showed merely a vigorous protest against "centralization of governmental power in Washington. In this proposed bill (Civil Rights) the right of local government to resolve local problems is placed in jeopardy."

If the 23rd does represent any kind of California crosssection, friends of the Rumford legislation would seem to be in for an overwhelming defeat.

Spanairds Killed Most Indians

EDITOR:

Regarding the editorial about the Indians: I think your writer should have done some research on the conquest of Mexico and Peru. He would find that more Indians were slaughtered and murdered in Mexico and Peru by the Spaniards than were killed in all of the years in the U.S. Also, that they destroyed a culture in Peru which has been the wonder of educators ever since. They killed the Incas for the gold and riches they could steal and only left the Indians of the jungle alone because there was nothing there for them to steal.

Your writer should learn that there was a difference between the Incas of the highlands of Peru with their highly developed culture and the Indians east of the Andes in the jungle. The wonderful stone work of the Incas, done hundreds of years ago without the aid of metal tools or mortar, has never been duplicated.

I would suggest that your writer get a book on the Incas of Peru or take a trip down there and see present day conditions as left by his wonderful dons.

'Mr. Ominous' Speaks Again

EDITOR:

Mr. Ominous has spoken again. Sen. Fulbright now says the economic blockade of Cuba is a failure and that we should resume diplomatic and trade relations with Castro.

What makes Sen. Fulbright's latest statement so ominous? It's because the views he expressed in the past always preceded a radical change in our government's policy to coincide with his views. We remember his famous memorandum that instituted the purge of anti-communism from the military. We remember his startling attack upon the Constitution of the United States when he said it was old and obsolete and should be abolished or reinterpreted to give the President and the government more power.

We remember Fulbright's attack upon President Kennedy because of his ill-fated attempt to liberate Cuba from Castro's communism. His attack on the venture was not because it was too little or because it had failed. He said the liberation of Cuba from Castro should never have been attempted. Sen. Fulbright said our economic blockade of Cuba has failed. It has failed because Fulbright's powerful-like thinking in the State Department wanted it to fail.

President Kennedy, while in Florida shortly before his assassination, said that Cuba would be liberated and that Castro had to go. It seems Castro had other ideas?

Brown May Win Battle, Lose War

I. P-T Sacramento Bureau

SACRAMENTO — A mid-April deadline for the June ballot is likely to break the legislative impasse over when bond propositions and the fair-housing initiative repealer go before voters.

M'CAULEY

The Republican minority and a bloc of Democrats have been holding out for a June decision of the electorate.

However, Gov. Brown figures that a large turnout of voters would be favorable to defeating the fair-housing repealer. So he wants the propositions on the November ballot.

Assembly Republicans have served notice they well refuse to approve the governor's budget unless the Brown administration agrees to a June-decision date.

As Republicans are outnumbered only 50 to 28 in the Assembly and it takes a two-thirds vote of 54 assemblymen to approve the governor's budget, the GOP has the power to block Brown's budget.

However, time is on the side of the governor.

The secretary of state's office must arrange to print the June ballot in April. Mid-April is the final date that there can be any legislative action on June-ballot propositions. And any decision later than April 4 would cause printing complications, according to the secretary of state's staff. That means a bond decision must come soon.

Gov. Brown once asserted that he was giving his No. 1 priority to education. Republicans are taunting him over this because proposed educational bond issues are caught in the backwash of the ruckus over the fair-housing amendment. All propositions must appear on the same ballot.

Some $770 million in educational bonds are being delayed because the governor wants the fair-housing proposition on the November ballot.

The delay has occurred even though the State Allocation Board is virtually out of money for school construction projects. It recently sidetracked a $4 million school-building program in Orange County, and has a $115 million backlog of applications statewide.

Assembly Republicans at least hope to place the $260 million state school construction bond issue on the primary ballot. That also would result in a June test on the fair-housing initiative.

Assemblyman Robert Monagan, R-Tracy, set the tenure of the GOP position thusly:

"We may be subjecting 247,000 students to the possibility of double sessions. The $115 million in requests from over 230 school districts represents funds needed to construct as many as 8,240 additional classrooms in 44 of the 58 counties."

This is one issue where Brown is likely to win the battle but lose the war. If the Brown administration cracks the whip, the bond impasse probably will continue long enough to assure that bond and fair-housing propositions cannot possibly go on the June ballot.

However, the GOP will have a new issue: the governor relagating educational issues to a secondary status due to Brown's interest in the fair-housing proposition.

GOV. BROWN

* * * *

GOV. BROWN belatedly is trying to court Long Beach interests after his controversial special-call on the Long Beach tidelands. Privately, he now hints that maybe it would be a good thing for the California World's Fair to open in Long Beach in 1967-68. Previously, the governor's office has been throwing roadblocks in the way of the fair.

* * * *

THE BILL to abolish Metropolitan Transit Agency still faces an uphill fight. Another round of amendments is expected to try to water down the bill by Sen. Thomas Rees, D-Los Angeles County.

* * * *

ASSEMBLYMAN C. George Deukmejian, R-Long Beach, theorizes there is one factor that heavily influences Gov. Brown's strong stand for keeping the fair-housing initiative on the November rather than the June ballot. If the initiative to nullify the Rumford Fair Housing Act were approved by voters on June 2, it would deliver a stinging blow to Gov. Brown's prestige —and with it his chances for a vice presidential nomination.

Courage, Not Winning, Counts

EDITOR:

Usually I glance over Hal Boyle's column and read a paragraph or two. His nostalgic records mean nothing to me because we all have our own nostalgic memories and what may be a pleasant recollection to one person may mean a lot of empty words to another.

But all that is over now. For Mr. Boyle has written a column that should make literary history. I refer to his rendition of what it takes to enjoy life as recorded in his column of Tuesday, March 24. His philosophy of what dreams are made of gives an item to character that all other words don't even suggest. He made much of one characteristic without which all other traits are as nothing. He wrote all those words in those three columns which add up to . . . courage. Yes, sir. That's what dreams are made of. Courage. If you say it often enough and if you let it become a part of your dream that make up your life, you will believe that you have it. It doesn't matter if you win or lose, it only matters if you have courage to begin, to endure and to see it through. Courage is what counts. Not anticipation, not winning, and surely not losing, but courage.

Wage-Price Trends Unaffected by Pleas

WASHINGTON—President Johnson has done what his predecessors did—make speeches to labor unions urging them not to bring on any "wage-price spirals." But insofar as enforcing this viewpoint is concerned, every time a chief executive addresses a big labor union the government subsequently presents the image of a helpless bystander.

LAWRENCE

President Johnson in his address on Monday to the convention at Atlantic City of the United Automobile Workers of America said that avoiding the wage-price spiral is "the responsibility of business and it is also the responsibility of labor." He added: "the international position of the dollar . . . demands that our prices and our costs not rise."

But the UAW, in a statement just a few days ago, pointed out that the union doesn't think the pay-benefit gains which it seeks would necessarily increase prices because, it continued, the auto corporation had record profits and rising productivity.

* * * *

WHILE MR. JOHNSON urged that "restraint" be exercised by both sides at the bargaining table next July and declared that the public interest requires stability of costs and prices, there is no law by which the government at present can insure that its viewpoint will be respected.

The Kennedy administration, of course, intervened to prevent a price increase in steel and claimed to have previously influenced the labor side. But the management of the steel companies had to pay wage increases just the same.

The advisers of the late President Kennedy thought they had introduced a new appoach when it was announced that certain "guidelines" would be set to restrain both sides. Wage increases would be granted on the basis of certain gains in productivity. But the labor unions, after a brief acquiescence in the idea, soon discarded it as impracticable, primarily because it interfered with their own freedom of action in demanding wage benefits.

For all practical purposes, government intervention is confined at present to exhortations begging both sides to be careful and restrained. But when a labor union is as influential politically as the United Auto Workers—which indirectly plays a big part in political campaigns — it isn't likely that President Johnson, or any other Democratic president, will disagree with their policy in collective bargaining negotiations. Mr. Johnson, at the Atlantic City labor meeting, voiced a sentiment often expressed but practiced when he said:

"I am here to tell you that we are going to do those things which need to be done, not because they are politically correct, but because they are right."

Mr. Johnson's speech to the auto workers union dealt only to a small extent with labor-union matters. He talked about the legislation pending before Congress, "the war on poverty," the federal budget, economic conditions, medical care and other issues of general importance. He dealt with the labor-union matters briefly, and disavowed any intention of interfering in labor disputes. He said:

"This administration has not undertaken, and will not undertake, to fix prices and wages in this economy. We have no intention of intervening in every labor dispute. We are neither able or willing to substitute our judgment for the judgment of those who sit at the local bargaining tables across the country. We can suggest guidelines for the economy, but we cannot fix a single pattern for every plant and every industry. We can and we must, under the responsibilities given to us by the constitution and by statute, and by necessity, point out the national interest, and, where applicable, we can and we must, and we will, enforce the law on restraints of trade and national emergencies.

"The words I have just read are the words of John Fitzgerald Kennedy, spoken to this same great convention on May 8, 1962. It was the policy of this government then; it is the policy of this government today."

* * * *

THE SPEECH referred to was delivered a month after Mr. Kennedy had intervened to compel the steel companies to rescind their price increase. What it all amounts to is a refusal on the part of national administrations to intervene in the far-reaching process of fixing the wage costs which inevitably affect prices.

Speeches by presidents will be heard again and again calling on both sides to be "restrained" and to consider the "public interest," but as long as there is no law on the subject, it is unlikely that the American economic system will ever be kept from indulging in wide swings, bringing a series of recessions and recoveries as labor and management fight it out in full sight of the government, but without any supervision in regard to the economic welfare of the entire country.

Congressional Mail Runs Against Civil Rights Bill

SEN. DIRKSEN (R, Ill.), Senate Minority Leader, is receiving from 1,500 to 2,000 letters daily on the pending Civil Rights Bill. The letters are 9 to 1 against the bill.

He answered this reporter's question on his mail at his press conference in the Senate Press Gallery. He sat on the table, quoted the Bible and Shakespeare. But this was only the "warm-up" period. He discussed the Civil Rights Bill and displayed an encyclopedic knowledge of the legislation. He has a remarkable memory and has had wide experience in legislation during his 31 years in Congress.

* * * *

HE BELIEVES in full and even lengthy debate in the Senate. He agrees with Sen. Morse that the Civil Rights legislation should have gone in an orderly fashion to committee so that hearings could have been held.

Sen. Dirksen went carefully over each title of the Civil Rights Bill and explained to reporters where the language should be clarified, and where—in his opinion—the provisions are improper and infringe the rights of all citizens.

He said bluntly that Rep. William M. McCulloch (R-Ohio), active in the Civil Rights debate in the House, had termed it a "pail of garbage." Sen. Dirksen is a firm advocate of civil rights for all people but he believes the bill must be carefully worked out to insure passage and to be Constitutional.

He disapproved of a provision which would permit employers to ask job hunters if they are atheists. An atheist could be refused work without the employer being charged with discrimination.

* * * *

SEN. DIRKSEN said that to deny continued federal assistance in housing (where contracts are already in existence) would violate the sanctity of contracts — a basic tenet of law. He told this reporter that if the United States violates its own contracts within its boundaries, it will inflame some foreign countries who have already or are seeking to break contracts with the United States or with United States citizens.

He made it clear that he takes seriously the mail he receives.

The mail of Sen. Engle (D, Calif.) is running about 85% against the bill.

Sen. Kuchel (R, Calif.), Minority Whip, is receiving much mail which is 4 to 1 against the bill. Two weeks ago Sen. Keating (R, N.Y.) said his mail was running 10 to 7 against the bill. He charged the mail was organized by Mississippi civil rights groups. In Washington, on March 24, he said his mail is now running predominantly for the bill. This mail is not organized, his assistants claim. A spokesman for him said Sen. Keating had declined the offers of Harlem leaders to organize mail campaigns.

* * * *

THE MAIL of the Chairman of the Republican Policy Committee, Sen. Hickenlooper, Iowa, is running 10 to 1 against the Civil Rights Bill.

Sen. Hubert Humphrey is receiving about 1,000 letters a day. The mail from Minnesota citizens favor the bill. His out-of-state mail is predominantly against the bill.

Sen. Mansfield (D, Mont.), Senate Majority Leader, is receiving a lot of mail. His assistant declined to say how the mail is running.

WALTER T. RIDDER

Inconclusive End to Baker Investigation Disgraceful

WASHINGTON—Any decent American citizen interested in good government must weep when he thinks of the desultory, inconclusive and disgraceful end to the so-called investigation of the Bobby Baker case. What happened was a travesty on the congressional investigative process and an arrant disregard of public responsibility.

RIDDER

Had the committee never started the investigation in the first place, that would have been understandable. Had the committee pursued the investigation to whatever end it might have reached, that too would be understandable.

But what is not understandable is why the committee started on the chase and then quit before it had nailed the quarry—if any.

* * * *

I DON'T know whether Bobby Baker was or was not guilty of any wrong-doing or breach of propriety. No one else knows either, which is precisely the point. The committee, heavily weighted in favor of the Democrats, simply aroused more suspicions than it allayed and cut off the inquiry without questioning those whose testimony might have shed more light on what can only be described as a most peculiar case.

How deeply—if at all—was President Johnson implicated in the multifarious affairs of his one-time friend whom he now treats as a vague figure whom he might have known in the past? The committee in rather closing the investigation did nothing more than to incite further rumors in an already rumor-filled affair. In its actions it did President Johnson no favor for it gave the impression of acting hastily in order to cover-up for a situation which might make for political embarrassment.

Almost everyone in Washington realizes that the Bobby Baker case was of infinitely more interest in the nation's capital than elsewhere in the country. This is too bad because in essence the Bobby Baker affair was not a local issue. It was a national one. It dealt with the behavior of people who are entrusted with some responsibility in a democratic society.

The heart of the matter was not that a bunch of small fry were clinging like leeches to the bodies of the great and near-great, but that the great and near-great were or were suspected to have been involved with the fast buck guys. The investigating committee did nothing to eradicate those suspicions. Indeed, it served its own purpose ill by raising more questions than it answered, by increasing rather than putting at end the uneasy doubts in the minds of too many people.

The sordid story of the Bobby Baker investigation will no doubt over the course of time be forgotten. So will those who took part in it. But the whole affair will to some extent weaken the fabric of democratic government for it has shown that on occasion democratic government cannot or will not police itself and that on the whole the people of the United States don't really care what is or is not being done by those who represent them.

WALTER T. RIDDER.

Cancer Drive Starts April 1

The annual anti-cancer crusade opens Wednesday throughout the Harbor area with Long Beach headquarters directing the month-long solicitation which is expected to raise $100,000 for the battle against cancer. Last year's drive netted $92,455.

More than 5,000 volunteer workers are expected to take part in the drive in Long Beach, San Pedro, Wilmington, Signal Hill, Compton, Artesia, Bellflower, Lakewood and Avalon.

General Campaign Chairman is John Wells, Long Beach securities executive. Mrs. George Wills, Lakewood housewife, heads the residential division.

Central headquarters are at 936 Pine Ave.

LAKE ELSINORE

Officially to Open Saturday

Lake Elsinore officially reopens as a refilled lake Saturday.

The ceremonies, marking the restoration of the three-mile lake as a public boating and recreation area, will begin at 10 a.m. and will include a parade, boat races, a boat parade depicting the history of the lake, a water sports show featuring skiing events and a street dance. Civic, social and service organizations have set up booths to provide food and entertainment.

The lake will be open to boaters immediately after the water show—approximately at noon. The lake will be zoned for high speed boats.

* * * *

BOATS WILL BE launched only from two ramps which can handle 15 boats simultaneously. Both ramps are operated by a concessioner and charge similar fees. The lake-use fee is $3 and parking and launching is $2.

The lake-use fee is to provide for repayment of $750,000 loaned to the state's Division of Beaches and Parks by the State's Division of Small Craft Harbors to enable purchase of the water and provide a fund for replenishment of water due to seepage and evaporation.

The lake now is more than 12 feet deep, where in past years it was only a baked mudflat. Except for an 18-month period in 1958-59, the lake has been dry since 1950.

L.B. Faces Higher Budget

By GEORGE WEEKS

Long Beach city budget-making will reach the stage of administrative hearings this week with indications that the 1964-65 appropriations will come out "moderately higher" than the current year's $33,693,412.

Unavoidable increases such as automatic salary raises, higher costs for materials and supplies and the necessity of maintaining new parks will account for much of the added outlay, City Manager John R. Mansell said.

But some departments, especially Police and Fire, may make out a good case for more personnel, he said.

* * * *

"WE EXPECT to maintain present levels of service in the face of rising population and a large increase in the number of housing units," Mansell declared.

The new tax rate remains uncertain at this stage, but he said he hopes revenues from other sources will make unnecessary any appreciable change in the rate of property taxes.

One example of current revenue gains is a Finance Department report listing sales tax receipts for 1963-64, through March of this year, at $4,200,218. The current budget estimate had anticipated only $3,932,750. For 1962-63 the corresponding figure was $3,871,992.

* * * *

BEGINNING late this week, Mansell will call in department heads for a series of hearings to review prospective needs for next year. Figures for major departments have already been analyzed by the Budget and Research Bureau under direction of Hal Martin.

The city manager's spending recommendations, accompanied by revenue estimates, will go to the City Council about June 15 for another month of wrapup budget sessions.

In the latter period city salary questions will be settled, Mansell said his staff has just begun a comprehensive salary survey.

According to the Budget and Research Bureau, 73.4 per cent of the budget increases from 1953-54 to 1963-64 must be attributed to pay and price raises. Higher prices reflected the general inflationary trend. The city's salary level has merely kept pace with the local labor market, the bureau said.

* * * *

THE REMAINING 26.6 per cent increase in operation budgets is traced to greater workload generated by added facilities.

In the same 10-year period Long Beach population has gained 38.56 per cent, from 262,600 to 363,600; cost of living 16.59 per cent; area wages 48.89 per cent; miles of streets 28.13 per cent, from 608 to 779; city-owned street lights 28.77 per cent, from 12,888 to 16,596; traffic signal installations 59.5 per cent, from 200 to 319; refuse collection 30.29 per cent, from 162,314 tons to 211,479 tons.

DANGEROUS PLAY

Car Set Afire by 2 Children

Engine Co. No. 5 responded to an automobile fire on Molino Avenue Saturday at 1:40 p.m., where they found a housewife with two neighbor children who said they had been playing with matches in the car.

Firemen extinguished the blaze which damaged the front seat, side panels and dashboard of the vehicle. The 41-year-old housewife, who told officers she lives at 1381 Molino Ave., refused to identify the children and said her name was Mrs. Margaret Sparks.

Church Council Offers Relief via Red Cross

NEW YORK (AP)—The National Council of Churches offered its full resources Saturday for relief work in earthquake torn Alaska.

The offer was made to the Red Cross in Washington and promptly accepted "with gratitude."

A spokesman for the 31-denomination national council said the aid made available ranged from emergency airlifts of supplies to designation of Alaska churches as shelters and food-distribution centers.

Italy Sympathetic

ROME (AP)—Italian President Antonio Segni and Premier Aldo Moro Saturday sent U.S. President Johnson telegrams of sympathy on the Alaska earthquake disaster.

DIRT BY THE TON GETS ARENA READY FOR RODEO
The concrete floor of the Long Beach Arena is being transformed into a dirt corral for the Pacific Indoor Rodeo to be held Tuesday through Sunday. Tex Connelly (right), general manager of the rodeo, and James Myall, Arena building superintendent, supervise the dumping of more than 1,500 tons of dirt into the Arena. Heavy concrete wall will encircle the rodeo area.

Water Plant Going to 'Gitmo'

By LOU JOBST
Marine Editor

A 1,200-ton salt water conversion plant designed to make the U.S. naval base at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba self-sufficient will be loaded aboard the Los Angeles freighter SS President Grant at San Diego Wednesday.

The multimillion-dollar experimental plant, in operation at Point Loma for two years, has been dismantled and will be put aboard the President Grant, an American President Lines ship, in lifts ranging up to 65 tons each.

* * * *

LOADING OF THE dismantled plant will take about 12 hours, APL officials estimate.

The desalination plant, one of 10 "pilot plants" maintained by the Interior Department around the U.S., is capable of producing 1.4 million gallons of fresh water from salt water daily at a cost of $1 per 1,000 gallons.

The cargoliner, en route to New York from Los Angeles, will divert from its regular course for the special calls at San Diego and Guantanamo.

The President Grant was selected because it is capable of handling the large shipment and because its schedule enabled her to handle the operation.

The American Flag ship will leave San Diego Thursday morning and will take 10 days in transit, arriving at Guantanamo the morning of April 12.

* * * *

AN OFFSHORE CRANE, brought from San Juan, Puerto Rico, will unload the conversion plant at "Gitmo," the base's nickname.

Movement of the desalination plant from San Diego to Guantanamo was ordered by President Johnson several weeks ago when the regular water supply to the Navy base was cut off by Fidel Castro.

The reassembled plant will make the base independent of Cuban water, officials claim.

Thresher Carillon Dedication Set

PORTSMOUTH, N. H. (AP)—The Thresher bells, a carillon in memory of the 129 men who lost their lives in the sinking of the submarine Thresher last April 10 is slated to be dedicated Memorial Day, May 30.

The carillon will be installed in the Navy chapel at Portsmouth Naval Shipyard, and will be dedicated to all men who have lost their lives in submarines. The carillon is being purchased through a Thresher memorial fund which was raised by public subscription.

Welfare Fund 'Buys' Safety for Crew of USS Canberra

TO SAFEGUARD against traffic mishaps—and on occasion deaths—that have occurred in the press of jammed and rushing weekend highway traffic, men of the USS Canberra, guided missile heavy cruiser at the Navy Shipyard here for overhaul, are shuttling back and forth to their home base at San Diego by chartered bus to visit wives, families, friends and sweethearts. Under the program, the ship's Welfare and Recreation Fund pays a share of the expense. Buses avoid the peak traffic days and hours to make sure men travel in the highest degree of safety. The commuter program will remain in effect during the Canberra's four-and-one-half month facelifting. She is scheduled to depart in mid-July.

Marines 'Go Over Top' in 1-Day Red Cross Drive

"Leathernecks", of the Marine Barracks, Terminal Island—a small command of 135 men—turned in $161.50 the first day of the Red Cross Drive chalking up 100 per cent participation in the drive.

Overall goal of the local Red Cross this year is $300,000 and the drive has been extended to April 15.

Another military installation, the U.S. Naval Base, expects to reach a total of $30,000 in contributions, according to R. Leonal Gray, Red Cross field director at the base.

Long Beach Naval Shipyards will intensify its collections in a one-day drive Friday.

Ships afloat from the local Navy Base will report returns by mid-April.

James A. Willingham, chairman of the Long Beach campaign, said that extensive Red Cross services to the Navy personnel on the Naval Base and ships afloat from this base are financed by American Red Cross national funds.

"This returns to our area dollars far in excess of the $180,287 which we appropriate to the national fund for services to armed forces, disaster, national and international projects," he stated.

Field Director Gray said that professional services on the Base include those from his office open night and day, and those of Mary Walling, field director, and assistants on the hospital ship, Haven. Volunteers from the chapters supplement the cooperative services of counseling, financial assistance, and emergency problems. Emergency services numbered 7,445 the past year.

LT. BRUCE K. NESTANDE, supply officer, and L/CPL Duncan M. Carswell, of the Marine Barracks, Terminal Island, hang up the victory sign showing 100 percent participation of personnel in the Red Cross Fund Drive.

British Jobless Total Down

LONDON (AP) — The number of British unemployed in March dropped to 425,322. Ministry of Labor figures showed a fall of 38,750 from the February total. The number unemployed then was 2 per cent of the working population. The March percentage figure of 1.9 was the lowest since July 1962, when it was 1.8.

Library Asks Missing Mag, Directory Links

Missing issues of a magazine once published in Long Beach and copies of the city directory are needed by the Public Library to complete files.

Mrs. Frederica Whyte, librarian in charge of the material sought, said the missing issues of the magazine, "Worth While," published here between 1905 and 1928, are Vol. 8, no. 5; Vol. 9, no. 9; Vol. 10, no 1-10; Vol. 11, no. 1-10; Vol. 13, no. 11; Vol. 14, no. 3-8 and 10, 11; Vol. 15, no. 1 and 3-12.

City directories needed to round out the years between 1899 and the present are: 1901, 1903, 1908, 1910, 1934, 1946, 1947, 1949, 1950, 1956.

The magazine "Worth While," was originally published by the Shoreline Club. It was edited by D. M. Shreve. George Moyle, father of William Moyle who operates a print shop here, was printer-manager.

Persons wishing to present needed publicaions to library should call HE 7-0141.

Braces for Son Too High, AF Sergeant Makes Own

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE (AP) — Three years ago S. Sgt. Gordon E. Lenke looked at his infant son's feet and was startled to see that the toes didn't point straight ahead.

He was also surprised at the price — $30 to $50 — for braces used to correct pigeon-toed or slue-footed feet. And even if he could afford the price, the waiting list was long.

Lenke took scrap from a base metal shop and made a brace. And he kept at it until now he has made almost 300 braces for Air Force families free of charge.

"A young airman can't afford braces of this sort," the sergeant says. "That's almost half a month's pay."

His first son, Michael, now 3, is cured. It takes only about three months — thanks to the natural flexibility of young bones — of wearing the braces at night in bed to correct the malady.

'VOTESWAGON' TOUR BEGINS TUESDAY

It's a Bus, It's a Camper, It'll Carry a Crowd, but Now Has Other Duties

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Fairchild, of 5702 Belen St., bought one of those small family buses about a month ago.

It's one of those—that is—well, anyway it's of foreign manufacture and they expected lots of use from it because the makers claim it's very versatile, like carrying a large crowd of passengers, hauling all kinds of stuff, camping and so forth.

However, this one the Fairchilds bought — it's known by quite a popular German name—has been put to a use hardly anybody would expect.

It's been turned into a unique kind of a vehicle—a "Voteswagon." That's because Mrs. Fairchild is a busy worker in the Long Beach League of Women Voters and she is lending the new buggy to the league's voter-registration drive for the next couple of weeks.

Bedecked in posters and pennants, the wagon will go on tour with registration teams to encourage as many citizens as possible to exercise their franchise in the June primary election. The schedule:

Tuesday, American Gold Star Homes, Santa Fe Avenue and Spring Street, 4-6 p.m.; Friday, Orange Avenue and 20th Street, 3-5 p.m., and Hody's Parking Lot, Lakewood Center, 7-9 p.m.; April 7, Safeway parking lot, Atlantic Avenue and Anaheim Street, 4-6 p.m., and Thursday, April 9, Church of God, 1455 W. Willow Street, 3-5 p.m.

April 9 is the registration deadline.

Fire Victim Listed as 'Very Critical'

An Artesia gas station attendant who suffered second- and third-degree burns early Saturday when the station burst into flames was reported in "very critical" condition Saturday night at Long Beach Community Hospital.

Benjamin Shinnall, 21, of 22123 Arline St., who was rescued by a passing woman motorist, is under 24-hour care by a three-member team of private nurses, hospital aides said.

Shinnall was mopping with a cleaning solvent around 5:30 a.m. when the fire broke out, according to Lakewood sheriff's deputies. He was taken to the hospital by Mrs. Sandra Long, 30, of 5001 Los Coyotes Diagonal, Long Beach.

Mrs. Long told deputies she was passing the station at Norwalk Boulevard and Carson Street when she saw the victim enveloped in flames.

She took a blanket from her auto, rushed to him and wrapped him in it. Then, she said, "I took him to the first hospital I could think of."

The fire was attributed by sheriff's arson investigators to an open-flame gas heater which touched off the solvent Shinnal was using. The station was destroyed.

Dirty Face With a Heart of Gold $99 Pays All Cost

Nothin small about this lumbe-size 6 bdrm. home. This gem is located on a big hi-rise lot. Paint thirst exterior & interior. IF THIS 4 BURN. HOUSE COULD TALK, WE'D PROBABLY WASH IT'S MOUTH OUT WITH SOAP.

BUT BOY, WHAT A BUY! !

Big rambling kitchen must have once been a homemakers delight. There's loads of birch cabinets, double sinks & disposal. Plenty of family eating area, 4 big dirty bedrooms, loads of storage & closet space. Serviced by 2 baths. Wow! What a living room. Room for your Grand piano here, and look at this new wall to wall carpet, & floor to ceiling picture windows that look out to debris filled rear grounds. Basically this lumbo is in fine condition. Needs painting & decorating, old fashioned elbow grease. You do the work & the seller will pay your closing costs.

A SUNDAY CARSIDE CHAT
from RIDINGS
Long Beach's ONLY
Authorized CADILLAC Dealer
A penny saved is a penny earned — but you put it in the bank. MONEY SAVED in buying a used car sometimes is actually MONEY LOST. Sure, it is important to make a good a deal as you can, when buying, but spend your money wisely. You can always find a car CHEAPER somewhere, and UNfortunately for the buyer, it is CHEAPER. Inspect the local CADILLAC trade-ins on our lot before you make your purchase.

AT MAGNOLIA THEATER

Shakespier 6 Brawl Staged

By SAMUEL A. BOYEA

Magnolia Theater actors have a Pier 6 "brawl" (no Shakespearean pun intended) with "Taming of the Shrew"—the new production.

A brazen sop to male superiority, and replete with sub-plots, outrageous Shakespearean puns and sight gags, this low comedy caper demands broad playing to stand up today.

Pat Brown as director gives the play its due and in "the round" yet. The director also stars as Kate. With an Annie-Get-Your-Gun entry, the Tallulah-voiced star set the wild pace as the unreconstructed Kate who makes her seedy adventurer-suitor Petruchio (Robert Quarry) earn her love and full surrender the muscular way.

MRS. BROWN and Quarry have such a wild time "bulling" each other around that their brilliant interpretation might well be described as an Elizabethan prank of "brawn over broad" (oh! those infectious Shakespearean puns). Quarry may yet die of stage claustrophobia in the Magnolia's tiny quarters so broad and sweeping is his Petruchio style, but other than that one can't knock his truly professional performance. He appropriately accepts Kate's humiliating surrender with the silent eloquence and instant humility of the matinee idol who thanks his audience for making him the great star he undoubtedly is. Mrs. Brown made her speech on wifely duty sound lofty. Out of a less experienced reading it would be the dated nonsense we know it to be.

* * * *

A NUMBER of fine actors, sensitive to the Bard's better lines, back up Kate and Petruchio. That extraordinarily gifted young actor, Gil De Rush, makes a welcome return to the local boards as a handsome, eloquent Lucentio. Lewis Hammack as the "three-inch fool" could not be improved upon. Eric Lord (Baptista), Richard Moore (Vincentio), Nathan Adler (Gremio), Milt Kogan (Tranio) and Tom Lloyd (Biondello) also performed creditably.

As the servants, petite Karen Joyal and one Lana Biggs add much grace and charm to the show; as does Bianca, but we never got her name on our program.

Things Meshing for Dick Shawn

By EARL WILSON

NEW YORK — "I used to have very long hair," Dick Shawn said, pounding the table at the memory, "and they told me nobody would ever be a success with long hair.

"So a few months ago I got a crew cut. Now the crazy Beatles come along, so I got long hair again. The new thing has got to be something called 'the Crew Cut Quartet!'".

Dick Shawn is 34 and but for some bad breaks in the timing of his major efforts, should be in the world's Top 10 in talent. Suddenly everything is smashing and he may make it yet.

* * * *

WE WERE at 52nd and Broadway and the Dick Shawn name was very popular thereabouts. On the marquee at the Mark Hellinger, he was listed as the star of "A Funny Thing Happened to Me on the Way to the Forum," in the Colony Record Shop he was very large in the album displays, and at the Warner Theater you couldn't miss him in "It's a Mad, Mad, Mad, Mad World."

* * * *

SHAWN WAS in Las Vegas at the Thunderbird starring in two capsule versions of Broadway shows each night—"Anything Goes" and "High Button Shoes"—and occasionally doing his night club act on Saturday at the third show. This convinced him of his stamina, inasmuch as everybody'd told him it was an impossible assignment.

An offer came to take over Zero Mostel's part in "A Funny Thing."

THE BOX-OFFICE response has not been merely sensational but Producer Hal Prince has ticketed Dick to play the lead in a show "The Red Menace," which George Abbott talks of directing for next fall . . . all because he took the Zero role.

* * * *

TODAY'S BEST LAUGH: There's a new portable "reverse" TV set you take to the ballgame, says King Curtis. When the Mets play a dull game, you turn on the TV and watch what's happening at your neighborhood bar.

* * * *

WISH I'D SAID THAT: A beauty specialist claims he can tell a woman's age past 60 at a glance. That's what we call reading between the lines.—Hugh Allen.

* * * *

REMEMBERED QUOTE: "What this country needs is less public speaking and more private thinking." — Roscoe Drummond.

* * * *

EARL'S PEARLS: Description of a gabby gal: She can talk on and on about things that leave her speechless.

A B'way producer watched a new show and announced, "I like those songs except for two things—the words and the music." That's earl, brother.

Lakers Stay Alive, Pull Even in Playoff, 97-88

By DON HARDIN

Jerry West scored 39 points and Elgin Baylor chipped in with a usual Tick Tock performance Saturday as the golden pair propelled the Lakers to a 97-88 victory over the St. Louis Hawks before 13,862 fans at the L.A. Sports Arena.

The victory enabled the Lakers to remain alive in the NBA playoffs. It tied them with the Hawks at 2-2 in the best-of-5 series and they will play that decider in St. Louis, where they have lost five games in a row, Monday night. The contest will be telecast over KHJ (9) at 6:30.

Following some spotty officiating and then shrugging off the muscle of the Hawks the first three quarters, the Lakers, with West and Elgin leading the way in scoring and with Rudy LaRusso applying his own muscle against high-scoring Bob Pettit, the Lakers won in a romp.

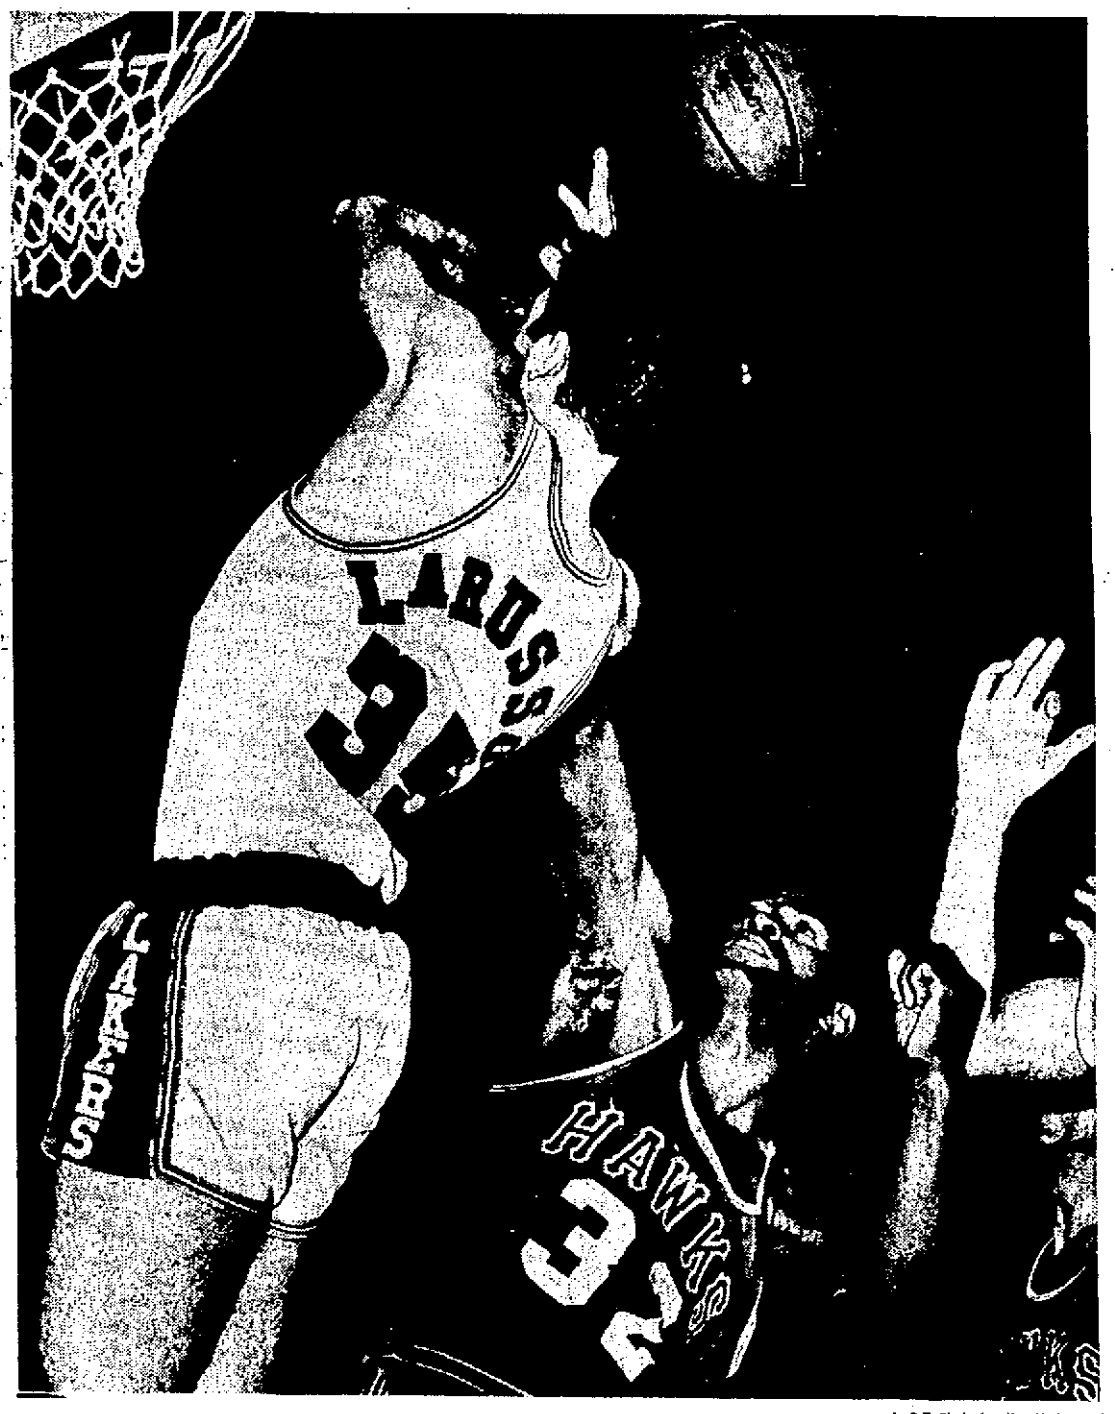

Baylor, held to two points the first half, came back with 18 in the final two periods and had 10 assists, more than any man on the court.

West was hurt in more ways than one throughout the game. He picked up four fouls early, got his fifth in the third quarter, and consequently played only 39 minutes. But he got a point for each of them.

West shot 13 good ones from the floor in 20 attempts and made 13 of 15 free throw tries. Elgin made 9 of 16 once he got untracked.

The game was extremely rough as had been the previous three playoff games between these teams. West was knocked down four times by big Bill Bridges and Pettit of the Hawks. But he didn't quit, nor did

EASTER SUNDAY PUNCH

Lakers' Rudy LaRusso (left) has no easy time going after rebound. St. Louis Hawks' Bill Bridges prefers to stay on floor and go after Rudy. No foul was called but LaRusso had last laugh. He got the ball.

'Tired' Bruins Lose, 76-59, to All-Stars

Hazzard Limited to Seven Points

EVANSVILLE, Ind. — Evansville's Jerry Sloan held UCLA's Walt Hazzard to seven points Saturday night as a collegiate Olympic tryout team trounced the Bruins, 76-59. The Uclans' all-America was hampered by a hip injury.

Manny Newsome of Western Michigan and Steve Thomas of Xavier led the way as the All-Stars began pulling ahead 54-52 with 9:46 to go.

UCLA reported understrength, particularly missing its leading rebounder, Keith Erickson, who didn't make the trip. Coach Johnny Wooden said his players were "just tired of basketball."

* * * *

WOODEN had only six of his own players to use, and he borrowed three Evansville College reserves for limited duty.

Thomas led the All-Stars with 14 points, while Sloan and Bill Cunningham of North Carolina each added 12.

DODGERS RELIEVED

Never Fear — Frank Is Here

VERO BEACH, Fla.—The real Frank Howard, pale and somewhat subdued, arrived in Dodgertown at 11:30 Saturday night and announced "I'm here to play."

Howard's first question as he emerged from a flight from Miami was, "Is there a midnight mass?" Howard planned to attend and said, "My preparation for baseball will start tomorrow."

Howard evaded the issue of his "personal problems" as much as possible. "I'll be honest with you gentlemen," he said. "This is no one's problem but my own. I would never intrude on another man's personal life."

* * * *

HOWARD'S reception committee included four reporters, a photographer, road secretary Lee Scott and trainer Wayne Anderson.

Anderson patted Howard's mid-section and exclaimed "Pretty good, Frank."

Howard said he is 15 pounds over his playing weight, but the same weight as last spring (255). "I haven't exercised since last October. In fact, I haven't given much thought to baseball. But I feel good and I'm here to play."

Howard said he has not discussed salary with general manager Buzzie Bavasi. Asked if he expects a raise from his $22,000 contract of last year, Howard said, "I think I deserve a raise."

Although the season opener is only 16 days away, Howard felt he would be ready. "Give me five days of batting practice and seven consecutive games, nine innings each, and I'll be ready for the season. If I'm not ready then, I never will be."

Howard still feels that he should play every day.

ANGELS DENY ANAHEIM DEAL

An Anaheim newspaper published a story Saturday saying the Angels baseball team will move to that Orange County city in 1966.

Gene Autry, chairman of the board for the baseball club, said there was "no truth to that report that Anaheim will get the Angels.

"We have negotiated with Long Beach and we've talked to Anaheim and other cities," Autry said. "True, we did meet with Anaheim officials last Saturday. They made proposals. However, we have not accepted."

The newspaper said a joint statement from local officials and the Angels' front office announcing completion of negotiations for the move, was expected momentarily. The newspaper said it learned from highly reliable local city officials that the board of directors of the American League team "unanimously and eagerly" approved the proposal at the Saturday meeting.

* * * *

ANOTHER ANGEL SPOKESMAN said the Angels were planning to move from Dodger Stadium after the 1964 and 65 seasons to "obtain our own personality," but said, "There's a possibility that we might go to any city that makes us a good offer."

The newspaper said "informed sources" in Anaheim said the city of Anaheim and Orange County were prepared to unveil plans to build a 50,000-seat stadium on a 135-acre site here.

It said the Angels would become known as the Southern California Angels.

LBSC Crew Shells 4 Foes in '64 Opener

6,000 Fans Watch as USC Distant 2nd

By DAVE TAYLOR

A precision Long Beach State College varsity rowing eight swept six giant boat-lengths closer to its Olympic Games target before 6,000 at the Southern California crew season opener at Marine Stadium Saturday.

Like an aloof beetle, the golden LBSC shell got up on eight legs and walked away from its brethren of USC, Oregon State University, San Diego State and Loyola, leading the pack by six lengths to the boathouse in its 1964 debut outing.

The Long Beach oarsmen took the 2,000-meter trip in six minutes, 32.2 seconds, better than 23 seconds faster than second-place USC.

Taking a fast start, the 49ers kept up a machine-gun pace over the first two-thirds of the course to leave plenty of open water astern.

Then they smoothed things out and were content to hold their lead breezily until coxswain Jim Whalen called for a final 40-yard sprint that left all comers a healthy hitchhiking distance behind.

* * * *

THE ONLY race among the varsity eights was for second place with everyone but Long Beach in the running as the other four boats nuzzled gunwales all the way. Only a last gasp five-yard sprint did the job to put USC over in the number two slot, a third of a boat length ahead of Oregon State.

The SC oarsmen covered the 2,000-meter course in 6:55.8, followed by Oregon State 6:56.3, San Diego 6:56.9 and Loyola 6:57.5.

Individual stars of the meet which pitted 300 crewmen from 17 rowing groups were 15-year-old Bruce May of Long Beach Rowing Assn. and Bill Jewell of the Olympic Games-bound California Kayak Club.

May took an early lead in the 150-pound singles and held it over the 2,000-meter course to score a half-length upset over the invincible 55-year-old "grand old man of rowing," Kearney Johnson from San Diego rowing club.

Jewell, national singles and doubles kayak rowing champion, racked up three consecutive victories as he did a 3:48 1,000-meter single sprint, a 1:21 500-meter single sprint, and teamed up with national No. 2 man Gert Grigoleit in a 5:14.4 1,000-meter doubles tilt.

* * * *

LONG BEACH State College's depth of top rowing talent became apparent in a regatta preliminary 2,000-meter tilt when the 49 varsity reserves shut down the USC reserves covering the course in 7:41.5, a little more than a minute worse than their first string did later in the day.

The 49ers' prospects looked even rosier when the freshmen eight took the 2,000 meters in 6:22.10, better than the varsity, to leave Loyola and San Diego second and third.

Winners in the 14 regatta events were:

1. Varsity Reserves—2,000 meters—
2. High School Heavyweights — 2,000 meters—Long Beach Rowing Assn.
3. Frosh Eights—2,000 meters — Long Beach, Loyola, San Diego.
4. K-1 Kayaks—1,000 meters—Bill Jewell, Bill Bragg.
5. Sea Scout Whale Boats—200 meters —Long Beach Venture, LB Dolphin, Newport Beach.
6. K-2 Kayaks—1,000 meters—Bill Jewell and Gert Grigoleit.
7. JV Eights—2,000 meters—San Diego State, Oregon State, Long Beach State.
8. Sr. Fours—2,000 meters—Lake Merritt RC, II, LMRC I, Long Beach Rowing Assn.
9. Sr. Singles—2,000 meters — Dolphin RC, LMRC
10. K-1 Kayaks—500 meters—Bill Jewell, Gert Grigoleit, Tom Young
11. Navy Whaleboats—1,000 meters — USS Isle Royale, USS Bryce Canyon.
12. College Fours—2,000 meters—USC, Long Beach, Orange Coast.
13. 152-Pound Singles—2,000 meters — Bruce May, Kearney Johnson.
14. Varsity Eights—2,000 meters—Long Beach, USC, Oregon State.

HERE'S WHAT DODGERS DO!

What Do They Do on a Rainy Day in Vero?

By GEORGE LEDERER
P-T Staff Writer

VERO BEACH, Fla.—What do they do on a rainy day in Vero?

No one appears to be particularly upset when traveling secretary Lee Scott delays the Dodgers' flight to Bradenton, at least an hour. It's raining at the A's training base and threatening here.

At 9 a.m. Dodgertown's main lobby resembles a Gardena card room at 9 p.m. A half-dozen bridge games are in progress and the pool table is crowded.

Don Drysdale, Johnny Podres and Lee Walls barely beat the breakfast hall closing time for a second cup of coffee. Rookie Bill Singer and Al Ferrara aren't as lucky. They're shut out and start the day without breakfast.

"I've finally got it made," announces Drysdale. "No more trips for me. I'm pitching here in my next three turns."

Drysdale's happiness is short-lived.

"Game's off," announces Scott.

"You lucky so-and-sos," moans Drysdale. "No game for you, but I've still got to pitch to Willie Davis in the cage."

One of the writers brings more bad news. "It's threatening to clear up," he says.

A quick poll shows the luckiest of all are Vin Scully, Jerry Doggett and others in the radio crew. They have the day off and head for the golf course.

Manager Walter Alston still doesn't trust the weather report. It calls for rain, but Alston brings the first dampener by ordering all players to report for a 12:30 intrasquad game.

Larry Sherry and Bob Miller couldn't care less. They've already finished their work, opposing each other in a morning game among minor league clubs.

Sherry has reason to smile for the first time this spring. "CG (complete game)," he announces as he enters the clubhouse, forming a zero with the thumb and index finger of his right hand. "Three-hit shutout, no walks," he elaborates.

"You're lucky," replies Miller. "I hit a shot and it was caught."

It's lunch time and Willie Davis samples from the relish tray. "How come they say carrots are good for your eyes?" He asks.

Sandy Koufax, quick as his fast ball, has the answer. "You've never seen a rabbit wearing glasses, have you?"

Drysdale has completed his batting practice assignment and zippers himself into a portable steam bath. It's the first time Drysdale has let off steam in a year.

Next to Drysdale, reclining on Doc (Wayne) Anderson's rubbing table, is a portly, bespectacled man, perhaps 40. If this man is a pitcher, or even an old one, the Dodgers are in bad shape.

It turns out the man does his best pitching with a wedge. He's Bob Rosburg, the pro golfer, here to be massaged into shape for the Masters tournament. . . . Pete Richert steps on the scales and deducts four pounds for the lead weight strapped to his left wrist.

"What's the strap do?" asks fellow lefthander Jim Brewer. "It straightens my arm," says Richert.

The two compare arms. "Look, his is straight," says Richert in amazement. "That's because I don't have a curve ball," says Brewer.

Brewer had a little of everything, however, in the ensuing squad game. In four innings he allowed one run, two hits and struck out four.

Ron Perranoski started and pitched four scoreless innings for the Durochers. But the Reisers didn't score, either.

"That starting is for the birds," the ace reliever shouts as he heads for the clubhouse. "No runs."

Drysdale, seated in the stands, fails to show sympathy. "You wouldn't believe me, huh?"

After eight innings, when each side had one run and four hits, general manager Buzzie Bavasi left in disgust.

"I'm going over to watch St. Petersburg and Santa Barbara. They hit the ball better than we do."

Bavasi didn't get the chance. A downpour halted activity for the day.

And the lobby again took on the Gardena flavor.

AAU Empire Rocked . . . Again

AAU officials, often the targets of justified barbs by newsmen, went down for the count of 10 last week during the National AAU Basketball Tourney in Denver, considered one of the last strongholds of the amateur dictators.

A blasting article by Leonard Cahn of the Rocky Mountain News—forwarded here by Don Muchmore, sponsor of the participating L.B. Opinion Research quintet—labeled the AAU Tournament "a bush league event, staged to perpetuate the Phillips 66 trade mark and to enlist enough pickup teams to fill out the field."

HANK HOLLINGWORTH

Cahn wrote "that by staging the tournament the Big Domes (AAU officials) manage to retain their front row seats in the International Basketball Federation and to continue enjoying junkets to the Olympic Games.

"The Big Domes and their cheerleaders have offered a lot of noise, but no substansive evidence to the contrary. Eliminate all pickup teams or teams dominated by players from 1964 college competition who take out AAU cards solely to play in the tournament and what legitimate AAU teams would you have left? Phillips, Goodyear and two or three others."

Cahn's point gained added stature when Akron Goodyear later nudged Phillips for the title.

In agreeing with Cahn, Muchmore declared: "Among the legitimate AAU teams is Opinion Research because its only addition was one man added halfway through the season, which was completely according to the rules. The rest of our team, except John Barnicoat, played with us from the very beginning which, except for the three you can add during the regional playoffs, is the way the rules read. That is the way I intend to continue playing whether we win or lose."

Of particular frustration to Muchmore, and possibly the factor which prompted Cahn's bombardment, was that the hometown Denver entry was a team made up completely of top area collegians but, as a team, had no record whatsoever as it was composed because it had not played a single AAU game!

Thus, instead of being a legitimate tourney for amateur clubs which have played as complete units through an entire season, the Denver event now is virtually a college all-star grab bag.

"THE BIG Domes remain in hibernation until it's time to buy a dozen or two basketballs and then pop up for four days," continued Cahn. "The Big Domes are living in the dear, departed past when they go around taking bows for U.S. basketball successes in the Olympic Games. You would think that, but for them, Uncle Sam would have been an also ran in the 1960 Games at Rome."

A long look at the record proves otherwise. Stars of the championship U.S. team were Oscar Robertson, Jerry West, Jerry Lucas, Walt Bellamy and Terry Dischinger. All came directly from college competition and not one ever had an AAU card in his life.

Players on the 1960 team from AAU competition were Bob Boozer, Les Lane, Burdy Halderson and Al Kelley. Boozer and Lane did make some contributions, but Halderson and Kelley saw little action.

In '56, the biggest guns for the U.S. at Melbourne were USF's Bill Russell and K. C. Jones, neither AAU men.

CAHN ASKS AND answers a question: Other than the Olympics, how has U.S. basketball fared in international competition with the Big Domes in the driver's seat?

Well, in the World Tournament last year, the U.S. team finished fourth with a 3-3 record and losses to Russia, Yugoslavia and Brazil.

"The Big Domes must take full responsibility for this humiliation," snorts Cahn. "They stutter and try to come up with alibis, but, nevertheless, are redfaced about the whole deal.

"Another indictment I make is that when AAU basketball became bare bones, the Big Domes changed the rules. This enabled AAU card bearers to switch teams for the National.

"This, in itself, was an admission from the Big Domes that the tournament had gone to pot."

AAU officials must have been shaken-up severely. They have been rapped in many quarters, but never before in their home basketball port of Denver!

THE BIG DOMES received a blast on the local scene, too. Writes Sam P., 2816 Del Amo, Lakewood:

"Congratulations to you. I thought for a moment that horrible excuse for a mile relay in the Indoor Games here was going unnoticed until I read your column and was overjoyed.

"I was at the meet and do you know that no apology was made to the crowd for the mistake those blundering idiots (AAU officials) made? Don't worry, though. I have a 4-year-old cousin who will be willing to count the laps next year."

Obviously, AAU officials are in a losing streak. Come to think of it, though, I can't recall when they've been on a winning binge.

AMALFITANO TO JOIN CUBS

As McBride Goes, So Do Sox

By ROSS NEWHAN
L. P-T Staff Writer

PALM SPRINGS—Which team has the Tony?

Unfortunately, the Red Sox had a pair of them Saturday and their bats took the curl out of two Art Fowler curves as Boston rallied for 11 runs in the final two innings for a 12-10 victory over the Angels.

Tony Conigliaro's three-run homer highlighted an eight-run eighth inning and Tony Horton's two-run homer in the ninth capped the Boston rally which first found the light of day with the Red Sox trailing, 10-1.

However, the Boston massacre could not dim another bright performance by Ken McBride, who will be littering D.C. Stadium in Washington with his "junk" when the curtain rises on the 1964 season April 13.

McBride coasted seven innings, his longest stint of the spring, and allowed only four hits and one unearned run. McBride's Cactus League earned run average is a distinguished 0.69 based on 25 innings during which he's yielded only two legit tallies.

"I could have gone nine innings today but why put a strain on my arm?" asked McBride.

From the very start, Saturday was an eventful day. General manager Fred Haney called a pre-game press conference and revealed that the contract of San Pedro's Joey Amalfitano was being returned to Tacoma and the Giants, in turn, were selling the 30-year-old infielder to the Chicago Cubs.

Haney also revealed that the contracts of catcher Jackie Moore and pitcher Leo Marentette were being transferred to Syracuse. Both were conditional purchases over the winter.

"We felt with Joe Koppe, Tom Satriano and Bobby Sadowski we have enough infield protection," explained Haney. "With the Cubs, Amalfitano will have an opportunity to win Ken Hubbs' second base position and play regularly."

For the first seven innings of Saturday's contest the Red Sox must have wondered if the Yankees hadn't exchanged their pin stripes for halos and were vacationing in the West. Ace Bill Monbouquette was bombed for 13 hits and 10 runs in five innings.

* * * *

JIM FREGOSI, who lost his glove prior to the game, fortunately had his bat under lock and key and brought it forth to smash a homer, triple and single. He's batting .364. Keystone partner Bobby Knoop drove in three runs with two singles and is batting a startling .420.

A young man named Hal Green motored up from Indio where he is training with Hawaii and produced three of the Angels' 16 hits. He brought an overnight case and will be seen in left field again today.

Held in check by McBride, Boston battered Danny Osinski into submission in the eighth.

ANGEL ANGLES: President Robert Reynolds called the Angels' press corps together prior to the game to discuss the "preposterous" rumor Casey Stengel would become the club's proxy . . . Reynolds' statements were a repeat of what the ex-Stanford football great had told the I. P-T Friday . . . "Gene and I have never discussed the possibility of divesting ourselves of the presidency," reiterated Reynolds . . . "In September we extended Fred Haney's contract through 1965," said Autry. "That would seem a ridiculous move if we didn't have the highest confidence in Fred. In fact, he has far exceeded the original confidence we placed in him." . . . "I certainly wouldn't have signed a long term contract if I thought at all that I might retire in the next year or two," said Haney.

Turley, the ex-Yankee and Angel, opined that Yogi Berra wouldn't have any problems handling the Yankees. . . . "I wish I had his problems," said Turley. "I think he might have made a mistake by hiring Whitey (Ford) as his pitching coach. This is a much tougher job than I ever anticipated and I can't help but feel that coaching will have an effect on Ford's pitching. I think he'll find it impossible to forget his coaching problems when he takes the mound."

KTLA director Don Patton revealed that the Angels and Giants had a TV rating of 14 last Sunday. . . . "That means we went into about 378,000 homes," said Patton.

Koppe was struck over the left eye by a thrown ball prior to the game. . . . Ice reduced the swelling and Koppe will be available for action today when Barry Latman faces Earl Wilson. . . . Albie Pearson was bedded again Saturday by the flu. . . . Ed Kirkpatrick had the seven stitches removed from his middle finger Saturday but it will be at least one week before Spanky will be able to grip a bat.

Umpire Carl Zimmerman tells Compton coach Tommy Upton not where to go, but where the ball went after batter Brian Sullivan hit one over first base. Evesdropping catcher is Long Beach City College's Ron Johnston. Batboy is identified only as "Freddie." LBCC won, 11-2, to nab third place in tourney.

HOWARD--

"What kind of a player would I be if I didn't want to? I think on the basis of my four half-seasons with this club I deserve a full-time shot. I can't do any more than I've done the last four years to show them I want to play."

Howard concluded the interview by saying, "It's not a matter if I want to play, I've got to."

Golfer Beard Much Improved

LOUISVILLE (AP) — Professional golfer Frank Beard's condition was described Saturday as greatly improved.

His physician said Beard was out of a coma and his condition was good.

He was hospitalized Thursday after he slipped into a coma with a brain inflammation.

However, a neuro-surgeon said the 24-year-old winner of last year's Frank Sinatra Open would be hospitalized for some time.

Threesome Shares Virginia Sweepstakes

Jim Nagle, Art Macrate and Dr. William K. Riddell scored low net honors Saturday during Virginia Club's weekly sweepstakes.

Class B: Dr. William K. Riddell, 90-24—66; tie among Howard Day, 94-25—69; Dr. Bill Cheney, 88-19—69; Earl Fast, 85-16—69. Blind bogey (75)—Stan Williamson, Ed Brain, Dr. Milo Ellik, Sam Samuelson.

OCC Wins Easter Title; Goldberg-Led Vikes 3rd

By GARY RAUSCH

Orange Coast won the Easter Baseball Tournament Saturday, downing defending champion San Diego, 5-1, and Alan Goldberg earned himself a job with Long Beach City College off his performance in the Vikings' 11-2, third place victory over Compton.

OCC staked Dale Townsend to a 3-0 first inning lead and Townsend reciprocated with a neat six-hitter that held the Knights scoreless until the eighth.

* * * *

GOLDBERG, the speedy Lakewood High product, couldn't report to Bill Hatch until basketball season concluded and then was delegated to the junior varsity. He was brought up to replace the injured John Kalench during the tourney.

Saturday Goldberg tripled, singled twice, scored four runs, stole third base and was flawless in the field. His triple and Bart Hammer's single started LBCC's scoring in the first inning.

He led off the fifth with a single to center and went all the way to third on Hammer's liner to left. The fast-starting shortstop was halfway to the plate on the suicide squeeze when Chuck Williamson ripped the ball to center for a two-run single.

Williamson's grand-slam homer to center in the eighth added the frosting to Jim Parks' victory cake, his fourth of the year. It also gave Williamson six RBI for the day.

The afternoon also saw Don Keel, the Vikings' leading hitter last season break out of a slump that had seen him go hitless in his last 20 at bats. The big redhead tripled and singled twice, driving in Rich Lawrence in the fifth.

NOT OLD, FAT OR LONELY

Umpires Almost Like People

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP)—Lou DiMuro is a 31-year-old bachelor learning the transportation business in New York. Paul Pryor is the new basketball coach at Dominican College in Racine, Wis. Ed Sudol is the manager of a shopping plaza in Deland, Fla.

They're also umpires.

And they're not lonely.

Along with men like Vinnie Smith and Joe Paparella, they are articulate spokesmen for their profession who insist that umpires have no more problems or any less laughs than scientists, salesmen or laborers. They do admit, however, that the problems involved may be unusual.

* * * *

"THE GENERAL impression of an umpire," said DiMuro, "is that he's an old, fat man on the way out. That's not true. We have to be physically fit and mentally aware. We don't just stand out there like a lot of people think. There's a lot of pressure on us.

"But it has its rewards," he continued. "An umpire's salary is above average and we can increase our income working during the off-season. And we're fortunate to be associated with a business that has been above reproach as long as I've been in it."

DiMuro, however, doesn't minimize the problems.

"It's a different life than a ball player's, even though we're in the same business," he said. "They're in the spotlight and we're in the background. They get applause when they do a good job; we just get silence."

Pryor said he not only had to place restrictions on his weight because he is an umpire, but on his activities.

"There's certain places you can go to, some places you shouldn't go to and a lot of places you can't go to," he said. "And without your family you can't be seen in a lot of places because people are liable to talk.

"But I don't think we ever get lonely. There's a lot of places we can go and a lot things we can do. Most of us spend a lot of time together. We watch television and shoot the bull."

"We're like four married people," said Sudol, talking about the regular team during the season. "We travel in a group and we all have the same interests. We make a nice happy team. I think that's good."

Eye-Popping Scoreboard Waiting

NEW YORK (UPI)—Any time New York Met fans grow weary of watching their heroes perform on the field, they can look at pin-up pictures on their new scoreboard in Shea Stadium.

Among the features of the new installation now being put in place will be a 24-foot projection screen on top of the scoreboard which will flash color pictures of each player as he comes to bat. Color motion pictures also can be shown to the entire stadium through the "Photorama" screen.

The scoreboard, designed by General Indicator Corporation, will stand 20 feet off the ground, measure 40 by 136 feet and weigh over 60 tons. A white shell surrounding the back of the main unit will tower higher than a seven-story building.

Color spotlights, activated by musical tones, will flash animated colors across the shell in recognition of outstanding plays and also to provide between-inning attractions.

Approximately 28,000 lamps will be used for the scoreboard and the electrical power could provide full electrical service for about 50 homes. Approximately 80 miles of wiring will be used.

* * * *

THE SCOREBOARD will contain such usual information as game details and scores of all other major league games in progress. The board can easily be converted for football use.

In addition to the main board, two synchronized auxiliary scoreboards will be placed on opposite sides of the field.

Giants Pound 6th Straight Victory, 7-4

5 Games Rained Out in Florida

Compiled From Wire Reports

Five major league baseball exhibition games were scrubbed Saturday when rain hit Florida's Grapefruit circuit, but out in Arizona the San Francisco Giants followed the sun to their sixth consecutive win, 7-4 over the Cleveland Indians.

Pittsburgh benefited from eight unearned runs in a 16-6 decision over Houston in Fort Myers, Fla., while Washington blanked the Baltimore B team, 6-0, in Pompano Beach, Fla.

The Giants rammed in three runs in the eighth inning for their victory. Indian hurler Peter Ramos was the victim, surrendering four hits in the outburst, including a key triple to Jesus Alou, his third hit.

* * * *

DON LEPPERT hit two homers, Chuck Hinton and Bill Skowron one each and the Senators' Claude Osteen pitched six shutout innings against the Orioles B team.

Six Houston errors led the way to all the Pittsburgh runs at Fort Myers. Jim Wynn had two homers for the losers.

INDOOR RODEO PRIMER

Here's Test of Your Cowboy IQ

By AL LARSON

Are you as smart answering rodeo questions as you were at figuring out the Army's math quiz that stumped heavyweight boxing champion Cassius Clay?

No doubt you rattled off last Sunday's five-question session in a matter of seconds. Try these 10 terms for size since they'll pop up at all five performances of the Pacific Indoor Rodeo which gets under way Thursday night at the Long Beach Arena:

Q. Hooey?

A. A wrap around any three feet and a half-hitch used in calf roping as opposed to the usual method of tying calves with two wraps and a half-hitch.

Q. Lap and tap?

A. A lap and tap start occurs when the steer or calf is released from the chute without a head start on the roper or steer wrestler.

Q. Hazer?

A. A cowboy who rides along beside a steer on the opposite side from the steer wrestler to keep the steer from running away from the steer wrestler's horse.

Q. Go-round?

A. That part of a rodeo that is required to allow each contestant to compete on one head of stock. The number of go-rounds in a rodeo may vary from one in a small one-day contest to as many as seven or more.

Q. Fishing?

A. A common expression used in rodeo when the roper has thrown at an animal but has missed, and then by accident, or by flipping the rope, turns it into a legal catch.

Q. Barrier?

A. A rope stretched across the front end of the box from which the roper's or steer wrestler's horse comes when the barrier flagman drops the flag.

Q. Breaking the barrier?

A. If the contestant rides through or breaks the barrier before it is released a penalty of 10 seconds is added to his time.

Q. Flank (or flank strap)?

A. A sheepskin lined strap with a self-holding buckle passed around the flank of the bronc or brahma bull that is pulled tight as the animal leaves the chute. In an effort to get rid of the flank strap, the stock bucks higher and harder.

Q. No time?

A. When a flag fieldman waves "no time" it means that the contestant has not caught or thrown his animal properly.

Q. Pickup man?

A. A mounted cowboy who helps the rider off a bronc when the ride is completed.

If you answered 9 of the 10, you rate as an expert cowboy. Eight is good, seven is fair, but if you missed five or more, you'd better arrive early at the Arena and conduct your own question session with one of the contestants.

Denver Rips Blades, 8-2

DENVER — The Denver Invaders crushed the Blades, 8-2, in one of their roughest games of the season Saturday night to even their semifinal Western Hockey League playoff series at one victory each.

The teams move to Los Angeles for the next three games in the best-of-seven series, beginning Monday night, and return to Denver if necessary next Saturday night to wind it up. Los Angeles won the first game Wednesday night, 7-3.

The Invaders, who won the Governor's Cup in a runaway in the regular season play, returned to form. They yielded the first goal of the game to Los Angeles' Jim Baird, then ran up a 7-1 lead before the Blades could connect again on Bob Solinger's goal early in the last period.

* * * *

THE GAME was a near donnybrook from start to finish. A final tally showed an hour and 24 minutes in penalty time charged, including three major infractions and a bench penalty against Los Angeles for delay of game late in the final period.

Three Invaders scored two goals each: Freddy Hucul, Marlin Margetta and Marty Howe, all defensemen. Denver's first five goals were scored by defensemen.

A crowd of 3,782 watched the game at University of Denver Arena.

Cincy-76er Semi-Final Series Tied

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Big Connie Dierking came off the bench Saturday night to spark Philadelphia to a 129-120 victory over Cincinnati and tie the National Basketball Association Eastern Division semi-finals.

The victory enabled the 76ers to tie the Royals at two wins each and set the stage for the deciding game tonight in Cincinnati.

Dierking scored 21 points, his season's high, to lead Philadelphia to the victory. He got 15 of his points in the second half when the 76ers moved ahead in a tight game.

* * * *

TRAILING by 61-60 at halftime, the 76ers rallied for a 73-73 tie with 7:11 remaining in the third quarter. They went ahead to stay on a drive-in basket by Hal Greer with seven minutes remaining in the third quarter.

Greer finished with 22 points to lead the 76ers while Oscar Robertson took game scoring honors with 31 points. Substitute Tom Hawkins added 25 for the Royals.

Miguel in Tee Lead

LIMA, Peru (AP)—Sebastian Miguel of Spain regained the lead from Doug Sanders of Denver in Lima's international golf tourney by shooting a six-under-par 66 in the third round Saturday.

Ashe Falls to Ralston in Two Sets

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP)—Hard-hitting Dennis Ralston and defending champion Charles Pasarell advanced Saturday into the finals of the Phoenix Thunderbird tennis tournament.

Ralston, the nation's second-ranked player and the tourney's second seed, overwhelmed fourth-seeded Arthur Ashe of UCLA, 6-2, 6-4, with a booming serve and strong court game.

Pasarell, a UCLA student from San Juan, Puerto Rico, outlasted stubborn Greg Grant of Phoenix, 13-11, 6-4. In Friday's quarterfinals Pasarell, seeded eighth, eliminated the nation's top-ranked netter, Chuck McKinley, in straight sets.

Two San Francisco girls, Mimi Arnold and Janie Albert, will meet today for the women's title.

NHL Owner Fined

MONTREAL (AP)—Clarence Campbell, president of the National Hockey League, said Saturday he had fined William Jennings, president of the New York Rangers, $500 for invading a referee's dressing room.

Maple Leafs Square Stanley Cup Series

MONTREAL (AP)—Red Kelly and Frank Mahovlich collaborated on back-to-back goals in the first period and the Toronto Maple Leafs defeated the Montreal Canadiens 2-1 Saturday night to square their Stanley Cup semifinals series at one victory each.

Kelly, a 36-year-old veteran appearing in his 130th postseason game, and super-star Mahovlich each scored during a four-minute span. The Leafs, defending Cup champions, held on behind Johnny Bower's brilliant goaltending.

Jean Beliveau thwarted Bower's shutout bid when he scored the Canadiens' goal on a second-period power play.

The best-of-seven games series shifts to Toronto for Tuesday's third contest as well as games 4 and 5.

Jankowski Leading Gentleman in WHL

DENVER (UPI)—Lou Jankowski, leading scorer for the Denver Invaders and league-leader in goals scored, was named winner of the Fred J. Hume trophy Saturday as the most gentlemanly player in the Western Hockey League.

Jankowski was charged with five minor penalties for a total of only 10 minutes in the penalty box.

Shubert Takes Dragster Title

Zane Shubert of Newport Beach drove the Shubert-Herbert Chevrolet fuel dragster to top eliminator honors Saturday night at Lions Drag Strip before 4,850 fans.

Shubert defeated Larry Faust, driving the Long Beach entry of Mooneyham-Ferguson-Jackson which in the semifinal bracket had turned back the formidable Chris Karamasines of Chicago with his 'Chizler.'

Results: Top eliminator (fuel)—Shubert-Herbert 8.03 et and 187.88 mph. Elapsed time—7.95 by Shubert-Herbert and Stellings-Hampshire (deadheat). Top speed—193.64 mph Stellings-Hampshire. Top eliminator (gas)—Danny Ongais 8.57 and 169.81 over John Mitchell. Top eliminator $500 (fuel)—Warren-Coburn-Warren won on single run, other failed to fire.

Thai Wins Badminton

SAN DIEGO (UPI)—Channarong Ratanaseanguang of Thailand Saturday captured the men's singles badminton championship of the United States by defeating Jim Poole of San Diego 15-12,17-14.

Hayes Runs 8.7, Comes Up Short

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP)—Bob Hayes, world's fastest human, broke the nine-second mark in what was supposed to be the hundred-yard dash in the 14th annual Florida A and M relays Saturday.

Two officials recorded Hayes time across the tape as 8.8 and a third recorded 8.7. But the run measured only 94 yards.

BENEFIT GAME

Feller to Hurl Again, Face Williams, Musial

WINTER PARK, Fla. (UPI)—Former Cleveland Indians star and Hall of Fame member Bob Feller is scheduled to test his right arm Monday against two other former major league greats.

FELLER

Feller, Stan Musial and Ted Williams are among the stars scheduled to participate in the opening-day activities of the Rollins College Invitational baseball tournament.

Proceeds from the first day of the week-long tourney will go to the United States Baseball Federation to help finance the sending of a team of college and amateur baseball players to Japan this summer to play several exhibition games during Olympic Games.

The tourney gets under way with a game between Colby and Davidson, followed by one between Duke and Rollins.

Between the games Monday, Feller will pitch to Musial and Williams.

INJURED HAND BLESSING IN DISGUISE

Besselink Real Swinger, Shoots 65

WILMINGTON, N. C. (UPI)—Al Besselink, now a swinger instead of a puncher, stroked out a seven-under-par 65 Saturday to take the 36-hole lead in the $20,000 Azalea Open golf tournament with a two-round 135.

The big, curly-haired blond from Merchantsville, N. J., who said an injured hand had forced him to sophisticate his swing, came within two strokes of tying the record at the Cape Fear Country Club.

He was nine under par after 36 holes.

Besselink was one stroke better than Bob Gajda of Bloomfield Hills, Mich.

"I used to be a puncher," said Besselink, obviously pleased with his performance. "Look at my hands. They are soft as a violin players. They used to be calloused because I'd grip the club as hard as I could. But not any more. Now I'm a swinger, not a puncher."

The only flaw in his game came on the eighth green where he overshot and then missed a six-foot putt for a bogey—the only bogey of his round. To offset that his card showed eight birdies that came on putts of six, three, three, 15, one, three, 30 and 30 feet.

Joe Campbell, in losing the lead, said, "It just wasn't my day." Five times, he said, his putts hit the cup only to roll around the rim and fail to sink.

Besselink had hurt his hand when his club head struck a tree root.

Besselink was off the tour for the past three years while serving as a club pro at the Philmont Country Club in Philadelphia but returned by entering the Los Angeles Open this year. His last tourney win was the 1957 Kansas City Open.

Besselink picked up $1,000 for being the second round winner and leader after 36 holes.

the Lakers. Nor did LaRusso.

Pettit scored 23 points against LaRusso while the latter recorded 10 points and 8 rebounds. Pettit did have 12 rebounds, but only ONE assist. Compare that to Baylor.

Coach Fred Schaus of the Lakers said, "West's game was tremendous but the son of a gun still gave away 10 points by throwing the ball away. Although we've lost five games in a row in St. Louis, I think we've played well there and we have a good chance on Monday."

The Lakers managed a 23-23 first-quarter tie against the rough-and-tumble Hawks, fell back by eight at halftime, but burst through with a 34-point effort in the third and maintained an easy advantage therein.

This is the third time that West has scored 39 points against St. Louis during the season.

Anyway, today it's West; Monday it's Midwest and, from there, who knows?

During the half-time intermission, Frank Selvy, popular back-court star of the Lakers for many years, was honored.

He retires at the end of this season and will become an assistant coach at his alma mater, Furman, where he once scored 100 points in a single game.

The first two games of the Western Division finals will be played in San Francisco Wednesday and Friday.

The Lakers, not even counting the playoff games to date, have once again set an all-time NBA home attendance record. Last season's total was 285,462. This season they drew 322,311.

It's What They Say for Pay That Counts

Salaries and purse money in sports are getting bigger and bigger each year. But in many cases they are incidental to the earning power of a top athlete, whose name can bring a small fortune in endorsements, personal appearances and the many business opportunities available to sports leaders.

Most of your veteran athletes who have wisely taken advantage of the opportunities have become independently wealthy.

Mickey Mantle, Roger Maris and Whitey Ford of the New York Yankees have been cashing in heavily the past few years. In fact, all of your name baseball stars do all right for themselves.

ARNOLD PALMER
$400,000 a Year Business

There probably are 40 ballplayers whose salary and outside income surpasses $100,000 a year. Willie Mays, of course, is the highest paid —salarywise. He gets $105,000 a year. Mantle gets $100,000 and Warren Spahn $85,000.

After them, there are 60 to 75 more whose supplementary earnings put them in the $75,000 bracket, while another 30 or 40 are good for $50,000.

Arnold Palmer was known as a "400,000-a-year business" when he was winning only around $50,000 in golfing prize money annually. Now he can count on more than double that amount from all his various enterprises. Jack Nicklaus rapidly is getting into that bracket, too.

Usually, for every dollar the average professional athlete earns in salary or prize money, he can make another dollar from endorsements, personal appearances and business opportunities.

THE LARGER A PERFORMER'S salary or purse, of course, the greater the opportunity to cash in on outside money and investments.

Athletes attract a high number of wealthy businessmen who are constantly giving them financial opportunities on a platter merely for the privilege of being in their company.

From a salary standpoint, the top paid athletes are the heavyweight fighters who fight for the world championship.

No other sports figures made more directly from competition last year than Sonny Liston and Floyd Patterson.

This year, Liston and Cassius Clay will top the list. In fact, if they fight again before January 1, Sonny's net take will be in the neighborhood of $1.5 million AFTER all the people who cut into his purses get their payoffs.

Clay, meanwhile, will collect around $1 million . . . if he fights again this year. Of that sum, $500,000 will go to him outright and another several thousand dollars into a trust fund.

MEANWHILE, HERE IS a rundown of the top salaries in some of the professional sports:

Basketball—Wilt Chamberlain makes in the neighborhood of $75,000 plus bonuses. Elgin Baylor collects $52,000; Oscar Robertson and Bill Russell are in the $40,000 bracket, while Jerry West gets $37,500. Another couple of dozen make over $20,000.

Football—Jimmy Brown is the top paid player at $50,000 . . . but reportedly will ask $75,000 for next season. Other high salaries go up to $40,000—mainly for quarterbacks.

Ice hockey—Highest paid performer is Gordie Howe of the Detroit Red Wings, who gets around $31,000 a year. Two others get as much as $25,000.

Golf—Five players won more than $50,000 in official money last year with Palmer and Nicklaus both going over the $100,000 mark. In golf, more than any other sport, "unofficial" money mounts up fast. Perhaps as many as 40 to 50 touring pros will pick up $50,000 a year . . . and the others from $20,000 to $50,000. A club pro at a busy course can make over $25,000.

BOWLING—Don Carter was the first man in his sport to make $100,000 in a single year, but he was joined by a half-dozen others the past year.

Wrestling—Many performers, as many as 30 or so, make over $50,000 annually.

Pro tennis—Prize money fell off the past year, but about eight performers still made well over $20,000 plus "extras." Ken Rosewall was top man with around $30,000 plus an estimated $20,000 in side money.

Horse racing—As many as 15 to 20 riders will make in excess of $200,000 a year. Willie Shoemaker is good for around $400,000. Top jockeys usually get extra fees in many cases plus 10 percent of the purse money. Another 100 or so jockeys will make between $50,000 and $100,000 annually . . . while any jockey who can ride regularly on as few as 100 cards a year will make over $25,000.

Thus, many of the sports world's tiniest athletes can make more money than all but the heavyweights in boxing.

Browns Sign Bradley Star

CLEVELAND (AP) — Lavern Tart of Bradley University, one of the nation's top collegiate basketball stars, has signed with the Cleveland Browns.

Tart, who is 6-foot-2 and weighs 202 pounds, was selected as the most valuable player in the recent National Invitational Tournament in New York.

The Browns said he will be tested primarily at defensive halfback, but also is a possibility as an offensive end.

Hardwick Winner

PONTIAC, Mich. (UPI) — Billy Hardwick of San Mateo, Calif., whipped fellow California Ed Bourdase of Fresno, 213 to 196, Saturday to capture the $4,000 first prize in the $16,000 North American PBA Open bowling tournament.

500,000 SEE ROWING WIN BY CAMBRIDGE

LONDON (UPI) — Cambridge University's "North American engine room," consisting of a giant American and an even bigger Canadian, poured on its power all the way to crush Oxford by 6½ lengths Saturday in the 110th annual boat race between the two schools.

A crowd of 500,000 lined the shores of the Thames River to watch the classic while Princess Margaret and her husband, Lord Snowden, a former Cambridge coxswain, followed the race in a launch.

With John Kiely of Woodside, Calif., and John Lecky of Vancouver, B.C., a pair of six-foot, four-inch oarsmen who swing the big sweeps like matchsticks, rowing so strongly that the coxswain said, "I thought they were going to pull us right out of the water." Cambridge led all the way in the four-mile, 374-yard test.

49ers Second at Claremont

CLAREMONT—Long Beach State's John Rambo set a meet record and the 49er relay teams won three events Saturday but San Diego edged LBSC for team championship of the Claremont-Mudd Relays.

Rambo cleared 6-9 in the high jump while Jim Richardson took second in the 100 (10.0), Gary Gaudet third and Bob Armstrong fifth. Kent Parson pole vaulted 14-0 for a third.

Jack Rose had winning relay teams in the 2-mile (7:48.4), 440 (42.1) and distance medley (10:22.2).

Senate Seeks to Link Carbo With Cassius

Liston's Pre-Fight Payoff Studied

WASHINGTON (AP)—Senators probing the controversial bout in which Cassius Clay won the heavyweight championship from Sonny Liston headed in a new direction Saturday.

Sen. Kenneth B. Keating, R-N.Y., asked the investigators to determine if associates of Frankie Carbo, former underworld czar of boxing now in prison, were in the Florida training camps of both Clay and Liston.

Keating, a member of the Senate antitrust subcommittee staging the boxing inquiry, offered sworn testimony about a meeting of Carbo here in Washington six years ago with fight world figures as a probable clue.

* * * *

ONE OF those present was said to be Sam Margolis, Philadelphia vending machine operator and long-time associate of Liston to whom Liston gave without payment some $100,000 worth of shares in the promotions corporations.

"I am informed that there is some additional evidence stemming from New York investigations linking the figures in the Clay-Liston fight with the Carbo combine," Keating said, adding:

"I think it is most essential that we discover whether Frank Carbo has reached out from behind prison bars and placed his cohorts in both the Liston and Clay camps."

Sen. Philip A. Hart, D-Mich., chairman of the Senate panel, will resume public hearings Monday on the Clay-Liston bout.

Carbo is now serving a 25-year prison term in the state of Washington for extortion.

Trojans Roll Over Oxy at Coliseum

Occidental's Mike Johnson cleared 15-10 in the pole vault, but the University of Southern California racked up an easy 111-34 track and field victory over the Tigers in the Coliseum Saturday.

The Trojans, last year's national champions, took first place in 15 of the 17 events.

USC's Wellesley Clayton broke the oldest meet record on the books when he turned in a long jump of 25-5. He broke the record which had been set in 1931 by more than a foot.

The USC frosh downed the Tigers, 90-51.

FREEMAN FLIES IN TRIPLE JUMP

Poly Boy Sets National Mark

By DOUG IVES

Little Larry Freeman bettered a national record and didn't know it, Earl McCullough continued his masterful timber topping and Poly High's track titans kept on winning.

That was the story, or most of it, in the National Record Relays at Bellflower on a warm Saturday afternoon that produced six meet records and Freeman's effort in the seldom-held triple jump.

The 5-8, 132-pound junior hopped, stepped and jumped 46 feet, ¾-inch to at least temporarily claim to be the best prep triple jumper in the nation.

Not to minimize his performance, but the event is just coming into popularity in U.S. high schools and few think Freeman's record application will be ruled upon before someone jumps further.

Freeman didn't know of his record until it was announced publicly.

With a high jump victory at 6-2 to boot, Freeman shared the Earl Ray Memorial Trophy as the meet's top competitor with Ray Felix, who knocked eight seconds off his own mark in the steeplechase.

How much consideration was given to McCullough is not known, but the super senior soared over the low hurdles in a record 18.6, tied the high hurdles standard at 14.3, triple jumped 45-7¾ for third place and anchored Poly's second-place finishing 440 relay team.

He was the top point-grabber for the Rabbits, who outscored chief nemesis Muir, 43-37, by unofficial count. No award is given to the high-point team.

Marv Motley was the other Poly winner, long jumping 23-1½, two inches shy of the record. The defending CIF champ was in fine form, exceeding 22 feet on all seven tries.

Known for their speed, the Hares could gain only nine points with a second, fourth and three fifths in relay races. But McCullough, Freeman, Motley and soph shotputter John Hubbell (55-3¾) and high hurdler Ron Wilson (14.7) combined for 34 points.

Poly's city rival, Wilson, had a good day, too. The Bruins picked up 11 points for a seventh-place finish. They came in second in both the distance medley and 8-man mile.

Bob Deeds' strong anchor leg sparked the mile relay, while Doug Lofgren, Rob Russell, Jim Druckenmiller and Hartzell Alpizar teamed for runner-up honors in the other race.

Millikan won a second in 4-man, 4-mile with Tom Welte, Ralph Spicer and Jim Busher clocking around 4:36 and Charles Webb 4:29.0.

Surprise loser was Warren's Paul Wilson, who could only climb over 14 feet in the pole vault and had to settle for second place behind Buena's Tom Dullam (14-5¼).

TRACK ROUNDUP

Uelses Climbs Record 16-1¼ in Easter Relays

Compiled from Wire Reports

John Uelses cracked his own Santa Barbara Easter Relays pole vault record Saturday by clearing 16-1¼ to better by one inch the altitude he reached when he became the first man to exceed 16 feet in the pole vault in 1962.

Hard-luck youngster was Charlie Craig of Fresno State who bettered the American collegiate triple-jump record with a leap of 52-1½.

But the wind gauge was in operation on the opposite side of the field and it's doubtful a national record will be approved.

Dave Davis of the Camp Pendleton Marines beat out Parry O'Brien by one-quarter inch with a throw of 60-10¼.

In the San Diego Relays, Jim Grelle of the L.A. Track Club ran 4:01.3, the fastest outdoor mile of the season, and Dyrol Burleson won the 3,000 meters in 8:06.9.

Jerry Siebert returned to action after nearly a two-year absence and captured the half-mile in 1:50.2 in a non-scoring track and field meet on the California oval.

Cal sprint ace Forrest Beaty was a member of the winning 440-yard relay; finished second in 100 in 9.8; won the 220 in 21.6; and then ran a leg on the winning mile-relay team.

Distance-runner Ben Tucker, with wins in the mile and two-mile runs, led San Jose State to an 85-60 triumph over Stanford.

Tucker ran the mile in 4:05.2 and came back with an 8:57.2 clocking in the two mile.

Freshman Del McNabb of LSU broke the national freshman javelin mark in the LSU invitational track meet at Baton Rouge.

McNabb hurled the javelin 252-4.

Gerry Moro's record-breaking pole vault leap of 15-4, backed up by Martin Frank's second-place effort, gave Oregon's highly-favored Webfoots the edge they needed to fight back the challenge of Oregon State and Washington State and win the Far West Relays at Seattle.

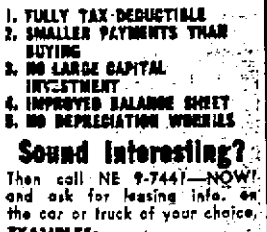

DUFFER BAGS BASS INSTEAD OF BIRDIE

PANAMA CITY, Fla. (AP) —What Dr. Harry Goldner wanted when he played the seventh hole at the Panama City Country Club was a birdie.

What he got was a fish. Goldner, a visitor from Birmingham, Ala., hooked an iron shot into a lake Friday and his ball struck a three-pound bass swimming near the surface.

He lost the ball, but he recovered the stunned fish and had it baked for his dinner.

Fishin' Around

By DONNELL CULPEPPER

Repeat of Grunion Guessing Game

If you can pick the right spot on the right beach at the right time on the right night, you may be able to solve the grunion mystery and have a delightful fish dinner. Tonight's the night for another round of grunion runs—four of them, but only three are legal. The fourth is in April, and both April and May are closed months.

April and May are the peak spawning months and the Department of Fish and Game protects the tiny, silvery fish as a conservation measure. Open season resumes in June and the first four-night run is scheduled for June 11.

Back to tonight's run: it is scheduled for 10 to 11 o'clock. Monday's run is due at 10:30 p.m. for an hour. Tuesday's is slated for 11:30 p.m. and, naturally it runs into the wee hours of April 1. I don't think that any DFG warden is going to show at such a ghastly hour to give you a citation.

It is illegal, says the DFG, to dig holes in the sand where the little tail-dancers could be trapped. There is no bag limit, but the DFG asks that you take no more than you can use.

If you are 16 years of age or older, you need the regular three-dollar general sportfishing license, good for any kind of fishing in the ocean, but not good for lakes and streams, warm-water fish and trout.

SOME OF THOSE LUNKERS in Isabella Lake are beginning to hit the baits. Surprisingly, both large trout and bass are being taken. Although it is not legal to fish for trout in the Kern River, which flows into Isabella, until May 2, you may take the rainbows in the lake.

Numbers of the big fish were washed into the lake last year when a flood knocked out some DFG brood ponds upstream from Kernville. Just a few days ago Ernest Menard, Ridgecrest, got an 8½-pounder, the largest trout ever taken from Isabella Lake.

Several fish ranging from three to six pounds were caught by others in the Camp 9 area. In the week just ended more trout in the three-to-five-pound classes were caught. Night crawlers seemed to be the best bait.

Biggest news of the week, however, was the great bass catch that Pete Donaldson and his wife, of San Pedro, did in the South Fork. Pete took five bass (legal limit) which weighed 35 pounds, 11 ounces. That's more than seven pounds average.

Not to be outdone, Mrs. Donaldson caught five fish. The weights ranged from 6 to 7¼ pounds. F. Tedora, Wofford Heights, fishing with the Donaldsons, also caught a limit. It would appear that Tedora and the Donaldsons have the Indian sign on Isabella bass.

Oh yes, lots of other anglers weighed in nice strings of crappie and bluegill.

FAR MORE IMPORTANT than just this fish report is a story about the Kern River water users agreeing to keep the water level of Isabella at 30,000 acre feet or more the year 'round.

The water level dropped to 15,000 acre feet in 1961 and it was Isabella's worst year from a recreational standpoint.

Jack Magoffin, Sherwood Lake concessionaire, reported that the lake had one of its best openings in history last Saturday, with many catches of bass to five pounds and large strings of crappie. Anglers also found plenty of catfish averaging about 14 inches.

Although the water level of Sherwood is down, Magoffin has arranged a tram service from the parking lot to the docks, thereby saving his customers from a tiresome walk with all their gear.

Lake Wohlford had rain, hail, cold and vicious winds for its opening weekend, but all that weather didn't stop 3,000 fishermen from trying their luck. Most of those really had good luck. Lake personnel checked 260 limits of trout, ranging from one-half pound to three pounds.

Channel catfish, mostly five and six pounds, with one weighing 9-7, were the second in numbers. Also, there were plenty of bullheads, but few crappie and bluegill. Some bass weighing three and four pounds were taken.

OUTDOOR PERSONALS—A badly injured wild animal has just about as much chance for survival as does a tortoise trying to cross the Long Beach Freeway, but there are exceptions. Such as the hen pheasant a biologist found in South Dakota.

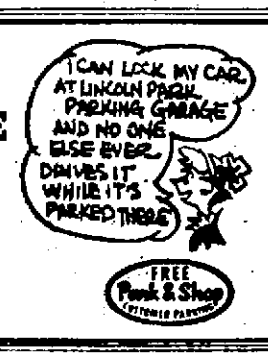

Her legs had been cut off about 1½ inches below the feathered portion when she encountered a mowing machine. The stub ends were club-shaped, but the pheasant ran several yards on those before taking to the air. The biologist finally captured the hen. She weighed 2 pounds, 3 ounces and was in excellent shape.

Big things are popping in the outdoor field this week. First of all, the Los Angeles Sportsmen's Show opens Thursday at Pan-Pacific Auditorium. It continues through the 12th.

The National Rifle Association has its convention at the Ambassador Hotel April 4 through 8 and there will be some terrific exhibits of guns, both modern and ancient firing pieces.

There will be another breed of personalities celebrating at Lake Elsinore Saturday. Bill Kent, of the Pacific Coast Speedboat and Water-Skiing Association, is coordinating an all-day water show to celebrate the formal opening of the lake, which is now filled and which is being used by boaters.

Troy Retains Swim Crown in Surprise

Saari Paces Upset With Third Record

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (UPI) —Southern California swept from behind with three gold medals Saturday night to win the NCAA swimming and diving championships in which existing meet or NCAA records were broken in every event.

Heavily favored Indiana was second with 91 points, five behind Southern Cal, and Yale was third with 87.

Roy Saari, sensational Southern Cal sophomore, lifted the Trojans from third place with his third NCAA and meet record of the championships, winning the 1,650-yard freestyle event.

Saari was clocked in 16:49 to eclipse the old record of 17:24 set by Jon Konrads (USC) last year.

* * * *

BILL CRAIG won the 100-yard breaststroke, Bob Bennett captured the 100-yard backstroke title for the Trojans and Southern Cal wrapped up the championship in the final event—the 400-yard freestyle—finishing third to upset Indiana, which finished a disappointing fifth.

The defending champion Trojans were only one point ahead of Indiana going into the relay and wasn't expected to do much better than fourth or fifth, while Indiana was conceded at least third place.

1,650-freestyle — Saari (USC) 16:49.5 (meet, NCAA record); Farley (Mich.) 16:56.1, McAneney (S. Ill.) 17:10.2, Foss (USC) 17:21.9, Dudley (Mich.) 17:29.3.
100-freestyle—Clark (Yale) 44.3 (meet, NCAA record); Austin (Yale) 44.7, Van Kennen (Wesleyan) 47.6, Marker (Wash. St.) 47.5, Geoghegan (Ill.) 47.7.
100-breaststroke—Craig (USC) 59.9 (meet record); Hennessy (Indiana) 1:00.8, Doesburg (USC) 1:01.5, Luken (Minn.) 1:01.4, Frost (Indiana) 1:01.8.
100-backstroke — Bennett (USC) 53.1 (meet, NCAA record); McGeagh (USC) 53.1, Mass (N. Car.) 53.2, Greer (Prin.) 53.9, Bartsch (Mich.) 54.2.
200-butterfly—Richardson (Minn.) 50.2 (meet, NCAA record); Schmidt (Indiana) 51.6, Hulf (Stanford) 52.1, Schuenof (Indiana) 52.2, Kennedy (Yale) 52.3.
3-meter diving—Larson (Ohio St.) 523.75 pts.; (Meet record); Boothman, (Mich.) 499.35, Gilbert (Indiana) 487.75, Morse (Indiana) 478.60, Early (Indiana) 438.30.
400-freestyle relay—Yale 3:08.7 (meet, NCAA record); Villanova 3:10.4, USC 3:11.0, North Carolina 3:12.4, Indiana 3:13.3, SMU 3:13.4.
Team scores—USC 96, Indiana 91, Yale 87, Michigan 30, Minnesota 22, N. Carolina 13, Ohio St. 13, Villanova 12, Princeton 10, SMU 8, Wesleyan 8, 5, Illinois 7, Wash. St. 7, Stanford 5.

Dodgers' Tuneup Tickets on Sale

Tickets are on sale for the Dodgers' three exhibition games in L.A. against USC April 9 and the Angels April 11-12. Also on sale are tickets for the season opener against St. Louis April 14.

Sales begin Monday at the Dodger ticket office, 1750 Stadium Way, from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Friday. Tickets also go on sale Monday at Mutual ticket agencies.

Stallworth, Murrell Sink East All-Stars

LEXINGTON, Ky. (UPI) — Kansas State's Willie Murrell and Wichita's Dave Stallworth combined Saturday to power the West to a 79-78 victory over a shorter East team in the National Association of Basketball Coaches all-star basketball game.

Murrell, voted the game's "star of stars," gunned 20 points on a dazzling variety of shots. Stallworth came through with a pair of free throws and a basket in the last minute-and-a-half.

'Naked' Truth Reveals Ancient Pros, Payoffs

By JIM BECKER

OLYMPIA, Greece (AP)—This is going to come as a shock to a certain set of people, but the fellows who ran in the ancient Olympic Games were about as amateur as the Chicago Bears.

The athletes were as finely trained as a modern boxer, and they traveled with the same sort of entourage as Cassius Clay, complete with trainers, rubdown men and cheer leaders.

They trained and competed all year around. And they never worked at all.

The Games, which were staged for 1,168 years in this once-splendid sanctuary of the god Zeus, were religious festivals. The Greeks — who invented logic but were as superstitious as everybody else in the old world—believed the winners at the Games had been selected by the gods.

They put up statues to the victors, wrote poems about them and showered them with gold. Their bills were paid for the rest of their lives.

Every big city in ancient Greece had its own stadium and its own Games. There were 30 to 40 of them, and a good athlete could travel from one to the next, year in and year out, picking up prizes.

It's in the record book.

The athletes ran naked, or at least they did after one Orsippus dropped his pants, possibly by accident, and won the sprint. It was decided after that that clothing slowed the runners down. Women were not allowed at Olympia.

Nobody knows for sure how good the ancient Greeks were, but it is known that some of them were as huge as modern football defensive tackles.

The broad jumpers carried weights in each hand to increase their distance, and one recorded a leap of 50 feet. Historians would like to discount that—it is about 23 feet past the modern mark — but all other parts of the account check out.

Maybe they used fiber glass takeoffs.

The Greeks, of course, had no watches for timing races, and kept no official records of distances in field events.

PLAY STARTS WEDNESDAY

Flying Wheels Defend Title in N.Y.

The national champion Long Beach Flying Wheels will depart Monday night to begin defense of their title Wednesday at the National Wheelchair Basketball Tournament at Queen's College in New York.

The Wheels will open play at noon against the Kansas City Pioneers.

Long accustomed to top seeding, the Wheels find themselves pegged fourth in this year's tourney.

An outstanding field of 10 teams led by Brooklyn, New York, Indianapolis and Long Beach will compete for four days with the finals slated for 3 p.m. Saturday.

Long Beach will take an impressive 84-2 record over the past five years into the tournament. The Wheels have not lost to an Eastern team since 1958, their two defeats coming at the hands of the Garden Grove Bears.

All-America Bill Johnson and John Cheves, who have led the team in scoring over the years, appear to be in top form. Center Erle Gerard has been ailing slightly and, according to coach Russ Churchman, is a doubtful starter.

The addition of Phil Ramsey will give the Wheels much needed help at a guard spot if it becomes necessary to move Cheves to center.

Rams '5' at Dominguez

The Los Angeles Rams basketball team will meet the Hollywood All-Stars in a benefit game for the Dominguez High stadium fund Friday night.

The game will be played in the Dominguez High gym with the tip-off slated for 8. The Dominguez High School Boosters Club is sponsoring the event.

If in town, any of the following will play for Hollywood: Pat Boone, Gardner McKay, Phil Crosby, Johnny Mathis, Rafer Johnson, Don Murray and James McArthur.

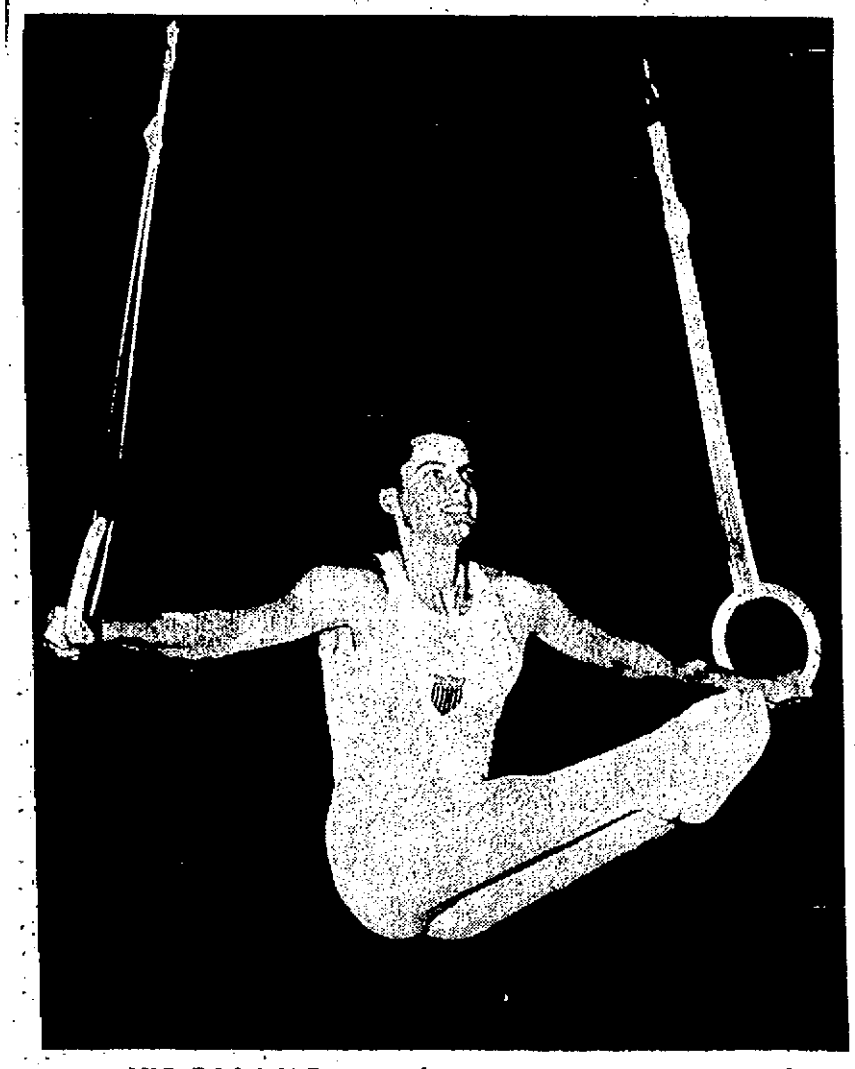

Suiting up for the Rams, Ed Meador, Red Phillips, Carver Shannon, Art Hunter, Joe Scibelli, Pervis Atkins, Marlin McKeever and Jack Pardee.

Record Dead Heat in S.D. Pace

By ERNIE MASON

In one of the most thrilling duels in Western Harness' history, Rusty Range and Mr. Budlong battled to a deadheat for victory in the $10,000 San Diego Pace Saturday before 16,604 roaring fans at Santa Anita.

Mr. Budlong, desperately urged on by driver Jimmy Cruise, drew exactly even with Rusty Range and pilot Willard Niles in the very last stride to gain the "tie" in the sizzling time of 1:58 1/5, fastest mile in the U.S. this year and a world record for a deadheat.

Shadydale Monitor was third, favored Irvin Paul fourth and they were trailed by Star Gem and Pole Adios.

Rusty Range and Mr. Budlong, plus their followers, will be rematched next Saturday in the $20,000 Californian Pace, WHRA's climactic event for sidewheelers at the spring meeting.

Rusty Range, hero of the Harness Tracks of America finale last year, rewarded his backers with $6, $6.20 and $5, while Mr. Budlong, the gritty veteran campaigner with earnings of nearly $300,000, paid $4, $3.60 and $3.20. Shadydale Monitor returned $7.80.

From the start, the San Diego Pace had all the aspects of a classic. Pole Adios boiled to the front from his outside position, with Irvin Paul dogging his heels and Rusty Range and Mr. Budlong well back.

Heading into the turn, Charlie King zoomed into command and opened up 1½ lengths, with Rusty Range going by Pole Adios, Shadydale Monitor moving into contention and Mr. Budlong launching his bid for Cruise.

Shadydale Monitor's challenge was repulsed by the courageous Rusty Range, But meanwhile Cruise had found daylight and was picking up the leader with every stride.

Mr. Budlong drew within a neck of Rusty Range at about the sixteenth pole, hung there momentarily as Rusty Range fought back valiantly, then dug in again to earn the deadheat in the last exciting stride.

The crowd was kept in suspense for many minutes as the judges studied the picture and finally determined that both horses hit the wire as a team.

The former world record for a deadheat was 1:59 4/5 by Ensign Hal and Meadow Gold in 1954 at Hollywood Park.

RACING ROUNDUP

Cedar Key Zips to Florida Win

Cedar Key returned to his native land from out of the West Saturday and turned back the best grass runners in Florida to win the $59,750 Donn Turf Handicap at Gulfstream Park.

However, the Donn was anticlamactic, as Windfield Farm's Canadian-owned Northern Dancer dashed seven furlongs under the same jockey, Manuel Ycaza, in record-equaling 1:22 during a warmup for the Florida and Kentucky Derbies.

Ycaza held the long-legged Cedar Key in fourth position throughout most of the mile-and-one-half on the infield course, then shot him to the front entering the stretch to win by two and one-half lengths.

The dark bay gelding carried top weight of 122 pounds and completed the route in 2:26, only one-fifth of a second off the track record.

Cedar Key was only a luke warm favorite although he had won the rich San Juan Capistrano Handicap at Santa Anita. He paid $8.40, $4.60 and $3.80. Parka was worth $4.20 and $3.60 for place and show while Suspicious returned $6.60.

* * * *

AHOY, carrying 130 pounds for the first time in his career, set a track record of 1:10 3/5 for 6 furlongs to win the $22,275 Capitol Handicap at Laurel in Maryland.

Ahoy returned $2.60 and $2.20. Cosdave and Near Man returned $2.20. There was no show wagering.

Rocky Link dropped his nose in front just at the wire and won the 40th running of the $29,150 Westchester Stakes at Aqueduct in New York.

Carrying 114 pounds, Rocky Link was clocked in 1:35 1/5 and paid $23.30, $11 and $7.40. Bonjour returned $5.10 and $3.90 and Morry E. was $5 to show.

Rockets to Meet Lone Conqueror

The Los Angeles Eagles, the only team to defeat the Long Beach Rockets during the Winter Semipro Baseball League this year, provide the opposition for Long Beach in an Easter Sunday contest today at Blair Field at 1:30.

Last Sunday's game with the Valley Dodgers was canceled because of rain so the Rockets are still looking for their fourth win in a row. Their overall record this year is 18-3.

GOOD PAY IN AUTOMATION TRAIN FOR IBM CAREER

CHARLES WOLFF, M.B.A. Educational Director AUTOMATION INSTITUTE

One of America's most fascinating, fastest-growing fields for career opportunities & advancement is Automated Data Processing. It's a field where companies are SEARCHING for employes.

Let's assume you want to become an IBM Operating and Wiring Specialist. In just a few months, at Automation Institute, you can master the basic techniques of Business Automation. With ability and confidence you operate sorters, collators, accounting machines, interpreters, reproducing punches, and other modern "tools" of Automated Data Processing. You also plan and diagram new Data Processing procedures.

As an IBM Operating & Wiring Specialist you are a leader in your field. With your special skills—and the high-speed equipment at your command—you can perform in a matter of minutes an accounting job that would once have taken an entire staff many days to complete.

As an Operating & Wiring Specialist, you work in a pleasant, comfortable office (the modern Automated Data Processing department is a "showcase" of the progressive organization). Your associates are intelligent, well-informed, interesting men and women.

Your work is indispensable to management. You are stimulated and secure in your career. Your responsibilities are varied and challenging. Professional growth, higher salaries and increased responsibility are your prospects for the future. Does all this sound too good to be true? Not at all!

The chances are excellent that you can qualify for a leadership career in Automated Data Processing. No special mechanical or mathematical skills are needed. If you have the ability to think logically and accurately . . . and a desire to learn and grow . . . you can be trained for success at AUTOMATION INSTITUTE.

You can qualify to train as an Operating and Wiring specialist
* By successfully completing a personal interview in which your educational & work experience is evaluated.
* By passing an aptitude analysis.

Results of your analysis, which is given by appointment and is free of charge, will be discussed with you by your counselor immediately after completion. Only those suited for Automated Data Processing studies are admitted.

Tuition is reasonable and deferred payment can be arranged. You may enroll in either morning, afternoon or evening courses. The evening program, which takes a little longer, enables you to hold a full or part-time day job. Moreover, when you complete your Operating and Wiring training you can qualify to take Automation Institute's Computer Programming Course. In every way, the comprehensive Operating & Wiring Course is your springboard to success.

Additional information about courses and tuition may be obtained by calling, writing or visiting AUTOMATION INSTITUTE.

L.B. State to Host Gym Stars

Long Beach State College, newly-crowned state champion, will host some of America's top gymnasts for the fifth annual Long Beach Invitational Gymnastics Meet Friday at 8 p.m. in the 49er gym.

Ken Bartlett, LBSC coach and meet director, expects a turnout of more than 50 of the best high school, JC and college gymnasts around. Competition will be on an individual basis in eight events.

In addition to the outstanding local talent, Bartlett has recruited gymnasts from some of the top teams in the U.S., led by Penn State's Mike Jacobson, the top scorer. The Big Ten will be represented along with the University of Arizona and Cal (Berkeley) among others.

Long Beach State's Vic Taggart and Mini Inouye will enter the competition on the rings with Fred Wantland on the parallel bars, Jim Mills, California's number two all-around performer, may miss the meet because of an ankle injury.

The 49ers' Don Devendorf will perform on the side horse and parallel bars where he finished first in state competition a few weeks back.

Other Southland talent on hand will include Dave Smith of San Fernando State. Smith is the current all-round and horizontal champion in California. Tony Bautista, free exercise title holder from Cal-State (L.A.) will also be on hand.

Softballers Set to Play at Gardena

Eight of the top area softball teams will compete in the Gardena Tournament beginning Monday at 7:30 p.m. at Gardena City Park.

There will be two games nightly through Saturday, with single games the three concluding nights of the tourney.

This will be a double-elimination tournament with the hosting world champion Gardena Merchants opposing Gopher City in Monday's curtain-raiser. In the nightcap at 9 the Oxnard Merchants will meet Karl's Shoes.

* * * *

TUESDAY at 7:30 Paramount Chevrolet of Downey will meet Los Alamitos, and at Etiwanda, formerly the Pamona Bombers will meet Monterey Park.

The tourney will conclude Monday, April 6, or Tuesday, April 7, if the loser's bracket team should force a final game.

The Long Beach Nitehawks will work out Monday, Wednesday and Friday at Park Avenue Field.

Doug Ballard's Lakewood team is preparing for the opening of the Pan-American Tournament slated to get under way April 17.

FORD CORTINAS IN LEAD

66 of 94 Remain in Grueling African Safari Auto Rally

NAIROBI, Kenya (UPI) — Sixty-six of the original 94 starters left here Saturday on the second leg, 1,753 miles, in the 3,188-mile East African Safari auto rally with most observers asking whether the Swedish ace Erik Carlsson will catch the two Ford Cortinas ahead of him.

Only three points divide the first three cars—Mike Armstrong and Chris Bates, Cortina, with 18 points lost; Peter Hughes and Billy Young, Cortina, 19 points down; and Carlsson in his Saab, 20 points.

The Cortinas head the team position, followed by Mercedes, Saab and Ford Zodiac Zephyrs. It could well mean an overall win for Carlsson, and if so, he will be the first overseas driver to take this rally. But the team prize looks certain to go to the Cortinas.

Major casualties on the northern leg were the Swedish Volvos, which still have two left in the rally, but are piling up heavy penalty points — likewise, Lincoln Mercury Comets with three heavily penalized cars are just managing to stay in the rally by the skin of their teeth.

* * * *

DRIVERS arriving from the north leg this morning told the usual mud bath story. There were also many complaints of stone throwing. One driver said burning brands had been thrown at his car.

Safari veteran Vic Preston, in a Zodiac 111, described the northern leg as "bloody as ever," while a Mercedes driver said, "I never want to drive over Tambach again. It was absolutely terrifying."

The Peugoet 404's are staying quietly in the center of the rally. They have had no casualties among the 12 cars entered. Last year the rally was won by a Peugot.

Alaska Newsman Watches Temblor Wreck His House

By ROBERT B. ATWOOD
The Anchorage Daily Times

ANCHORAGE Alaska (AP)—Mrs. Atwood was leaving for the grocery store when I arrived home from the office about 5:30 Friday evening. I thought of going with her.

Then, I decided to stay home and practice on my trumpet while the house was empty.

I could blow loud without disturbing anyone.

I had just started doing precisely that when the earthquake started. Minor earthquakes are not uncommon here but they always prompt me to stop what I am doing and watch what happens.

* * * *

IT WAS QUICKLY OBVIOUS that this earthquake was no minor one. The chandelier made from a ship's wheel swayed too much. Things were falling that have never fallen before.

I headed for the door, carrying my trumpet. At the door I saw walls weaving. I was still carrying my trumpet.

On the driveway I turned and watched my house squirm and groan, as though in last mortal agony. It was as though someone had engaged it in a gigantic taffy pull, stretching it, shrinking it and twisting it.

I became aware of the falling of tall trees in our yard, and I moved to a spot where I thought I would be safe.

* * * *

AS I MOVED, I SAW CRACKS appear in the earth, pieces of ground in jigsaw-puzzle shapes moved up and down, tilted at all angles.

As I started to climb the fence to my neighbor's yard, the fence disappeared.

Trees were falling in crazy patterns. Deep chasms opened.

Table-size pieces of earth moved upward to stand like toadstools with great overhangs.

A chasm opened beneath me. I tumbled down. Soft sand cushioned the impact. I was quickly on the verge of being buried. I was only one of many bits of debris tumbling into that chasm.

* * * *

I COULDN'T PULL MY RIGHT arm from the sand . . . it was buried to the shoulder. Most of the rest of my body was also covered. I let go of my trumpet and my arm pulled free easily.

Somehow, even in that perilous position, I felt the loss keenly. I felt I had just lost my last contact with many things associated with a happy home.

My neighbor's home slowly collapsed and slid into the chasm. For a time, it threatened to come down on top of me.

When the earth movement stopped, I climbed to the top of the wall of my chasm. I found angular landscape in every direction.

I found my neighbor, Warren Hines, with his son and young daughter.

* * * *

We crawled under dangerous overhanging pieces of frozen ground to safety.

The children responded marvelously. Never a whimper.

Helicopters were overhead but they couldn't land near us. After what seemed to be endless time, rescuers helped us out of the quagmire that had once been home.

THIS WAS A SIX-STORY BUILDING
A nearly completed six-story luxury apartment building at Anchorage, Alaska, was shattered in the giant earthquake which shook the state Friday. More than 85 lost their lives in the disaster and damage to property ran into the millions of dollars.

145 Injured in Japanese Train Wreck

TOKYO, Sunday (AP) — An express passenger train rammed into the rear of another passenger train at Nagoya, central Japan, today and first reports said at least 145 were injured.

Police said the one train was stopped at the station when it was hit by the express, which was slowing for its own stop. Both were crowded with holiday passengers.

Early reports said there were no deaths and the relatively slow speed of the ramming train was believed to have prevented a major disaster.

Kyodo News Service, reporting from Nagoya, 175 miles southwest of Tokyo, said ambulances sped injured passengers to 11 different hospitals in the 1.8-million-population city.

Copter Rescue Units Head for Alaska

LIMESTONE, Maine (AP) — Loring Air Force Base said it was preparing Saturday to send a helicopter rescue unit along with similar units from Dow AFB, Bangor, and Westover, Mass., AFB to the scene of the disastrous earthquake at Anchorage, Alaska.

Loring said the units, each consisting of one HH43B Huskie copter with a four-man crew are being flown to Alaska aboard a C24 Globemaster. The copters were first being dismantled.

No Nightmare, This Was Worse

(Editor's Note: Chester Stygar was asleep in Crescent City when sea water started rising in his room. This is his story.)

By CHESTER STYGAR
As told to Jack Schreibman, Associated Press Writer

CRESCENT CITY (AP)—You ever been through a nightmare?

We were asleep in our two bedroom apartment at Van's Motel, my wife and I, when she suddenly woke up.

The baby woke up, too. My wife said, "Chester, I hear a noise at the door—get up."

I put my feet on the floor and there was a foot of water in the room. I tried putting the lights on but they wouldn't work.

* * * *

THE BABY was screaming and I tell you I was scared. Jean took the baby, Carmen, in her arms.

I heard a noise out back and I opened up the back door and all I could see was the ocean. The last time I saw the ocean out the back door it was a quarter of a mile away.

I felt the whole building float up, like it was on a cloud.

* * * *

I OPENED the front door to try to escape with my wife and baby. All I saw in the blackness was water and things rushing back and forth. We didn't dare go out there.

My wife got hysterical and the baby was hollering. I told her that if anything happened and the building fell apart she and the baby should make for the boat. But there was nothing to do.

The house was rocking around and it was black and the gas started smelling. I didn't dare light a match. I told her to sit down on the couch and sit tight.

* * * *

"MY GOD," she cried, "we're flooded. We're flooded."

A few minutes later we felt the house settle down. Everything seemed to close in on us. The gas, the water, the awful black.

Pretty soon I looked out the front door and people were running from all directions. There are some nice people in the world. This family took us in, set us in front of a warm fire and gave us clothes.

"I WILL NEVER HAVE TO FACE THIS PROBLEM ALONE!"

"When my husband suggested we talk to the Rose Hills man about before-need memorial property, I knew he was thinking of the unnecessary suffering my friends went through because they had not planned ahead.

"We arranged a Family Protection Plan, while we both could choose what we wanted, without emotional pressures. He says he feels ten years younger, with the peace of mind he gained, knowing that I will never have to face this problem alone. He has proven his love beyond mere words.

"We certainly are glad we chose Rose Hills. Its beauty is so natural, with rolling hills, lovely lawns and gardens, and no headstones or monuments, it looks more like a park than a cemetery. There were so many beautiful sections from which to choose, and we found just what we wanted.

"We know, too, that Rose Hills will always be as lovely as it is today for they have that government-supervised Endowment Care Fund.

"By planning ahead, we gained financially, too. We were able to arrange a monthly payment plan that fits our budget perfectly, a plan which minimizes the cost to us.

"And as one of those little extra touches you always appreciate, the Rose Hills man gave us a handy Estate Portfolio for our important papers. It has containers for insurance, real estate papers, stocks and bonds and other vital records, properly catalogued so they are easy to find. He told us this portfolio is free to anyone interested."

This reaction is typical of that of thousands of wives, whose husbands had the foresight to plan in advance. Why don't you talk to the man from Rose Hills soon? Arrange an appointment by phone, or better still, send in the coupon for your free Estate Portfolio.

LBJ Calls for Food Probe

JOHNSON CITY, Tex. (AP) — President Johnson called Saturday for an investigation of the gap in food prices—the spread between what producers get and consumers pay. The emphasis would be on meat prices.

At one of his surprise Saturday news conferences, Johnson also:

—Took issue with Sen. J. W. Fulbright's critical views of administration policy toward Cuba and Panama.

—Said he is planning to visit pockets of poverty and unemployment at some time not yet set. But he does not intend to make a flying trip to view Alaskan earthquake areas.

—Hailed the release of two American pilots who were shot down by the Russians over East Germany.

Johnson covered these and an array of other topics in the crowded, pine-paneled library-office of the big stone-and-frame LBJ ranchhouse on the bank of the Pedernales River.

He was attired in range-country garb, from brown, high-heeled boots to wide-brimmed hat, beige shirt, slacks and jacket with his initials on the pocket. He sat behind a spacious mahogany desk or paced behind it while he fired off announcements and answered questions.

Mrs. Johnson listened in at the back of the room. She was wearing tan stretch pants, a tan turtle-neck sweater and embroidered tan boots.

One announcement was that the President was preparing to ask Congress for legislation to create a bipartisan commission of 15 to study changes he said are taking place in the food industry.

As an illustration of what the commission would get at, Johnson cited this situation:

"We have some commodities today where the producer is receiving 25, 30 percent less and we have the housewife who is paying 25 or 30 percent more —or about the same as a year ago.

One Swept Out to Sea

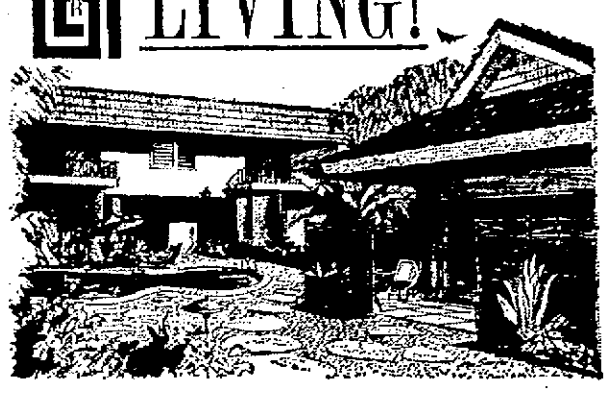

KLAMATH (AP) — The first tidal wave that roared up the Klamath River early Saturday swept two Air Force sergeants off their feet and carried one out to sea.

Sgts. Donald Mclure, 33, and Robert Harrington were fishing for eel at the mouth of the Klamath when the huge wave knocked them off their feet at 12:09 a.m. and carried them upriver.

Harrington made it to the riverbank, a witness said, but McClure, whose father lives in Akron, Ohio, clung to a piece of driftwood and was carried out to sea as the wave receded.

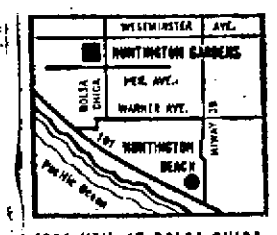

McClure is survived by his widow, Hisako, and three small children.

THE BUSINESS WEEK

Stocks Finish on Note of Greater Optimism

By C. J. NARNOW

NEW YORK (UPI)—Stocks finished on a more optimistic note this holiday-shortened week and prices perked up from a four-day slump.

Prices opened the week's first session on a mixed note then closed lower. The same performance was repeated Tuesday. Wednesdays opening presented the same picture but before the noon hour steels had taken the initiative and moved higher, taking the rest of the market with them.

Thursday's performance was good but somewhat stunted by the upcoming Good Friday holiday and the evening up of books which normally precedes a long weekend.

Brokers were pleased by the revival of interest in steels and other cyclical stocks and the growing interest in the secondary shares and those which have not participated in the advance so far. They felt that as interest spread throughout the list it will help sustain the market.

* * * *

MOST BROKERS viewed the four-day slump as a healthy sign. An advisory service went as far as to say the fundamentally strong issues appeared to be refreshing themselves before advancing.

The economic horizon continued mostly clear. Toward the end of the week the market got word that although machine took orders, business' vote of confidence in the economy had fallen 25.7 per cent last month, they were still 32 per cent ahead of February 1963.

Expansion plans announced by a number of corporations also gave brokers cause for optimism.

About the only dampening factors in the outlook are the possibility of a strike over the railroad work rules dispute and the possible demands the United Auto Workers may make at the bargaining table this summer.

Indications from the UAW convention in Atlantic City, N.J., were that the union will pass up heavy wage demands in favor of costly fringe benefits. Even so, President Walter Reuther's ominous statement that the union will make its "most significant historic bargaining effort" leaves room for gloomy speculation.

DOW-JONES industrial average finished with a tiny gain of 0.92 at 815.91. Rails skidded 1.31 to 192.16 and utilities slipped 0.52 to a new low of 137.76. Standard & Poor's 500 stock index tacked on 0.27 to 79.19.

Volume amounted to 21,334,064 shares for the four days compared with 27,206,798 for the five days last week and 19,349,340 shares in the same week last year.

Of the 1,488 issues traded, 684 advanced, 269 to new 1964 highs, while 632 declined, 142 to new lows.

Lehigh Valley Industries topped the market in activity, it slipped ⅛ to 2⅝ on a turnover of 658,500 shares. The stock has been very active recently but the company could offer no explanation for the action other than that it sold the last of its coal properties recently.

It was followed in activity by Continental Airlines, up 2½ to 26⅞ on 306,900 shares, Chrysler up ⅜ to 46 on 300,000 shares and RCA off ¼ to 36⅛ on 243,300 shares.

Steels were in the forefront of the advance and Lukens led the pack with a manumental gain of 14¼. Inland racked up a gain of 2½. National Steel advanced 3, McLouth 4¼, Jones & Laughlin 3⅝, Republic 1¾, Bethlehem 1⅛, Allegheny Ludlum 2⅛ and Armso 1⅝.

* * * *

MOTORS WERE held in check and moved only fractionally. General Motors advanced ⅞ and Chrysler tacked on ⅜. American Motors lost ⅛ and Ford skidded ¾.

Union Carbide turned in a good performance with a gain of 4½, followed by Diamond Alkali up 2¾ and Du Pont up 1¼. Eastman Kodak retreated 1⅝ and Allied Chemical slipped ⅞.

Blue chip oils were quiet and generally seemed neglected, Standard Oil of California slipped ⅝, Standard Oil (N.J.) ⅛ and Texaco 1⅜. Pure Oil climbed 3½ and Pennzoil added 1⅝.

IBM soared 14 points in a mixed section which included Motorola up 8¾, Electronic Associates 1¾, and Litton 3⅞. Minneapolis-Honeywell took to the downtrack and lost 5½.

Richardson-Merrell dropped 2½ in a weak drugs section after the company pleaded no contest to a federal suit which charged the company with failing to include key information to manufacture a drug. Smith Kline & French also dropped 2½. Elsewhere in the section, Carter Products dropped 4 points, Abott Labs 2¾, and Upjohn 4⅞.

* * * *

RAILS WERE depressed. Southern Pacific dropped 2½, Missouri Pacific 2⅛, Pennsylvania 1½, Louisville & Nashville 1¾, and Chicago & Northwestern 1¾. Northern Pacific was on the upside with a gain of 3, as was Norfolk & Western with a gain of 1¼.

Cigarette stocks met some demand on reports that sales were climbing back up from the 30 per cent drop which followed the surgeon general's report on cancer and cigarette smoking. American Tobacco and Liggett & Myers gained 1⅝, Phillip Morris 1⅜ and Reynolds 1⅛.

Airline shares climbed sharply higher, featuring Western Air Lines up 12½, Pan American up 8¾, Delta up 8½, American up 3¼, Northwest up 6 and Continental and National up 2½ each.

Financial shares also turned in a good performance spurred by reports the institutions expect increased loan demand and expect to keep growing despite government restrictions. Financial Federation jumped 5½, United Financial of California 4¾ and Wesco Financial 3¼.

Bullocks scored a strong gain Wednesday of news it planned to merge with Federated Department Stores, but slipped back in the final session on a combination of profit-taking and reaction to a statement by a company official who said he would vote against the merger. Bullock's showed a gain of 3¾ on the week, Federated was off 3⅜.

Polaroid rose 7¼ but normally wide moving Xerox slipped ¾.

Kiddie Couture: Fashion Plates of 1964

By Mary Ellis Carlton

LOOKS TOO MUCH like a dunce hat to be smart, says kindergarten couturier Loree Gray as she tries her Easter bonnet in-the-making on classmate Becky Pugsley during hat-designing session at Emerson Elementary School. She thinks she'd like something a little more feminine ("Easter is the time for girls to look pretty") and later fashions a chapeau with paper plate and posies similar to those pictured below.

The Easter bonnet, subject of song and poetry for countless decades, is today's substitute for spring flowers worn in the hair of maidens at spring rites 2,000 years ago.

But in teacher Dorothy Caldwell's kindergarten class at Emerson Elementary School, the traditional bonnet was a pre-Easter project of much fun, creativity and originality.

The kindergarten couturiers—equipped with scissors, paint brushes, pins, paper clips, tag board, paste pots and paper clips—created some silhouettes in their original chapeaux that would turn heads on any avenue—from Long Beach to Long Island.

Although some would-be pace-setters tried their hand at tall crowns and wide brims, most followed the girly trend for spring with saucy, flower-strewn creations anchored coquettishly with streamers and bows.

And, as you might expect, even in this smallfry world of pony tails and freckles, the young men of the group had some devastating comments to make when the bonnets were modeled.

Peering out from under the rabbit ear headgear they'd made during the Easter paste-paint-and-pin-up project, they came forth with comments very much like father would make: "You call THAT a hat?"

SUNKEN TUBS NEW TREND---

Now You Need a Toga

By CURTYNE DRISCOLL

The big gurgle in plumbing circles these days is the popularity of the sunken bathtub.

"We are installing one in almost every new custom-built home," said a spokesman at Nyland Plumbing. "One home we're working on has two."

"They are the real Roman style step-down-into baths, some about as big as swimming pools," he reported.

"In the past four or five months, sunken bathtubs have become extremely popular in Long Beach," agreed Jimmy Blanchard of Advance Plumbing.

USUALLY THE SUNKEN tubs are constructed of wooden forms covered with cement, then covered with mosaic tile, making them available in any shape or size.

One plumbing fixture manufacturer, however, makes a regulation tub that can be sunk in the floor for a Roman effect.

"I don't think there is anything in my home that I enjoy more," said Mrs. Thomas Shaheen Jr., of her sunken bath.

"Most kitchens and bathrooms are too utilitarian," she said. "I like mine glamorous."

When the Shaheens built their luxurious home two years ago, Mrs. Shaheen planned her large Roman tub with five foot Venetian columns at either end, a skylight and an outdoor, garden feeling.

"IT MAY BE a new trend," said Mrs. Douglas McFarland, "but there must be a lot of people like us, who find it an old one. Our Spanish style Naples duplex was built in the '20s and has a sunken tub that you simply can't beat for complete relaxation."

The McFarland tub has an additional note of elegance. It is lighted by a colorful stained glass window.

One new homeowner isn't sure he likes his sunken tub much.

"I'm accustomed to an enclosed stall shower," he said. "And to tell you the truth, in this big, open tub I feel awfully lonesome sometimes."

His wife is in consultation with her decorator to cure this complaint with a partial drapery or a beaded curtain.

J. E. SIMPKINS has incorporated a Roman bath in the plans for his new Los Cerritos residence.

"I always like the unusual," said Simpkins, formerly a general contractor, now an auto dealer.

"The design for our bath includes a couple of steps up, then a couple of steps down, with a heating element under the tile."

The Simpkins bath also will have a folding partition and shower attachment so the master of the house can "shower like a duck."

Simpkins was asked if he could foresee any problems arising from the new trend. Will there be a shortage of hot water? Will tiny tots fall in? What about cleaning all that grout?

"The only drawback I can think of," he said, "is that after a leisurely soak on those ceramic tiles, you might come out looking like a waffle!"

For More Beauty... Use Shibusa

By MARY NETH

Koo Ito, owner of the Scand-Asia, Redondo Avenue, cringes inwardly whenever someone pops into his shop and announces enthusiastically, "I'm doing my house Japanese."

This may seem like a strange reaction from a man who is doing his best to encourage interest in Japanese decorating ideas. But, it's quite reasonable once you understand Ito's view.

"I know how a try for a Japanese-style house frequently turns out," he says with a sigh.

To him pseudo-oriental in a western setting adds up to nothing less than a heavy-handed conglomeration of the worst of both East and West—reason to change Kipling's "never the twain shall meet" to "the twain absolutely must never meet."

ITO, IT SEEMS, is all for borrowing concepts, not for copying wholesale. In fact, he's apt to rip off superfluous, tell-tale Oriental flourishes from chests and chairs; remove dragons and gold characters as you'd do away with that fancy bow on an otherwise high-style dress. The result: subtle good lines with no gewgaws.

"We Americans shouldn't try to superimpose an alien culture on top of ours," he says. "Instead we should adapt Japanese principles of beauty to our pattern of life. That way we CAN profit. After all, the Japanese have been giving aesthetics top billing since the 8th century."

As he sees it, many Americans miss the boat in house decor by restricting themselves to a period—or cheap facsimile thereof—back when they are newlywed. "By the time they've outgrown the ruffled chintz and apple-wall-plaque stage, they're in almost too deep to do anything about it."

THIS IS WHERE Ito feels an understanding of Japanese decorating would help a lot. He advises couples to look into the meaning of shibusa before going shopping.

Shibusa? That's the Japanese word for the highest level of good taste. A word that you'll find has no counterpart in other languages. It means, in part, an easy-to-live-with beauty which incorporates simplicity, sensibility, fine quality and depth of interest.

"Something shibui (the adjective form of shibusa) could come from any place in the world—Japan, Denmark, Mexico, California. The intrinsic qualities contained would place it above any one period—allow you to use it in any setting."

A second generation Japanese-American, Ito often has been told he "must have been born with a knack for decorating."

"I don't think that's true," he says, "any more than I believe that the Japanese have an inherent flair for art."

MANY YEARS AGO, Lafcadio Hearn, then an authority on Japan, wrote along these lines that "the mental difference between a Japanese and a European child is mainly potential." Ito agrees today.

"I'm sure the Japanese owe their reputation as connoisseurs of beauty to the awareness shibusa has brought the culture. We can make use of it, too."

This yardstick for measuring artistic value was developed by the early Zen Cha-no-yu or tea masters. As they saw it, the world abounds with dif-

Their Travel Light Turns to Erin Green

By Iola Masterson
I, P-T Women's Editor

IT WILL be a broth of a trip—but a very busy one—for Joan (Frs. Denis) Murphy as she sets out next Saturday by jetliner for her former homeland. And where but Ireland could be the homeland of a lass with a name like that?

During the 13-hour flight, Joan will have in tow active daughter, Margaret Mary, 3½, and cute handful of a son, Michael Patrick, 10 months old. Wise in the ways of wee ones, Joan will be ready with lots of toys to keep the youngsters happy between naps. For mama's sake, I hope there are many passengers with a love of children who will help entertain when the toys grow dull.

Seasoned travelers check over important luggage.

Husband, Dr. Denis, will fly over in June to share visiting with both their families—his in Clonmel and hers in Limerick.

In the Irish custom, the children (Denis being the eldest son) are named after their grandparents, so wherever they go there will be name duplication, with Marys and Margarets and Michaels and Patricks to cope with.

Thinking this a very brave undertaking for the pert young mother, I asked her how long it had been since she had made such an extensive trip. This will be her's and Denis' FOURTH time back to the auld sod since they moved here just six years ago. It will be Michael Patrick's second, if you please, and Margaret Mary's third trip. Mike made his first visit to Ireland at the age of 3 months!

WHEN A dozen knowledgeable hostesses give a party—a big one—nothing DARES go wrong. And it didn't, not even on rainy, rainy Monday. Whether it was the result of their combined crossed fingers and wishes for clear skies, a pull with Pluvius or just sheer luck, don't know. The clouds stopped spilling over, as if by magic, to let more than 70 guests arrive at the home of Agnes (Mrs. Roscoe) Howell with nary a tress nor smart chapeau dampened.

Wild Waves Say...

Party was a shower (how appropriate!) and luncheon for Mrs. John Rawls (nee Sharon Vaughan). Cooperating as hostesses were Vivian Decker, Olive Hodges, Eleanor Kirkpatrick, Nora Cravins, Lena Walker, Caroline Saunders, Alberta McKay, Helen Rolo, Frances Sidford, Walterine Strong and Lois Mayes.

And what had they planned for party decorations? Why, umbrellas, of course.

THE DATE distance between arrival and departure is equal to too brief a time—way too brief. House-guests at the Ocean Blvd. home of Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Cheroske are their daughter, Eleanor Robinson, granddaughter, Ann Hughes, and great-granddaughter, Kathryn, just 20 months old. They've been here a week, will return to N.Y. next Saturday.

Ann's husband, Sam, flew out with them, too, but stayed hardly long enough to dent a pillow. He returned to Gotham Tuesday.

WHEN YOU'RE dutifully hard at work at your desk the thought of being snowbound in the mountains is a lovely daydream. But when it happens, then the snowshoe is on the other foot.

It did happen to Loraine and "Chick" Cicoletti, with their guests from Los Angeles, plus children and children's friends. They went to the Cicolettis' lovely home above Lake Gregory at Crestline Saturday and by Monday, when the men needed to be at work, they were hopelessly trapped in a sea of white. Their home there is off the country road so the ploughs simply didn't get to it.

What's more, there sat Loraine and "Chick's" one week old deluxe T-Bird taking a beating and over its mufflers in sleet.

Like many a stranded mountaineer, the men had to hike to Crestline to get extra food for the enforced stay (a distance of something like five miles!). Enough of a roadway was cleared Tuesday to let the men out, via car. By Wednesday they were back at their desks—and I'll bet dreaming how great it would be to be snowbound again!

THIS NEWS is winning their friends' unanimous vote of approval. Val Lovell Richards and Bob Crowe, both prominent in Republican circles (in fact, it was through their mutual interest in GOP that they met) slipped away to Las Vegas and when they did the most important act in town was their "I do" date.

THE TERM "annual dinner," with its connotation of well done chicken or raisin-laced ham, lands like a thud on the ears. But not in this case. For years, a small group of avid sportsmen and their wives have gathered for a hunters' dinner of sheer delight. The feast is put together from the finest gourmet viands each hunter has hoarded in his freezer.

This year Naomi and John Hanberry entertained at Long Beach Yacht Club with co-hosts Virginia and Charles Dickie. Club manager-hunter Ev Boyette, present with wife Dorothy, was "menu chief."

Elk and venison from Colorado, geese from Tule Lake, Montana trout (out of the Madison River), dove from Calexico, plus other specialty dishes galore were served.

Among those dining and wining were such members of the gang as Dorothy and Charles Flippin, "Rick" and Dr. Lowell Bowton, Betty and Milt Cantor, "Jo" and Jerry Ryan and Harry Christensen.

FRIVOLITY and golf marked the second annual Apple Valley Steak House "invitational" golf tournament at Torrey Pines last weekend. Still are all friends, although they played against each other. They were rained out Sunday, you see, never finished the tourney. Which is one way to solve a contest the most amiable way possible.

Among the 25 couples who highwayed it down coast were Gail and Jim Ireland, Darlene and John Coultrup, Rose and Tom Coultrup, Idell and Abe Azar, Lavonne and Steve Kral, Hallie and Oscar Contratto Jr., Marie and Jim Contratto, Jan and Bobby Faraha, Bobby and Gladys Campbell, Andy and Nataline Bryson and Johnny Olszewski, there without Dorothy who couldn't make trek.

ALTHOUGH you'd never guess if from the aplomb they show below, Dick and Patricia Hugen of 2691 Fanwood Ave., admit they had their share of head-over-heels spills during a wonderful skiing week at Baldy Mountain, Sun Valley, Idaho.

And the two are not "bunnies," either, meaning beginners on the slopes. Prodded as to their prowess, Dick warily confessed he and Pat are really "sort of good." Everyone tumbled occasionally on the steep runs, he said.

They were treated not only to excellent ski conditions but to superb weather and came home suntanned as if they'd been on the sands of Waikiki instead of high on a winter mountain.

The Hugens were passengers on UP's famous Sno-Ball Express, the holiday train that chugs into the valley just twice a year, they said.

Others on the trip from Long Beach were Jack and Don Crawford, the most forever-at-it skiiers in town. What DO these two do when the good old summertime is here? Probably take a boat to sea—and go water skiing, what else?

Poised pose, tumbles not camera-witnessed.

Mrs. Lester Barnett Heads Emblem Club

Mrs. Lester Barnett

Mrs. Lester Barnett will assume presidency of Long Beach Emblem Club 106 when it stages 19th annual installation of officers at 8 p.m. April 8 at Elks Club, 4101 E. Willow St. She succeeds Mrs. Clifford Pierce.

Mrs. Clara Miller of Burbank, past supreme president, will be installing officer.

Mrs. Barnett is a charter member of Long Beach Emblem Club and has held offices for seven years including that of first and second vice president. In addition, she has served as secretary of Heart Guild, Inc., and is a member of Kenneyettes. She shares her husband's interest in antique automobiles and has served the Horseless Carriage Club for eight years as women's editor of its national magazine.

Serving with Mrs. Barnett will be Mmes. Andrew Anderson, Harry Gallagher, Robert Orcutt, Ted Day, Roy Castle, Merida Maxwell and numerous appointive officers.

Husbands and members of Elks Lodge 888 will be escorts for the new officers and entertainment will be by Voices of 106, directed by Mrs. Harvey Raston.

Mrs. R. A. Berg, past president, is general chairman, and Mrs. Sam Beck, also a past president, is in charge of the reception.

Penelope Bryant Now Mrs. Turk

In a formal evening ceremony at First Congregational Church on Wednesday, the wedding of Penelope Anne Bryant and Robert Louis Turk was solemnized in the presence of 400 guests.

The bride, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. David Logan Bryant of 5561 Las Lomas St., was escorted to the altar by her father. She wore a gown of peau de soie with lace bodice and lace applique on the bouffant skirt with chapel train. Her fingertip length veil fell from a crown of pearls, and she wore a pearl necklace, gift of the bridegroom. Her bouquet was of white roses centered with a detachable orchid corsage.

Attendants, gowned in pink crepe sheaths, were Mrs. William Tyra, sister of the bride and matron of honor; Adrien Mango, Marguerite Matlock and Carole Powers with David Tyra as ring bearer.

The bridegroom, son of Mrs. Herman Turk, 219 Belmont Ave., and the late Dr. Turk, was served by his brother, James Turk, as best man. Seating the guests were John Buster, Earnest Kartinen, William Tyra and Richard Wienig.

* * * *

BOTH young people were graduated from Wilson High School. The former Miss Bryant received her BA and MA degrees from UCLA where she was affiliated with Phi Beta Kappa and Alpha Phi and was a member of the sophomore, junior and senior honorary societies, as well as Mortar Board. She is now a teacher at Venice High School.

The bridegroom is an alumnus of Stanford University where he was a member of Stanford Young Republicans and El Cuadro, and is now working toward his MD degree at UCLA where he is a Nu Sigma Nu.

Following their honeymoon in La Jolla the new Mr. and Mrs. Turk will be at home in Los Angeles.

CHAMPION CALIFORNIA HOMEMAKER

To Vie for 'Mrs. America' Title

—Staff Photo

FRIENDS AND STRANGERS have kept Mrs. Darlene C. Ticehurst's phone busy with congratulations since she won "Mrs. California" title March 9. Brian, 7 (left), and Jeff, 11, share in the excitement. Mrs. Ticehurst and her husband, Glen, will leave Thursday for St. Petersburg, Fla., where she will compete with 51 other women for the title of "Mrs. America."

By ELISE EMERY

What is it like to win the title of "Mrs. California?"

Says Mrs. Darlene C. Ticehurst, 3141 Bostonian Drive, Los Alamitos, "Overwhelming!"

Thursday, Mrs. Ticehurst, accompanied by her husband, Glen, will leave for St. Petersburg, Fla., where she will compete for the title of "Mrs. America" in the 25th annual national contest.

Mrs. Ticehurst was born Jan. 11, 1925, is 5 feet 6, weighs 128 pounds, has shining brown hair and candid green eyes.

"It was my wonderful mother-in-law who first taught me homemaking skills," she recalls. "When I was married 19 years ago, I was 20 years old and didn't know a thing about housekeeping. I was cocky and over-confident. But Glen's mother taught me to cook and sew and keep house."

* * * *

THE PARENTS-IN-LAW, Mr. and Mrs. Jay Ticehurst of Topeka, Kan., will stay with the Ticehursts' children, Steve, 17, Jeff, 11, and Brian, 7, while Darlene and Glen are in Florida.

"This began almost as a lark — I never expected it would end like this! It's been wonderful fun," says the pretty contestant.

She thought it was a joke when she was asked Feb. 3 by Rossmoor Homeowners Association to compete for the "Mrs. California" title.

When she realized the association board members were serious, she sent in an entry form, filled out a lengthy questionaire, and submitted a full-length photograph of herself.

"Things just progressed from there," she says.

* * * *

SHE WAS NOTIFIED that she was to be one of seven finalists in the local Rossmoor area competition Feb. 28. She won this and went on to compete with six other finalists in Hollywood March 9.

"I wasn't nervous. It was just fun. I practiced what we teach the boys: 'Don't expect to lose. Do your best. If you do lose, don't feel that you can never look anyone in the face again.' That's the way I feel about the Mrs. America competition, too."

* * * *

IN HOLLYWOOD, she was named top homemaker in the state after all-day competition in baking, sewing, table setting, menu planning, grooming, poise and personality. She won first place in the menu planning category with these recipes:

Chicken breasts in sherry sauce, wild rice, raw spinach salad, toasted French bread and grasshopper pie — a cream pie flavored with creme de menthe.

"We were told constantly that it is the overall rating that would count, not just the number of first places we won. The two runners-up, my alternates, didn't win a first award. Nor will the Mrs. America judges expect the winner to be perfect in every area—no one is. It is the total approach that is important."

* * * *

THE CHAMPION California homemaker doesn't believe in work schedules for herself.

"Every morning I summarize what I hope to accomplish during the day, but a schedule just isn't possible in this day and age when every time the phone rings the plan could go to pot. A woman whose children are of school age is busy with both home and community affairs and her routine must be flexible."

How does she define the "representative homemaker?"

"Woman today must be versatile and vital. On demand she must change from mother to den mother, from hostess to chauffeur, from bridge partner to sports enthusiast, from night dinner and dancing to day repainting and decorating. When she can do these things, to name a few, with a smile, surely she deserves the title, representative homemaker.'"

* * * *

ONE OF THE MOST exciting results of winning the "Mrs. California" contest has been the flood of messages she has received from friends and strangers.

"The title wouldn't mean a thing without the wonderful, warm response of people. For the first week the phone never stopped ringing. It was quite an adjustment to change from my 19 years of homemaking routine to appointments for photographs, interviews, television and judging contests."

When "Mrs. California" judges asked Mrs. Ticehurst what she could offer to other women if she were selected as "Mrs. America," she answered:

* * * *

"I DON'T feel that I could offer myself as an example to others. There are 1,000 other women just as competent to win the 'Mrs. California' title as I—they just didn't enter the contest. What I would want to do is to meet with other women for discussion and to exchange points of view."

Will Honor Newlyweds

A reception will be held honoring newlywed Mr. and Mrs. Gene Howard Record Saturday evening at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Howard J. Record, 2620 Eucalyptus Ave.

The couple eloped to Las Vegas on March 8 and their wedding took place at Little White Chapel. The bride is the former Janice Eloise McMinn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Vernon R. McMinn of South Gate. They were attended by Nancy Gallager and Robert E. Lyman.

The bride wore an ensemble of yellow French silk with matching accessories and a cymbidium orchid corsage.

The bridegroom was graduated from Polytechnic High School and his bride from South Gate High as well as Los Angeles Trade Technical College.

Accent Shibui-- Best in Beauty

ferent aspects of beauty. The lovely, powerful, gay, smart all belong to the beautiful, and everyone, according to his own disposition and environment, feels a special affinity to one or another aspect. But, when taste grows more refined, all will arrive at the beauty which is shibusa.

"It's unfortunately easier to say what shibusa is not, than to describe what it is with simplicity," says Ito.

"It isn't the brightly colored or gaudy that the Japanese call Hade. It's not the stylish or chic, that's called Ikf and it's not the sober, sedate, and proper, the Japanese term Jimi.

"It's the latter, or Jimi type of beauty, that many Japanese come up with in their attempt at shibui, he continues.

FOR THOUGH a shibui garment or decoration is always unobtrusive, it's never dull. There's always a touch of the unexpected—the unfinished—to add depth of interest. You'll never find yourself growing tired of a shibui artifact.

"It should, in fact, be something you can enjoy day in and day out. It was the uneventful, normal world that the tea masters explored for unusual beauty—their masterpieces were the utensils they used every day.

"When you grasp the idea of shibusa you have gained the best the Japan culture has to offer. And, once more you'll see things you missed before."

Shibusa draws its inspiration from nature where one never finds static symmetry. And, for its followers, such as Ito, it offers a never ending learning process.

RIGHT NOW, Ito is doing what he has always wished to do—concentrating on this search for beauty. He picks items for his shop from all parts of the world (not just the Scandinavian countries and Japan) that he believes represent this syndrome.

As to his own home, Ito laughingly confides that it doesn't come close to being shibui . . . not yet. He's been too busy collecting shibui works of art to work on it.

New Exhibit

"Collectors' Choice" is the new exhibit opening at the Lytton Center of Visual Arts, 8150 Sunset Blvd., Hollywood, on Wednesday. Outstanding pieces of sculpture from private local collections include works by Arp, Lipchitz, Marini, Degas, Giacometti and Moore; examples of African and pre-Columbian primitive art; Spanish, early American, Egyptian and Coptic folk art.

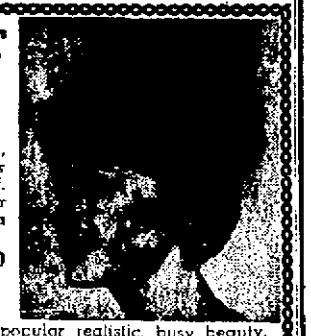

The center is open daily and on Saturday from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Admission is free.

FOASBERG'S FABRIC CARE COUNSELOR

RESEARCHERS looking into causes of overweight have found there are 2 types of eaters: "night eaters" who eat heavily before going to bed; "binge eaters" or people who go on eating sprees, and these who eat to satiation, apparently never knowing when to stop. They also found that the overweight women walked an average of 1.9 miles a day while women of normal weight walked 4.7 miles a day. They did not draw any conclusions as to whether the overweight women walked less because they were heavy, or they were heavy because they walked less. However, authorities agree that walking is one of the best ways of keeping us in trim and we do far too little of it.

P.S.: Another "secret" of looking and feeling your best is treating your garments to the special care that only your professional laundry can give.

THAT OLD BUNNY TALE!

Sandra, 2½, pooh poohs stories about that once-a-year Easter bunny. Her three cuddly cottontails may not bring baskets of colored eggs but they're sure hare-raising—she's got 14 baby back-yard bunnies to prove it and that's lots more fun. The youngest of four girls, she's daughter of the John Adams, 27636 Tarrasa Drive, San Pedro, who say keeping their pets in carrots keeps them hopping. For Easter, Sandra's rabbits will forgo bonnets and bows for extra juicy bunch. Proving they're certainly not dumb bunnies!

To Outline Cultural Activities

An illustrated talk, with vocal selections, entitled "Us Uncultured Americans," will be presented by John Arnold Ford to members of American Institute of Banking's women's committee of Harbor Chapter on Monday at 8 p.m. at Alfred's Restaurant.

Ford's talk, which is presented under joint sponsorship of the Hollywood Bowl Association and Southern Counties and Southern California Gas Companies, reviews the many cultural assets of Southern California, giving recognition to fine local musical, artistic and dramatic organizations, both professional and amateur, that exist in Southland communities.

* * * *

FORD FIRST made his name as one of the area's leading bass singers, and rounds out his program with a variety of vocal selections. He has sung in opera and light opera and has for seven years produced the Pilgrimage Play in Hollywood.

Dirty Car Is Unsafe to Drive

Slick roads from rain are not the only driving hazard this time of year. So is a dirty car. A car encrusted with road grime is treacherous to drive.

That is why General Motors' professional road-test drivers urge motorists to keep their cars clean during inclement weather—for both their own safety and the car's protection.

FAMILY AFFAIR

With the help of Gabriella, 6; Peter John, 5 months; Mark, 21 months, and Marisa, 3, Mrs. Peter Miotto checks material for Community Concert campaign, which gets under way Monday. As a division manager, she is one of 300 volunteers who will work on the drive.

'Spring' Exhibition at LBAA

By ELISE EMERY
Arts Page Editor

Long Beach Art Association members Monday will enter exhibits for the April "Spring" show in the gallery, 800 E. Ocean Blvd. Entries will be received from 1 to 7 p.m.

Grace Sorenson Dimmick, Long Beach artist and teacher, who has just returned from a three months sketching tour in Europe, will select winning works.

The May exhibit will be titled "Our Town" and will feature artists' interpretations of familiar Long Beach landmarks.

LBAA member Joy Nye Elliott was one of 98 artists selected to have work exhibited at the 19th annual Newport Harbor exhibit. There were 600 works submitted.

* * * *

"RENAISSANCE AND Recent Color Prints" is the title of an exhibit which will open Tuesday in Long Beach City College art gallery at Faculty Ave. and Harvey Way. The show will continue through April 17. Hours are 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Mondays through Thursdays, 7 to 10 p.m. Tuesdays and Thursdays, and 9 a.m. to noon Fridays.

Drawn from the LBCC art department's collection of color reproductions, the exhibit ranges from Renaissance to contemporary paintings, and includes such diverse artists as Bellini, Durer, Rembrandt, Reynolds, Blake and Picasso.

* * * *

CALIFORNIA State College at Long Beach will open its National Invitational Print Exhibition Thursday in the art gallery. Hours are 8 a.m. to noon and 1 to 5 p.m. daily; 8 to 10 p.m. Wednesday; and 2 to 5 p.m. Saturdays and Sundays.

* * * *

Other awards went to advanced students and to B Class students.

Pat Jones won a special judge's award for a montage.

Entries in the league's second annual national cash award Stitchery Show will be accepted April 12 through 16 from 1 to 4:30 p.m. and 7 to 9 p.m. Eleanor Neil will judge the show and will present awards April 18 at the Art Center, Ocean Ave. and Main Blvd., Seal Beach.

Further information may be obtained by calling the center or Pat Jones, 632 Sea Breeze Drive, Seal Beach.

* * * *

WATER COLORS by Ann Rutledge will be on exhibit at North Long Beach Branch Library, 5571 Orange Ave., from Thursday through May 1. Mrs. Rutledge has been a member of Long Beach Art Association for 20 years. She has studied with Eliot O'Hare, Rex Brandt, Robert E. Wood and the late Pearl Macy Lucas.

* * * *

IRVING MANOIR of Corona Del Mar will give a painting demonstration and talk at a meeting of Huntington Beach Art League Wednesday at 7 p.m. in Lake Park.

* * * *

WILLIAM F. LA VALLEE, formerly of this city and member of Long Beach Art Association, has been appointed director of the Tulare County Museum of Art in Visalia. He resides in Three Rivers.

* * * *

THE 1963 Henry H. Bellamann Foundation Award of $1,000 for outstanding achievement in the arts will go to artist Andrew Bucci of Washington, D.C., according to Mrs. Edith Sansom of New Orleans, director of the foundation.

COLLEGE CRISIS

A university classroom crisis plunges a professor (James Whitmore) and his wife (Cloris Leachman) into intense drama in "P. S. 193" in its West Coast premiere by University Extension's Theater Group at UCLA beginning Friday at 8:30 p. m. and running through May 10 in Humanities Building. Play was selected as one of 10 best plays of 1962-63 New York season.

Ticket Is 'Bargain in Culture'

The membership committee of Long Beach Community Concert Association is convinced that it offers the greatest cultural bargain in the city.

Members point to the price of subscriptions—$6 for adults, $3 for students—and to such top artists as Dorothy Kirsten and Eileen Farrell who have appeared here on Community Concert programs.

* * * *

THEY BOAST, too, of the artists already scheduled for the coming season—Mantovani and His Orchestra, Ruth Page's Chicago Opera Ballet, and the Royal Welch Male Choir, and note that two other attractions will be added. Membership capacity is 4,300 and even before the campaign begins, 2,600 renewals have been received. It is traditional that membership sales reach capacity each year. Campaign headquarters will be at Humphreys Music Company, 135 E. Third St.

* * * *

Approximately 300 enthusiastic volunteers give their time to this non-profit, cultural association.

One is Mrs. Fiorella Miotto, who has worked for the association since its beginnin in 1959. Despite the fact that she is the mother of four children between the ages of 5 months and 6 years, she heads a division of workers. A native of Trieste, Italy, she came to the United States while a teen-ager, finished her schooling in New York City and majored in chemistry at Hunter College. After her marriage to Dr. Peter Miotta, she came to Long Beach and has continued her studies at California State College at Long Beach.

* * * *

ANOTHER volunteer is Miss Bertha Parsons who has worked with the organized audience plan since it began many years ago and has been with Community Concert since its start. Now retired, she was secretary to the Long Beach Board of Education for many years.

Mrs. Glenn Manning, another who was an original Community Concert volunteer, has earned her bachelor of science and teaching credential at CSLB during the past three years and now is a school nurse. In addition to her homemaking duties for her husband and four children, she has undertaken various civic duties.

* * * *

COMMUNITY Concert Association president Ray L. Hazlet credits the success of the organization to the many volunteers who tell its story.

Mrs. Arch Henry, executive secretary, is assisted at campaign headquarters by Mrs. George Cerveny and Mrs. B. E. Burchfiel.

The campaign will continue until April 11, or until capacity is reached.

Patterson to Play With Symphony

Ronald Patterson, violin virtuoso, will be soloist with Long Beach Symphony Orchestra next Sunday in Long Beach City College Auditorium. The concert will begin at 8 p.m. under direction of Lauris Jones.

Patterson won the Furjanick Award in the recent annual Symphony Competition for Young Artists. He also has won awards with the Aspen Symphony, Fresno Symphony, and in the Monterey County and USC String competitions. He will play the Tchaikowsky "Concerto for Violin and Orchestra."

THE FURJANICK Award was established by Long Beach Symphony Association as memorial to the late Nicolas Furjanick, associate conductor of the orchestra for many years and director of music at Wilson High School.

Works to be performed by the orchestra next Sunday will be Brahms' "Academic Festival Overture," Haydn's "Symphony No. 104" and Barber's "Adagio for Strings."

* * * *

THIS IS the fourth concert of the current Sunday Evening Series. Tickets are on sale at the Symphony Association office in Gilmore Music Store, 1935 E. Seventh St., and at Humphreys Music Company, 135 E. Third St. For additional information, call the association office.

MAJOR & MINOR NOTES

of Glad Hosannas Easter Is Season

By RACHEL MORTON
I. P-T Music Critic

Outside my window there is an azalea bush cascading in gorgeous orchid-colored blooms. I look at it in wonderment, not only for its beauty, but because only a short while ago, it was a mass of dry, brown twigs. My whole garden is a riot of color in the miraculous transforming of Spring. There are other signs, too of the grand event of life being renewed. I hear little chirpings in the trees as the parent birds fly busily to and fro with food for the baby birds.

* * * *

IT IS EASTER, the season of hosannas and praise! Out of the dark of the tomb came the Christ, arisen from the dead. That was the emancipation that has given meaning and impetus to all Christians, the world over. By it, life has become a thing of hope, of anticipation, of conviction that the grave has not the victory. There shall be newness of life after death, according to the promise, because spirit never dies.

Life, this side of the grave, is a pruning time for mankind. The dry twigs of existence can become glorious years of rich accomplishment, or broken years of defeat. It was the risen Christ who showed us the way to overcome death.

* * * *

IN THE SOUL of every human being there is an urge for good, for love, for God. This is the same impetus that sends forth the flowing branch; this is the spirit which never dies. Life is given us for fulfillment. How are we managing it? Because, as we live, so shall we find ourselves after death.

Let us sing loud hosannas and give praise on this glad Easter Sunday because we have a rebirth through Christ, the Wayshower, and death has lost its sting.

Machiko Kyo

'Street of Shame' on Film Series

Termed one of the most successful of the Japanese "modern" films, "Street of Shame" will be presented at California State College at Long Beach in the Little Theater next Sunday at 5 and 7:30 p.m. as third spring presentation of Long Beach Film Society.

Starred are Machiko Kyo and Aiko Mimasu in a story about five prostitutes and their reasons for being what they are, which include poverty, lack of education, disillusionment and greed. It is directed by Mizoguchi who also did "Rashomon" and "Ugetsu."

A companion feature is "Black Cat." Tickets are available at the box office.

Show Will Continue During April at PCC

By VIRGINIA LADDEY

Manuel Toapanta, Ecuadorian artist, is having a one-man show at the Pacific Coast Club, 850 East Ocean Blvd., which will continue through the month of April. Sr. Toapanta has a marked degree of skill in draftsmanship and in the use of various media — oil, water color and ink. His approach, however, in subject matter, technique, composition and content completely ignores the 20th century. His work will be most pleasing to that part of the public which finds "modern art" so distressing.

Toapanta's points of reference which are most marked are post-impressionism and Latin colonial baroque. The former he uses in flickering color in short, small brush strokes to render stone walls and hills, and the highlights on water and objects. Here, the pigment is quite thick with many tones mixed with white.

* * * *

THERE ARE TWO works in vivid water color and ink line which show the influence of colonial baroque. In one, a line of angel musicians extend into the infinity of an imaginary horizon while the foreground is filled with powerfully built angels. There is a crowned Christus figure among these. The colors are brilliant magenta and green and forms are defined in vigorous penline.

In another work, a Christ in the attitude of benediction is standing on both a globe of the world and a mysterious transparent sphere which surround it. On either side are whirling spheres and towering columns.

* * * *

THERE ARE several renderings of thick-walled colonial buildings with campaniles. Toapanta renders this architecture very strongly. Another group of paintings is of a fishing harbor with boats, rocks, surf and hills. He does some unusual things with color, as in one work for instance, which is all in shades of emerald green.

It is interesting to see this Ecuadorian's view of his world.

On Stage---

CHAPEL THEATER, 4164 Pacific Coast Hwy., Torrance, "Come Blow Your Horn," 8:30 p.m. Friday through Sunday, through April 25.

COMMUNITY PLAYHOUSE, 5021 E. Anaheim St., "Breath of Spring," 7:45 p.m. Thursday; 8:30 p.m. Friday and Saturday, through April 18.

Preview Tuesday

Members of Long Beach Committee of Southern California Symphony Association will attend a preview salon Tuesday at 10 a.m. in Assistance League House, 394 Roswell Ave.

Dr. Russell N. Squire, associate professor of music at California State College, Long Beach, will discuss the program to be played by Los Angeles Philharmonic orchestra Thursday at 8 p.m. in the Concert Hall

Schola to Perform Saturday

"An Evening of Choral Masterworks" will be presented by the Schola Cantorum of Long Beach City College, directed by Wayne B. Gard, at 8:15 p.m. Saturday in the college auditorium. Tickets will be available this week at the student body banker's office, 4901 E. Carson St.

Works to be performed are Palestrina's "Kyrie" (from the "Mass for Pope Marcellus"), considered one of the outstanding examples of liturgical polyphony; Mozart's "Vesperae Solennes do Confessore," to be performed by chorus, chamber orchestra and solo quartet; and Vaughn Williams' "Mass in G Minor," written for double chorus and solo quartet.

* * * *

SOLOISTS for Mozart's seldom-heard "Vespers for the Confessor" will be Jeanette Beiter, soprano; Ruthanne Lorenzen, alto; Donald E. Rohrer, tenor; and Donald Ogren, bass.

Ogren also appears as a soloist in the "Mass in G Minor," with Mary Jane Gard, soprano; Iris Eshelman, allo; and Terry Danne, tenor. All seven of the soloists have had extensive concert, choral and operatic experience. Helen Davenport is the Schola Cantorum accompanist.

Trio Will Play Museum Concert

An evening of chamber music by the Ariel Trio is slated for Thursday at 8 p.m. at the Long Beach Museum of Art, 2300 E. Ocean Blvd. The program is free to the public.

The trio consists of Lydia Shapiro, pianist, Esther Rabiroff, violinist; and Mary Jane Gillian, cellist. They will play the Beethoven "Trio in C Minor" by the Brahms "Trio in B."

Miss Shapiro is a teacher and concert artist in Los Angeles. Miss Rabiroff, a graduate of Juillard, has been alternating concertmaster of the Buffalo Symphony, and a member of Hollywood Bowl orchestra.

Pity Wasted--She's Single by Choice

Dear Molly Mayfield

DEAR MRS. MAYFIELD:

I get so tired of hearing about these "pitiful," unmarried girls and widows. Would you let me know what is so "pitiful" about not having a man?

"Oh, the poor lonely thing, couldn't she land a husband?" is a remark I hear all too frequently.

Well, maybe she didn't want a man; maybe she wanted to be FREE. Maybe she is happier the way she is; maybe she is not one bit lonely.

At least I don't see these "pitiful," manless ones always writing you about all THEIR problems — and it's probably because they don't have so man-y!—"PITIFUL" ME

DEAR "PITIFUL" ME:

Since you don't need advice I won't pretend to offer any. Since you don't feel sorry for yourself, it's not likely others are going to feel sorry for you, bless your heart.

I'll just go along with you a few words longer and say that some of the happiest women I know are spinsters —and spinsters by choice, too. —M.M.

* * * *

DEAR MRS. MAYFIELD:

I'm a 21-year-old working girl living at home. I pay my parents for my room and board, which I realize is only fair.

I have a new car which I am financing all by myself. My parents allow me to drive it to work and home again every day, but driving it to club meetings or to friends' homes after dark is absolutely forebidden.

They say it is too dangerous for me to be out alone in the evening. Well, I know there are dangers, but we can't lock ourselves in a cage to protect ourselves from all the dangers of the world, can we?

When I object, they say, "As long as you live at home you'll do as we say!" It seems to me a 21-year-old girl who owns her own car, and pays her room and board ought to be able to make some decisions for herself.

Am I being unreasonable or not?—JUST SICK

DEAR JUST SICK:

No wonder you're "just sick." You're a grown woman now, and you're being treated like a child. Oh, it's undoubtedly because your parents love you very, very much. BUT, there comes a time when the fledgling must leave the nest, and I would guess that now is the time for you to, perhaps, pay room and board elsewhere, and taste a bit of the freedom you're being denied.

How can you learn to use your wings until you've tried them Your parents mean the best, I'm sure, but sometimes meaning best ends in doing wrong. I'd say this was a case of just that.—M.M.

* * * *

DEAR MRS. MAYFIELD:

I have a problem — my older brother, who is 23. He lives with us (Mother, Dad and me — I'm 16). His son by a previous marriage also lives with us. My brother comes and goes as he pleases, doesn't work, eats constantly, and is always making his three-year-old scream.

He doesn't respect anyone and lives off and on with a woman who is twice his age and is no good. He cusses all the time and pays no attention to what Mom or Dad says to him. Mom has literally become his slave.

Please, Molly, tell me what to do. Should I stay out of it and say no more or what?—BOTHERED ONE

DEAR BOTHERED ONE:

If Mom and Dad put up with it, guess you'll have to. You are 16 and will be getting married one of these days and able to get away from it. It's deplorable that a situation like this should be allowed to develop but unless Mom or Dad takes over there isn't much hope for any improvement.

One thing you can do, though, is try and help the little fellow have a happier home by the many small attentions YOU can show him. —M.M.

Designer Pattern

PRINTED PATTERN

THE NEW DEEP DECOLLETAGE and a more classic version—both reveal the OLEG CASSINI genius for design! Printed Pattern M398 is very simle—all the magic is in the beautiful bosom and body shaping. Note for instance, the way the waist curves from slightly higher in front to natural at the sides to lower in back. Creates a narrow, willowy look you will love. The bow that marks the low decolletage is set on a separate bias band. Devastate the man in your, or an entire audience—sew and wear either version to Spring, Summer parties. Choose silk linen, shantung, crepe, faille, fine cotton.

Printed Pattern M398 is available in Misses' Sizes 8, 12, 14, 16 and 18. Size 16 requires 2⅞ yards 39-inch fabric.

BACK TO COLLEGE go the bicycles, golf clubs, surfboards and skis that visited here with their collegiate owners during Easter vacation. Donald Atwood of REA Express demonstrates the TLC that traveling birthday cakes receive.

Anything Goes ... But Students

By CURTYNE DRISCOLL

Personnel at REA Express is braced for the onslaught of skis, bicycles, surfboards and golf clubs that will signal the end of Easter vacation for their collegiate owners this week.

"The only thing we can't ship is a live person," said Herbert Carpenter, chief clerk of the Long Beach office.

Sporting goods and luggage are not the only things that go to college. REA, formerly Railway Express Agency, does a brisk business in delivering laundry. Many a Long Beach mother receives a 28 or 30 pound case of dirty laundry every week or so to do up and return.

"It seems to give the students a feeling of closeness with home," commented Wilbur Lewis Bostic, manager. "We rather doubt that a laundry case is ever returned without some homemade cookies in it."

The local office had one steady exchange of laundry between a student in New York and her mother here. It takes four days, or if she's really desperate, it can go by air today and be delivered in New York tomorrow from door to door.

MOTHERS BEING the way they are, a large number of homemade birthday cakes travel by express to distant relatives. They are sent in open top cartons covered with clear plastic and, according to Bostic, get very tender loving care.

The new emphasis on visual education has resulted in a new type of cargo for the agency. Educational films visit California State College at Long Beach and Long Beach City College on a tight schedule. They travel strictly by air and there is a constant coming-and-going in increasing colume.

"Within five years I see everything in small shipments (less than a railway car or truckload) going entirely by air," Bostic stated.

"We now make shipments from Los Angeles to New York in five hours and are trying to solve the problem of transportation time to-and-from the airports. About the middle of April we hope to have some helicopter service from Long Beach Airport to LA International."

REA pioneered in air transport, with their first package air-borne in 1933. Dollar volume has increased from $1,000,000 in 1940 to a current $60,000,000.

YOU CAN STILL hire a guard armed with a sawed-off shotgun to travel with your shipment at $6.68 per hour. This may be of less interest to senders of birthday cakes than it is to the large number of coin collector-speculators who are currently shipping silver dollars briskly all over the U.S. as a result of the announcement made in Washigton that there would be no resumption of dollar coinage.

"Coins all travel in canvas bags," said Bostic. "And just about the most revolting thing that can happen to us is to have one of those bags break."

Carpenter's "most revolting" experience happened long ago, but it made an indelible impression on him. He and another man were assigned to the job of delivering an alligator to the Pike.

"Unfortunately," said Carpenter, "I got the end with the teeth."

The agency had a lively day with a shipment of snakes going from a State College professor to the Black Mountain Zoological Gardens.

ONE SNAKE GOT loose and found its way from the warehouse to the front counter where there was a goodly number of lady customers.

"It caused quite a commotion," said Bostic in what must be an understatement. "We called the professor and he came down and recaptured it."

Why didn't you just shove it out the door, he was asked.

"Well, we certainly couldn't do that," he said. "We must protect our shipments."

Sixtieth Fete on Sunday

Mr. and Mrs. Percy Hanewinckel will be honored next Sunday on the occasion of their sixtieth wedding anniversary at a dinner party at Sam's Sea Food Restaurant in Surfside.

The honorees, who live at 724 Vernon St., were married in Crescent City, Okla., in 1904. They moved to Long Beach in 1920 where Mr. Hanewinckel has owned and operated the Boys Transfer Company until his recent retirement. He is a past master of Neptune Lodge 619 of Masons and she is a member of Eastern Star Lodge.

* * * *

HOSTS for the dinner party will be the couple's three sons, Doyle, Jerry and Lowell Hanewinckel, and their wives, and a grandson, Len Herendeen. The couple had six children, 11 grandchildren and 11 great-grandchildren.

Singers and Dancers at Auditorium

A troupe of entertainers from the Norton Voice and Dance Studio of South Gate will headline the Community Program sponsored by the Long Beach Recreation Department Monday at 7:30 p.m. at Municipal Auditorium.

Included among the performers will be Pearl Riebe and her son, Jim. Mrs. Riebe is a song writer, pianist and vocalist. Her son is a vocalist and has appeared on the Lawrence Welk show.

Other members of the group are Donna Caswell, tap and modern jazz dancing; Vivianna Ross, vocalist; L. L. Kassak, dancer; the De Manies and Zappos, exhibition ballroom dancing; Cynthia Hocott, toe dancer; Gayle Sauen, the Charleston and Gloria Masterson, baton twirler.

* * * *

AL ROSS will serve as master of ceremonies. Community singing directed by Carl H. Robertson with Regenia Beam as accompanist will open the program.

The Tyo Orchestra will play for old time and square dancing following the stage show. Joe Marshall will be the caller.

A Campaign, and Away They GO-P!

Exciting schedule of events planned for forthcoming 12th annual Republican Women's Conference in Washington, D.C., April 7 to 11 elicits anticipatory smiles from Long Beach trio of dynamic leaders who will attend.

They're (from left) Mrs. Logan Goudknight, president of California Federation of Republican Women (membership is approximately 60,000), Mrs. Roland Coltrane, president of 32nd Congressional District Republican Women's Club; and Mrs. J. Lloyd O'Donnell, vice chairman for women of Republican State Central Committee and national program chairman.

Also expected to attend from Long Beach is Mrs. John D. Bowler Jr., co-chairman of Los Angeles County Goldwater-for-President committee.

Mrs. Patricia Reilly Hitt of Orange, Republican national committeewoman for California, is chairman of the delegation of 100 women from all parts of the state who will jet to Washington for the five days of intensive study and orientation in political techniques. This is one of the largest groups ever to attend the conference.

Headquarters will be the Sheraton Park Hotel. Mrs. Elly M. Peterson, assistant chairman of Republican National Committee, will direct the conference which will be considered the official kick-off for the GOP campaigns of 1964. Over 3,000 women are expected.

Senator Margaret Chase Smith of Maine will be the keynote speaker at the opening session and all GOP potential presidential nominees, with the exception of Nixon and Lodge, will be speakers, as will GOP leaders in Congress.

Top 'Y' Officer to Speak at Membership Drive Tea

Mrs. Earl Cranston of Claremont will be the featured speaker at a YWCA membership tea on Thursday at 1:30 p.m. at 550 Pacific Avenue.

Mrs. Cranston is a member of the national board of the "Y" and has been vice president-at-large as well as serving on its world executive committee. At one time she was a member of the Pasadena Board of Education and was on the City Council of Redlands.

Mrs. Harry Serex, chairman of the membership committee, will preside at the tea. She will be assisted by committee members, Mmes. Pearle Anderson, Henry Bodes, J. D. Gabrial, Thurman Goode, D. A. Morrison, M. Earle Radebaugh, Rex Swartz, Misses Marjorie Dougherty and Katherine Morrison.

MRS. CRANSTON will confer with the local YWCA staff in the morning on aspects of the national YWCA convention in Cleveland, O., April 20 to 25. She will be entertained at luncheon by Mrs. James Starr, president of the board of directors.

Benefit Party

Women's Guild, Church of Religious Science, will have a benefit luncheon and card party Thursday noon at 505 E. 36th St. Mrs. Ray Burkland, president, will be in charge of arrangements assisted by Glodine White. Music will be presented by Virgil and Michael Haskins. Guests are welcome.

CHEF OF THE WEEK

Wins Votes at Stove, Too

By MILDRED K. FLANARY
L. P-T Food Editor

He has held 15 elected offices in Long Beach—six in Los Angeles County and six in the State of California—all in the field of real estate. So one could deduce that he's in the real estate business.

Today's Chef of the Week, Arnold B. Berg, has just been elected president, Long Beach Apartment House Association for 1964, and was recently appointed to the City Planning Commission by City Manager John Mansell. (Mansell cooks, too!)

The real estate profession was the culmination — not the beginning — of Berg's business experiences. Back in his native town of Minot, N. D. at the age of 14, he became a clerk (after school hours) in one of the local banks.

* * * *

BERG was graduated from Minot High School, studied at the University of Minnesota, Minot State Teacher's College, and then migrated to the State of Washington. It was only to visit relatives, but he remained to complete several courses in law at Washington State U.

In the late 30s he came to Long Beach and accepted a position as general manager of a grocery chain which later became a part of the gigantic Safeway Stores.

* * * *

WORLD WAR II interrupted his career and he served as a member of an infantry training cadre for more than a year. Returning to civilian life, Berg became production manager of the Electric Development Co., which was engaged in the manufacture of submersible pumps.

But to get to his real estate career. He had dabbled to some extent in the procurement of run-down properties, rehabilitation and selling. This was in the late 30's.

Since that time he has served as chairman of the Long Beach Board of Realtors' legislative committee, as its vice president, its president, and on its board of directors. These same offices can be duplicated with relationship to the Long Beach Apartment House Association, and the Associated Property Owners of Long Beach, as well.

Arnold B. Berg

BERG is a member of the Chamber of Commerce, American Legion Post 27, Elks Lodge 888, and was a charter member of the Society of Real Estate Appraisers 94. In 1960, he was selected as Realtor-of-the-Year by the Long Beach Board.

A director of the CREA (California Real Estate Association) for seven years, Berg has been its "veep," its state director at large, and a member of the multiple listing committee.

He was chosen as chairman of the Southern Division of CREA on Planning and Zoning in 1961; and in 1962, was one of the authors compiling the pamphlet on planning and zoning which has now been published by CREA for use of California realtors and city planners in the State of California.

Aside from keeping up with him, Mrs. Berg (Tecky) has served as hostess for the International Beauty Congress for the past 10 years.

* * * *

UPLAND game hunting, trap shooting and golf are his modes of relaxation, and his golf game seems to improve when playing with borrowed clubs. Each year Berg returns to South Dakota to hunt with five friends from five different states, with whom he has hunted for years.

The Bergs divide their time between Long Beach and Palm Springs in their camper-trailer. While there, our "Chef" does all the cooking, and we're told, his salesmanship holds out when it comes to selling his own cooking.

His recipe today, quite naturally, is for pheasant.

HUNTERS PHEASANT
"South Dakota Style"

Wash pheasant in salt water and carefully cut out all shot.

1 tblsp. aromatic bitters
1 tblsp. lemon juice
¼ cup water

---

1 2½-lb. pheasant cut into serving pieces
1 tblsp. salt
2 tsp. accent
1 tsp. garlic salt
2 eggs, well beaten
1½ cups crushed corn flakes
½ cup flour
1 cup margarine or butter

Combine bitters, lemon juice and water in small sauce pan. Heat to boiling.

Season pheasant pieces with combined salt, accent and garlic salt. Place pheasant pieces in shallow pan. Pour hot sauce over pheasant. Let stand at room temperature for 1 hour, turning pieces frequently. Drain, saving the leftover sauce; combine with eggs.

Coat pheasant pieces, first with flour, then dip in egg mixture, and then in crushed corn flakes.

Fry in one cup of butter or margarine using electric frypan set at 350°. Fry to golden brown on both sides —usually about 15 minutes per side. Serves 4.

ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

'The Lord Helps Those...'

DEAR ABBY: I am a 32-year-old widow with four boys to raise. I have no desire to marry again, but all my friends tell me my boys need a father. They are always arranging for me to meet this man and that man. I love my boys very much, and am raising them in a good Christian atmosphere. They are good boys, and I discipline them when they need it just as a father would do. I take in sewing and manage to keep my bills paid, so I don't need a husband to support us. I believe if the good Lord intends for me to have another husband, He will take care of it Himself. Do you think I should accept the company of men with marriage in mind just because people think my boys need a father, even though I don't think I need a band?—SATISFIED

ABBY

DEAR SATISFIED: As a Christian you must know that the Lord said, "It is not good that man should be alone." (Genesis II, 18.) And the same goes for woman. God helps those who help themselves, and perhaps God is trying to help you through thoughtful friends.

* * * *

DEAR ABBY: Have you any suggestions for getting our son to date a certain girl? This girl is charming, intelligent, has a wonderful personality, and would be an ideal match for our son. He is 25, but he seems to prefer the more glamorous, flirty type. We know that once he gets to know this girl, he would appreciate her fine qualities.—PARENTS

DEAR PARENTS: I cant tell you how to get your son to date a certain girl, but I can tell you how to sour him on her before he even sees her. Just keep telling him how "good" she would be for him! Your best move would be to arrange for them to meet "accidentally." And let him "discover" her for himself.

* * * *

DEAR ABBY: Our baby is only three months old. My husband's family is quite wealthy and they have spent a lot on gifts for her. I must admit there is a great deal our baby wouldn't have if it weren't for them. On the other hand, my parents barely make ends meet, and, though they would love to buy things for our baby, they can't afford to. Ours is the only grandchild on both sides, and both sets of grandparents are wild about her. But we don't want her to grow up thinking that because all the presents come from one set of grandparents the other set doesn't love her as much. What can we do about this? Or should we just keep quiet and teach our child that love means more than presents?—NEW PARENTS

DEAR PARENTS: The affection of very young children is easily bought with gifts. It takes a mature mind to reason that "love" means more than presents. Your husband should explain this to his generous parents. They'll understand.

Hope for the Best

Today's hand sprung from the fertile brain of Donald Parson and may be found in his book "Fall of the Cards."

Obviously, it never took place, but it does illustrate one important principle of dummy play. It is to try to find some combination of adverse cards that will allow you to make your contract.

Once East discards a club at trick one, it is not difficult for South to get a count on the trumps. West has all six of them. It is also reasonable to assume that East holds all nine clubs so that West started with six spades, three hearts and four diamonds.

As a reader you can look at the East-West hands and confirm this. You also note that West's three hearts include both the queen and ten.

Declarer South had to assume this, too, since if East held either of the hearts, there would be no possible way to make the contract.

* * * *

BEFORE going any further, see if you can figure out the way South took advantage of the favorable heart situation to make the slam.

He started out by drawing all West's trumps. He had to make five discards from dummy. Four were low diamonds. The other was the ace of clubs.

Then he started on hearts. Dummy's jack held the first heart trick and the king the next one. Then he led the deuce of clubs from dummy and while East made his king, he had to give South the last three tricks with the queen of clubs and ace-nine of hearts.

New Films to Interest Sports Fans

Long Beach Public Library has films to appeal to almost everyone. In addition to a permanent collection of more than 500 16mm films, the library will offer another 14 during April through the Southern California Film Council Circuit.

For sports fans there are: "Big Moments in Sports," the story of the 1951 Giant-Dodger play-off and Roger Bannister's breaking of the 4 minute mile in 1954; "Riding High," which follows a horseback excursion in the Canadian Rockies; and "Outboard Fisherman, U.S.A.," produced by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service. "Small Craft Safety" is especially timely now that boats are being readied for the season ahead.

* * * *

Other films which may be borrowed in April include: "Camel Who Took a Walk," made from a favorite children's picture book; "Dances of India," "A Date With British Columbia," "Denmark, Fairytale Lane," "Everybody's Prejudiced," "Hawaiian Islands — Their Origin and Nature," "Literature in America: The Short Story," "Poland and the Soviet Power," "Siam" and "Many Faces of Spain."

Recent additions to the library's permanent collection are: "First Aid Now," "Four Black Days in November" and "Washington State—Appleland."

THE FABLE AND THE FACT — little known truths for media buyers

FABLE: SAN FRANCISCO HAS THE HIGHEST INDUSTRIAL PAYROLL IN NORTHERN CALIFORNIA

FACT: METRO SAN JOSE HAS THE HIGHEST INDUSTRIAL PAYROLL IN NORTHERN CALIFORNIA

As a media buyer, did you know this?

It means the average wage earner in Metro San Jose has more money to spend for your goods or services than one living in San Francisco. About $600 per year more.* This makes him a mighty good customer.

Yet many media buyers still think San Francisco is the biggest, richest market in Northern California. It's not. Many still think they can cover Northern California with San Francisco newspapers. They can't. ABC shows the biggest one covers only 13% of rich Metro San Jose families.

That's why — to sell Northern California — you must sell the rich, money-spending people in Metro San Jose.

And the only way to reach them is with the Mercury and News.

Don't Shield Child From Death Fact

NEW YORK — Children who are shielded from the fact of death develop fantasies about death that are worse than the reality, according to Dr. Benjamin Spock.

Writing in the April Redbook, the noted child-care expert stated that being able to discuss a death in the family is a comfort to the children as well as to the parents.

It's only when the children are not given a satisfactory explanation, Dr. Spock said, that they turn to their imaginations for morbid and sometimes damaging answers.

Death in the family often involves a guilt reaction, Dr. Spock warned. "A young child is apt to feel—unconsciously, at least—that he bears some of the responsibility for the death of a brother or sister or parent." So, if a child has ever had angry thoughts about the person who died, he might feel that he caused the death.

* * * *

SINCE A child is able to suppress his feelings or disguise them to a remarkable degree, Dr. Spock told parents that mourning is a natural and necessary way for them to recover from a loss. "With adults and children," he said, "there is always a deep sense of loss that cannot be evaded or patched up quickly."

It isn't true, Dr. Spock pointed out, that the child who hardly seems to notice the loss, or the mother who remains cheerfully considerate, has somehow escaped the blow. He cautioned that grief which is held back may break out in disguised forms such as anger, phobias or compulsions.

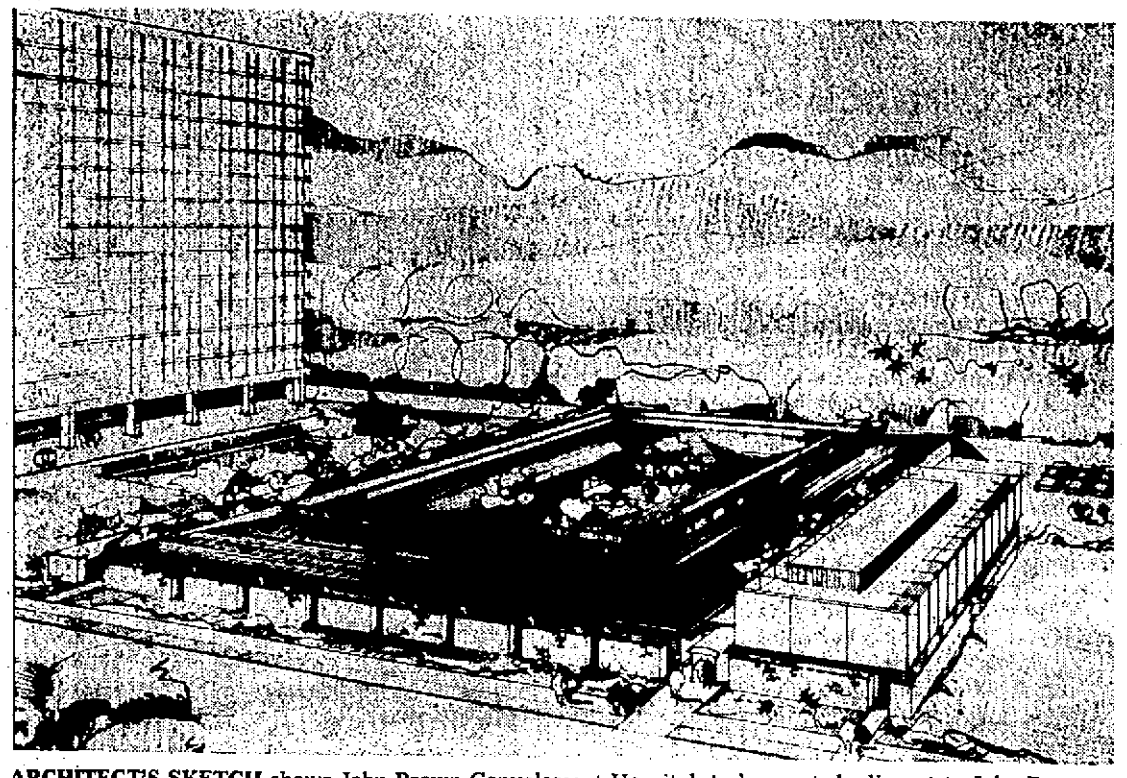

One effect on a child of suppressing grief altogether, Dr. Spock said, is that he may grow up afraid to love anyone deeply because of the risk of being deprived again.

To prevent this from happening, parents are advised to discuss death seriously and honestly, to talk about the person who died openly, and to answer a child's questions in a way he can understand.

Hospital Will Be Near Towers

ARCHITECT'S SKETCH shows John Brown Convalescent Hospital, to be erected adjacent to John Brown Towers, 3737 Atlantic Ave. Opening of $400,000 hospital is slated for early in 1965.

June Set for Start of John Brown Hospital

Third phase of the John Brown retirement center under construction at 3737 Atlantic Avenue materialized last week as an announcement ceremony was held for a convalescent hospital just north of the present John Brown Towers.

Start of construction is scheduled for about June 1.

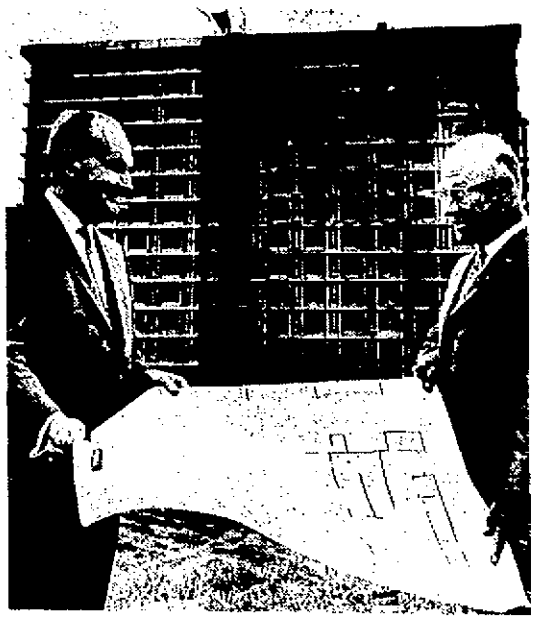

Official representatives for the occasion included Mayor Edwin Wade; Ray B. Bliley, first vice president of the Chamber of Commerce; and Clinton H. Fowler, vice president of the John Brown Schools Foundation.

* * * *

THE $400,000 hospital, designed by Hugh Gibbs and son Donald, architects, AIA, will be a 15,000 square foot, single story 72 bed structure.

The Brown project for senior citizens also includes a restaurant under construction to the south of the Towers.

Formal opening of the Towers and restaurant is scheduled the first of June.

LOOKING OVER THE PLANS
Clinton H. Fowler (left), vice president of the John Brown Foundation, and Ray B. Bliley, first vice president, Long Beach Chamber of Commerce, check over plans for new hospital to be built on north side of John Brown Towers, shown in background.

FOWLER said the hospital will serve as a medical facility for Towers residents but also will be available to the public.

Each of the 169 apartments in the Towers will be so equipped that an emergency button can be used to summon medical aid from the hospital.

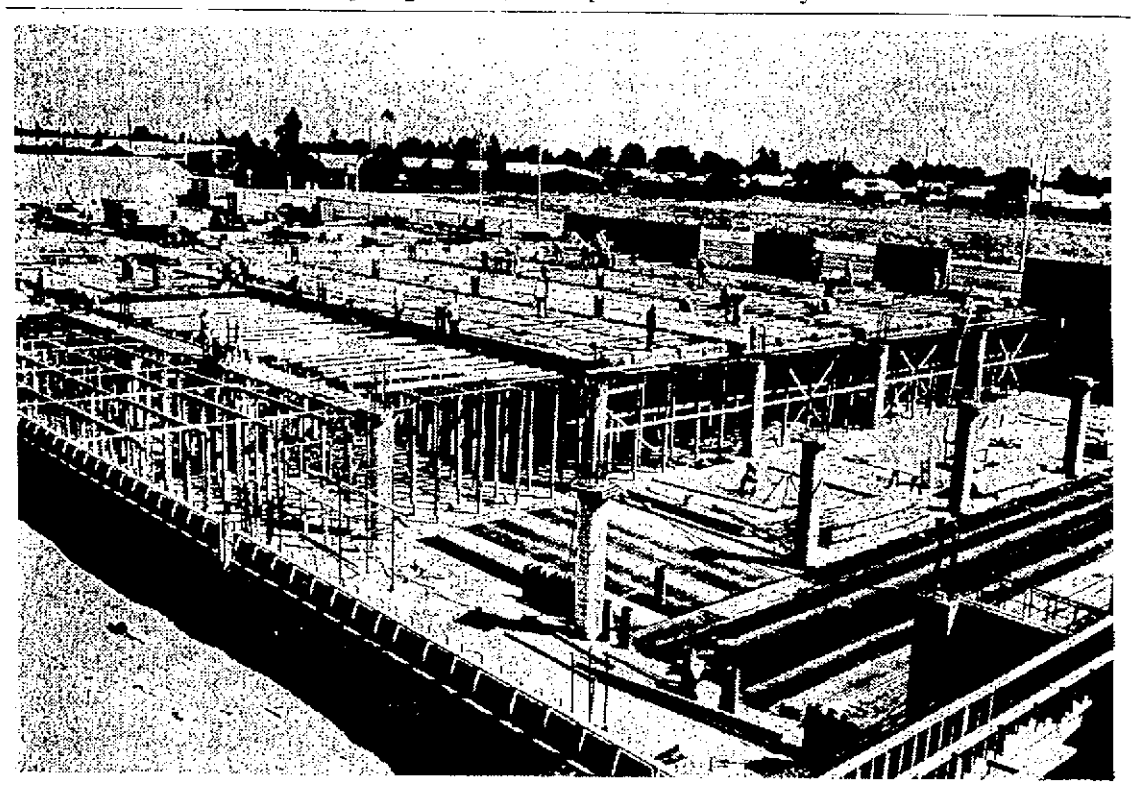

The retirement center, following guidelines laid down by a presidential conference on aging, is designed to provide housing, food and medical care for Towers residents, who must be at least 62 years old.

THE HOSPITAL will be built on land leased from Mrs. A. C. Sellery, widow of the physician who founded Seaside Hospital in Long Beach.

Opening of the new unit is scheduled for the first of next year.

Interim arrangements for medical care of Towers residents moving in prior to the opening of the hospital will be made with other hospitals, Fowler said.

He explained that medical service and insurance are optional for Towers residents, as will be food and housekeeping services.

JOSEPH KUEHNLE
Urges Fair Values

Hits Bias in Property Appraisals

By VERN ANTHONY
Southland Progress Editor

Recognizing a growing challenge facing the property appraisal profession, the president of the American Institute of Real Estate Appraisers last week prodded John Q. Public to be more careful in selecting reputable appraisers.

Joseph G. Kuehnle of Chicago, in Los Angeles to help make arrangements for the Institute's national convention to be held there in November, spelled out the problem at a press conference in the Ambassador Hotel.

* * * *

HE POINTED to recent 'scandals' in interstate highway right of way acquisition appraisals and in mortgage lending practices. Some lending organizations, he said, have 'kited' appraisals in biased and unethical procedure to obtain higher loans.

However, he saw no critical problems in Southern California, where realty dealings have been at a fast pace the past few years.

He said the tremendous interstate highway program involving acquisition of hundreds of millions of dollars worth of land has increased the need for competent appraisers to "protect the national economy."

* * * *

KUEHNLE STRESSED responsibility of the public to employ qualified appraisers belonging to the Institute or similar organizations and of appraisers to be ethical and unbiased in their valuations. (Institute members designate themselves MAI—member of Appraisal Institute.)

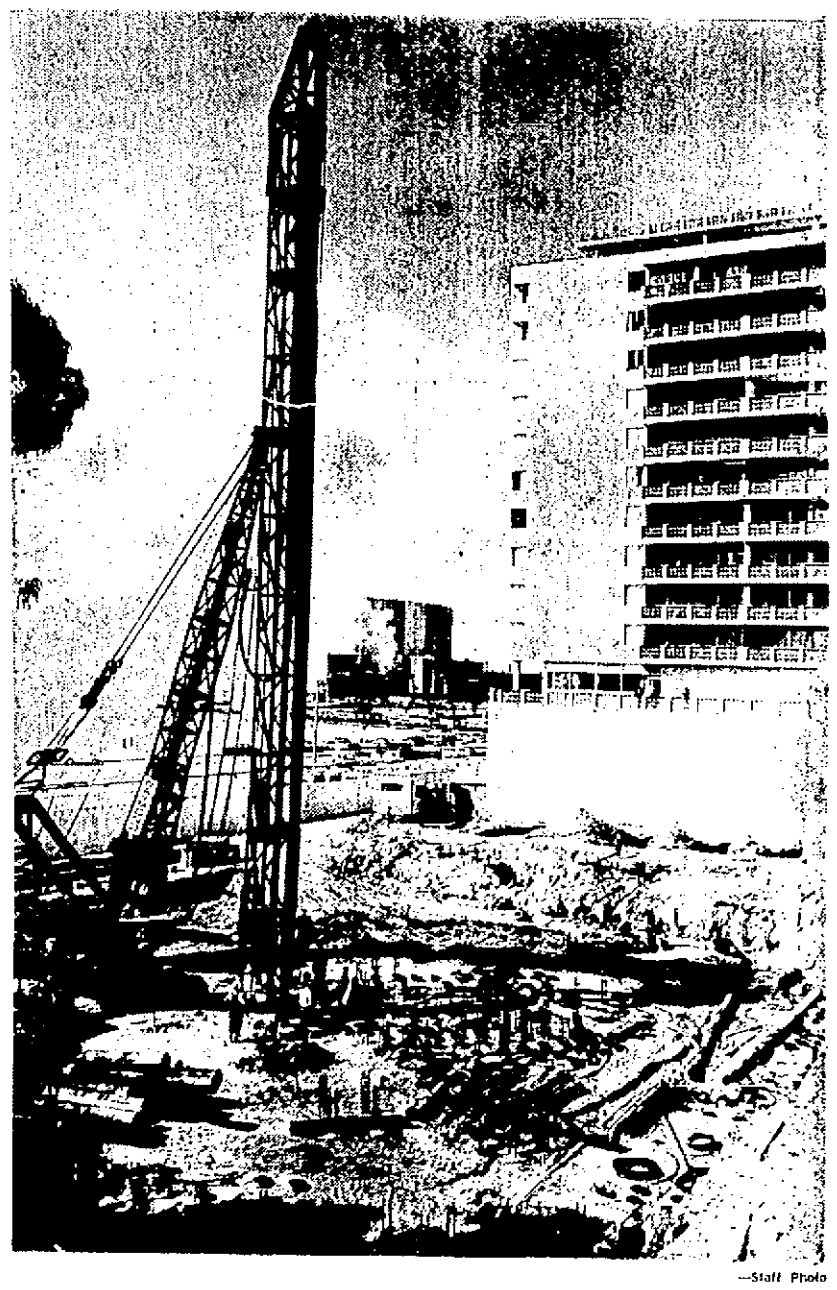

"The Institute," Kuehnle said, "aims to enforce ethical and impartial procedure."

The Southern California Chapter of the Institute, headed by Stanley E. Goode Jr., of Santa Ana, now has a Standards of Practice Committee investigating all complaints involving members, and will enforce discipline.

Kuehnle formerly did appraisal work for the Cook County assessor in Chicago. He now is vice president of Walter R. Kuehnle & Co.

31-STORY BUILDING TO RISE HERE
Steam from piledriver partially obscures big Long Beach Arena (center background) in this view of "groundwork" for builder Henry Sassoon's 31-story circular apartment tower under construction at foot of Linden Avenue. Skyscraper is going up just east of "600 Ocean" apartment building shown at right, which was built by Sassoon and already is occupied.

ON SIGNAL HILL

Computer to Expedite High-Rise

Computer processing will be used to expedite construction of the 12-story and penthouse condominium apartment building to be erected in Signal Hill at Hill Street and Cherry Avenue.

J. R. Slatton, executive vice president of Tri-Cor-Inc., general contractors for the $1,400,000 job, said the firm already had used data processing successfully.

* * * *

GROUNDBREAKING for the new project was held last week. City officials, principals in the project, oil company representatives and other guests participated in a luncheon program at the Hilltop Cafe following the groundbreaking.

City Administrator Frank Baxter hailed the event as opening a new chapter for Signal Hill comparable to the finding of oil in 1921.

Toshe Corporation, headed R. A. Simmons, is developer of the high-rise project, on which work is due to start in April.

NAREB Head, in L.B., Raps Administration Bill

Strong opposition to the big Omnibus Housing bill now before Congress was voiced in Long Beach last week by Edward E. Mendenhall, president of the National Association of Real Estate Boards (NAREB).

"I think it is clear the intended passengers on this 'omnibus' are free-loaders. The bill has subsidies for almost everyone," Mendenhall said addressing Realtors at their breakfast meeting in the Crown cafeteria.

The NAREB chief, who lives in High Point, N. C., and is a brother of Mayor William Mendenhall of Signal Hill, stressed several housing bill proposals which NAREB especially opposes.

* * * *

HE CHARGED that a proposal to insure a $50 million mortgage for a developer to set up a new town would lead to federal control tactics in such new communities.

He also opposed expansion of public housing on the grounds that federal ownership of family shelter is "inherently wrong." He argued that housing for people in need of help is a welfare problem best handled by local agencies.

He did favor certain provision of the administration's bill, but with a minimum of "government interference and subsidies."

* * * *

ON THE CIVIL RIGHTS question, Mendenhall said:

"Realtors are firmly opposed to the forced housing laws adopted or proposed by a number of states and cities in which the traditional right to own, rent, and dispose of real property as the owner sees fit is destroyed under the guise of providing a new so-called right for individuals of minority groups.

"The point which unfortunately is so often overlooked in the whole situation is that social acceptance, which is so bound up with human emotions, cannot be legislated.

"As much as we may deplore snobbery, class consciousness, racial bias, or whatever you want to call it,

Plan North Sea Oil Exploration

Signal Oil & Gas Co., Richfield Oil Corp., and Marathon Oil Co. through its wholly owned subsidiary, Marathon International Oil Co., have joined as equal partners in an oil and gas exploration venture in the United Kingdom area of the North Sea, officials of the three companies said last week. Signal is operator for the group.

Geophysical surveys of an area of 25,000 square miles off the eastern coast of England will be started as soon as weather conditons are suitable.

Builders to Meet

Western builders from all states this side of the Rocky Mountains will meet May 26-28 in San Francisco's Fairmont Hotel for the Sixth Annual Pacific Coast Builders Conference.

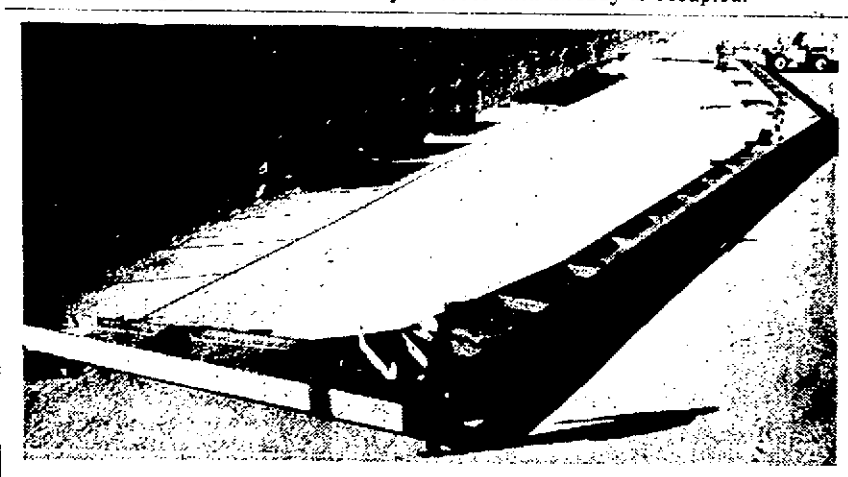

The "Soaring '60s" is the convention theme, according to Donald H. Stoneson, PCBC Conference president for the second year in a row.

The conference is sponsored by the Home Builders Council of California, Inc., representing 14 individual home builder associations.

Dupuy to Address Civic Association

"The Rumford Act vs. The Freedom Initiative" will be discussed Tuesday at the luncheon meeting of the Artesia Street-Long Beach Boulevard Civic Improvement Association.

Reg F. Dupuy, legislative chairman of the Long Beach District Board of Realtors will be speaker. The meeting, to be held at Angelino's Cafe, 940 S. Long Beach Blvd., Compton, will be open to the public.

Floors Prestressed, Hoisted Into Position on Torrance Project

By VERN ANTHONY
Southland Progress Editor

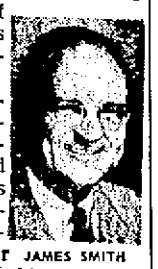

Several stages in prestressed lift slab process construction under way on Sakura Gardens project in Torrance are shown here. Work is being done by Western Concrete Structures Co., Gardena. Site is at Tandem Way and Dalemead Street. Complex includes square blocks of two and three bedroom apartments—13 with fireplaces—with two-story structures around three sides and six five-story buildings in center area. Features will include heated pool, cabana, Japanese garden and individual patios. Unusual construction on central building involves hoisting of completed prestressed floors into position on upright supports. Photo 'A' shows workmen polishing surface of concrete floor on stack of slabs. Picture 'B' was taken as two floor slabs were being hoisted. Photo 'C' illustrates how slabs slide up along uprights and are fixed into position. In 'D,' three top floors have been lifted. There will be six buildings like this one in central section of apartment complex. Illustrated at bottom are overall views of how Sakura Gardens will look when finished and a drawing of how Japanese garden will appear on completion. Prestressed lift slab process of construction is not new; but only in late years has advanced technology brought it into major importance. The lift slab method is simply a process of casting floor and roof slabs directly on top of one another. Columns put in place before the slabs are cast become pedestals on which hydraulic jacks are placed to lift the slabs vertically into their final positions. Western has become a leader in this type of construction, which has proved to be speedier and more economical, it is said. This lift slab process has been used in various other Southland projects. Examples are: Costa Mesa High School and Nortronics Division, Northrop Aircraft Corp., Anaheim. In fact, several major engineering advancements in lift slab construction were pioneered by Western.

Star Alumnus of SAC Gets New Honor

James A. Smith, who is general manager of Eastman Kodak's Pacific southern sales division, and who was Santa Ana College's outstanding alumnus of 1960, keeps right on winning honors.

JAMES SMITH

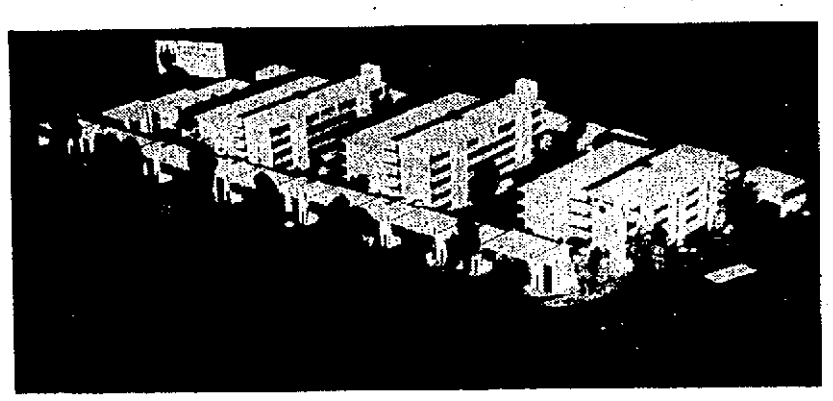

The California Junior College Association picked him at its San Francisco spring convention for achievement in his career.

The organization took note of the fact that Smith was a junior college student in getting the initial phases of his college training. Subsequently, Smith was graduated from Northwestern University. He has been with Eastman 34 years.

While in Santa Ana High School and Santa Ana College, Smith was an honor student. He played football, basketball and baseball for the college, and ran on its track team. He headed the college's frosh and soph classes, and headed the Associated Students during his campus years. Still active in alumni affairs, he now lives at 1012 Eastridge Drive, Whittier.

Dividend Declared

Kaiser Steel Corporation's Board of Directors last week declared the regular quarterly dividend of 36½ cents per share on the preferred stock, and a dividend of $1.4375 per share on the 5¾ per cent convertible preference stock, both payable March 31 to stockholders of record at the close of business on March 13.

AS VIEWED BY LEADERS

Western Business Outlook Is Bright

Western business leaders are predicting a prosperous second quarter in 1964, according to the latest survey by the Prudential Insurance Co's Western Business Forecast panel.

About 87 per cent of the responding businessmen are forecasting that second quarter business will equal or exceed first quarter results of this year.

Similar optimism prevails comparing the upcoming second quarter to the corresponding one in 1963. About 85 per cent of the panel predict their business will equal or exceed the 1963 period. More than half expect gains in the 1-10 per cent range while approximately one-sixth are expecting even greater increases.

* * * *

THE AVERAGE degree of optimism expressed by the panel has remained almost unchanged in the past three surveys, although the opinions of the separate industries and geographical areas have varied from quarter to quarter. The finance, insurance and real estate sector is decidedly more optimistics than on the previous survey and views the coming quarter more favorably than any other industry.

The service group is also showing very positive views with 91 per cent expecting the second quarter to equal or better the year-ago level. Agriculture-extractive is the least optimistic sector.

In the various geographic groupings the Southern California, Arizona, Nevada area registered a high degree of optimism with 83 per cent of those answering returning equal or better predictions for the upcoming quarter.

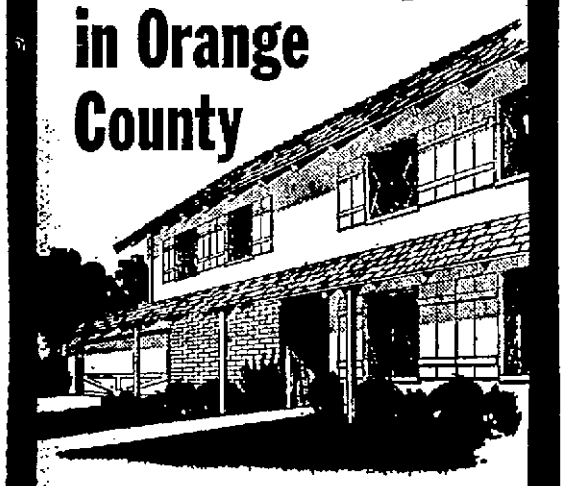

Small Business Loan Data Aired

Nearly $24 million in loans were approved by the Small Business Administration during January, according to an announcement by Alvin P. Meyers, regional director of SBA for Southern California, Arizona, and Southern Nevada.

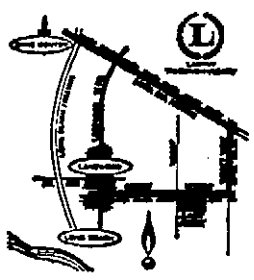

Approvals for the month included 347 business loans for $17.5 million and 164 disaster loans for $1.4 million. The balance was divided between local development companies and small business investment companies.

Twelve of the business loans went to new enterprises. SBA loans to local development companies created an additional 260 new jobs.

FEATHER RIVER WATER...

A SHIFTING OF LAND VALUES IN SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

THE FACTS

- Nearly two billion dollars is being spent to bring Feather River water to Southern California
- An additional 8,000,000 people are due to arrive in the next few years
- Residential land in Orange County is now selling for $32,000 per acre

Don't these facts suggest that low-priced, semi-arid lands in Los Angeles County are about to come into their own?

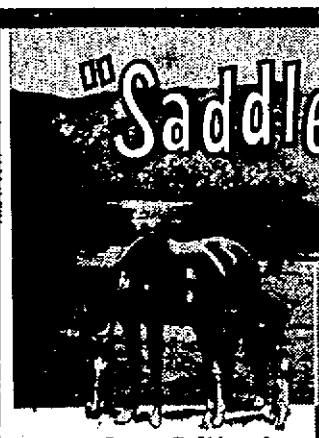

A very interesting treatise on the Feather River water project has just been released. Available to land investors without charge.

W-BAR-B RANCHES' LAND
NEARLY HALF SOLD
(Parcels 10 Acres and Up)

Southern California Mountain-Ringed Recreational Retreat . . . for Discriminating Buyers

Close-In Location—Two hours, twenty minutes from Los Angeles over freeways and excellent roads in "Old West" seclusion and charm. Historic gold-rush area in beautiful natural basin is protected by surrounding mountains. Accessible by three routes—and an airstrip on the ranch.

Lush, Growing Land—In Walker Basin, an area of working ranches with lots of trees and green vegetation, the property is rich in history. On it the famous old Joe Walker gold mine was closed, after water came in faster than it could be pumped out.

Fabulous Climate—At the 3500-foot level it is definitely cooler in Summer, enjoyable all year. Four seasons, blue skies, good rainfall, some snow, and clean, clear mountain air make this a wonderful vacationland all year.

Water and Utilities—Fed by runoff from surrounding mountains, the water table is reportedly good. A 60-foot well sunk in 1962 tested 240 gallons per hour. Electricity is available, and telephones are now in.

A Great Playland—Surrounded on three sides by Sequoia National Forest and overlooked by towering peaks to 8,000 feet, this is fantastic country. Ideal for horses, it provides practically endless miles of adventure on horseback. Just 16 miles north you can fish, swim, boat and water-ski on Lake Isabella. Another 15 miles at Shirley Meadows, with good snow, ski-runs and rope tows.

Wildlife Paradise—Excellent hunting, easy limits on a variety of game birds, and one of the largest deer herds in the state.

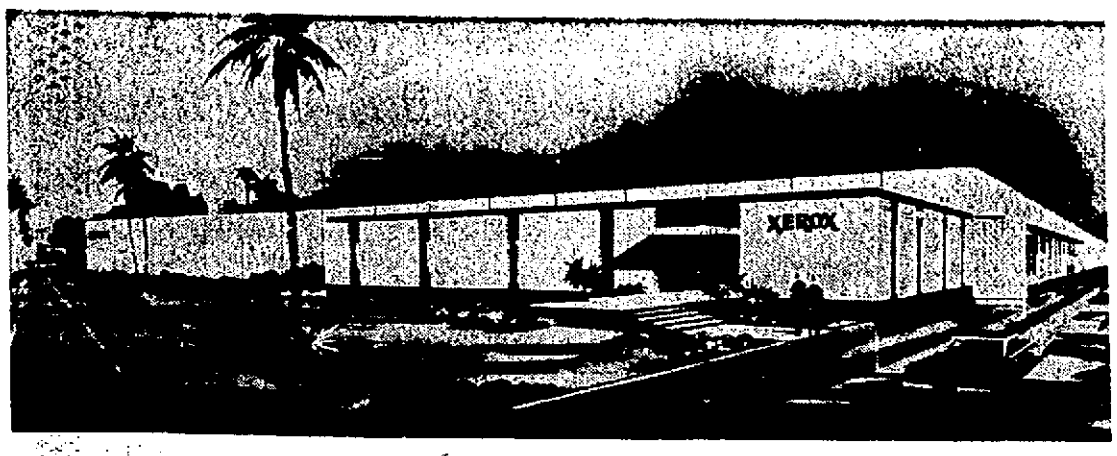

Acreages—These are nice spacious spreads—10 acres and larger. Once a working cattle ranch, but presently raising quarter horses, this is scenic land with oaks, rock formations, stream beds, flatlands and rolling hills. Each parcel has a choice of several sites for building that hideaway home. Plenty of land is available for you to divide and retain a view site for yourself.

Not a Cheap Speculation—No $10-down-and-$10-when-you-catch-me promotion—and not desert sand. This is good land at a fair price in an unspoiled high mountain valley setting, for those who hope to invest in recreational living. We insist you stand on the land and know what you are buying. But first, mail the coupon today for additional information.

we still must admit its existence and that it can be cured only by education which brings tolerance, understanding, and acceptance. The achievement of social consent will automatically solve any housing problem which may exist."

President John Webster of the Long Beach board presided at the meeting.

* * * *

IN THE ABSENCE of Mayor Edwin Wade of Long Beach, Mayor Mendenhall of Signal Hill presented Long Beach's key to the city to his brother.

Also present and representing the national association were Reg F. Dupuy and Clive Graham, and Al Skyes, regional vice president of the 22nd District in California. Others invited from neighboring realty boards attending were: Bea Axton, president of the Downey Board of Realtors; James Hartley, past regional vice president; Paul Williams, President of the Bellflower Board of Realtors and Robert Allred, junior past regional vice president of CREA.

* * * *

MELVIN L. MOULD, past president of the local board and now serving on the Brokers Institute as local representative to the national association, also was introduced.

Barbara Moss, local Realtor, and past national president of the Executive Officers Council of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, introduced Mendenall.

After the meeting Mendenhall paid a surprise visit to the Long Beach City Council and was recognized by Mayor Wade.

Santa Fe Springs Plant Readied for Xerox

SANTA FE SPRINGS — Xerox Corporation, manufacturer of graphic communications equipment, soon will occupy a new $1 million West Coast distribution center here.

The fully air-conditioned building is scheduled for completion about mid-year, at which time it will serve to speed parts and supplies to customers in a 10-state area, according to Alex N. Telischak, vice president, procurement and distribution.

* * * *

THE NEW CENTER will occupy $100,000 square feet of a 10-acre area near the Santa Ana Freeway. It is located along the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe railroad, is equipped with adjustable elevators to facilitate truck loading and will contain such features as automatic conveyors, engineered packing stations and floor to roof space utilization.

Xerox, which has branches in Anaheim and El Segundo, which was founded in 1906 as The Haloid Co., moved into the spotlight with its post World War II development of a dry copying process known as xerography, a feature of which is that it permits copies to be made in seconds on ordinary paper.

The Santa Fe Springs building is being constructed by the Noyes Roach Co. of Los Angeles and will be leased to Xerox upon completion by Arthur Gilbert & Associates, Beverly Hills real estate developers.

Contract Let to Hawthorne Firm

HAWTHORNE — The Cosmodyne Corp. has received the contract for fabrication and installation of the high-vacuum piping system for Stanford University's linear accelerator, Cosmodyne President James L. Bartlett Jr. announced last week.

The contract, placed by the Stanford Linear Accelerator Center as prime contractor to the Atomic Energy Commission, is approximately $800,000.

Cosmodyne also will install all of the high-vacuum pumps for the electron gun. Work on the contract will begin immediately, with completion scheduled towards the end of 1965.

Two Bekins Posts Filled

Kenneth P. Graydon of Long Beach has been appointed district sales manager for Bekins Van & Storage Co. in the Long Beach, Wilmington and Inglewood areas according to Lloyd W. Erxleben, Southern California regional manager.

K. P. GRAYDON C. A. LANGSTAFF

Appointment of Clinton A. Langstaff of Bellflower as corporation sales representative for Bekins in Inglewood also was announced.

Graydon and Langstaff will headquarter at the Bekins branch located at 2211 N. Long Beach Blvd. in Compton. Their territories will include Inglewood, Compton, Downey, Long Beach, San Bernardino, Redondo Beach, Manhattan Beach, Gardena and Torrance.

Students to Vie in L.B. Realtor Essay Contest

Barbara Moss, chairman of the Education Committee of the Long Beach District Board of Realtors, has announced the board will conduct an essay contest again this year.

Purpose of the annual contest is to stimulate a deeper appreciation of the importance of home ownership to the national security.

The contest is open to students in the 9th, 10th, 11th and 12th grades.

Deadline is May 15, so interested students are urged to start working on their essays at once.

The subject is—"The Home Is The Heart And Hope Of The Nation." Each entrant is required to submit a statement that it is his (or her) original work. Essays should not exceed 300 words in length.

Prizes and awards will be presented winners and one essay from each board will be entered in a statewide contest. Winner of the statewide contest and his parents will be taken to the state convention at the expense of the California Real Estate Association.

Realtors to Hear County Counsel

County Counsel Harold W. Kennedy will be guest speaker Tuesday morning at the Long Beach District Board of Realtors breakfast meeting.

He will discuss recent and important developments affecting Los Angeles County.

Special guests will be Supervisors Burton Chace and Frank Bonelli. The breakfast is at 7:15 a.m. in the Crown cafeteria.

'SURPLUS' SHIPPED TO GUAM

More than 400 tons of surplus equipment ranging from six-ton trucks to giant cranes covers open area on Pier A. Equipment, gathered from Arizona and California, was shipped last week to Guam and the Philippines aboard the SS Longview Victory. Equipment will be rebuilt and used in construction projects in Pacific. It is believed to be the largest surplus equipment movement on the West Coast since World War II.

'How Does Your Garden Grow?' Realtors Ask

COMPTON — The Yard Beautiful Contest sponsored annually by the Sales Clinic of the Compton-Lynwood Board of Realtors as a part of its Realtor Week Observance was announced recently by Jerry Petry, general chairman of Realtor Week, May 24-30.

Any resident of Compton or Lynwood is eligible to enter, but only front yards are considered.

Charlie Strohl and Ted Vian, associate members of the board, are in charge of the contest.

Awards will be made to first, second and third place winners from each city, and will be presented at an open house tea to be held at the Board Annex on the opening Sunday of Realtor Week.

Leah Stevens, also an associate member, is chairman of this portion of the contest. Assisting in the entire event will be other members of the Sales Clinic.

There still is ample growing time for those who have not yet started their planting. It is hoped that many home owners will help beautify our community through participation in the contest.

Register, Vote Drive Pushed by Pioneer Savings

Pioneer Savings & Loan Association again this year is conducting an intensive "Let's All Register, Let's All Vote" program in cooperation with the American Heritage Foundation.

As part of the program, all Pioneer offices are supplying information on registration and voting.

The firm also will utilize newspaper advertising space to urge more Southern California residents to go to the polls this year.

Robert R. Sprague, president of Pioneer and National Finance and Industry chairman of the American Heritage Foundation, said that his firm is working closely with several local organizations to help increase the number of people who vote.

In addition to local groups, Sprague is working to get all 6,000 savings and loan associations across the nation to tie-in and run similar campaigns.

McFarland, Sales Spectacular Speaker Hailed as 'Spellbinder'

"Spellbinding, intriguing, stimulating and personally challenging" are the describing words given to the impact to be experienced at the Annual Sales Spectacular, 7:45 p.m. Municipal Auditorium, Tuesday, when the Sales and Marketing Executives of Long Beach will present Dr. Kenneth McFarland in an address titled "Who Bites the Bountiful Hand?"

Named America's foremost public speaker by a nationwide survey; honored by Capt. Eddie Rickenbacher as the nation's No. 1 air passenger; 1957's outstanding salesman of America; and long prominent nationally as educator, businessman, industrial adviser, civic leader and authority on governmental and economic affairs, Dr. McFarland is the "riveter to seats" type of speaker to appear before this annual presentation by the association, according to James E. Miller, S&ME president.

Marshall Cram, will emcee a program of stage entertainment featuring the rhythms of his "Society West" quintet; vocal stylings by KTTV's songstress-commentator Teri York; and a sparkling new beachwear review from Rose Marie Reid, California swimsuit creator.

The Sales Spectacular was a sell-out last year, according to Miller, who said it is most important to make advance reservations for tickets by phoning their local office, 427-0804, or in Orange County, KE 5-2823.

Withholding Tax 'Comes of Age'

CHICAGO (AP),— It's the 21st birthday for the deduction of income tax from pay checks.

It began in 1943. A 5 per cent "Victory" tax was imposed to help siphon off excess purchasing power produced by full employment during the initial stages of the war.

The withholding rate was boosted to 20 per cent in mid-1943, and employers regularly deducted the tax from pay checks.

The rate was reduced in 1945 to 18 per cent. Take-home pay was again boosted in 1948 when the withholding rate was reduced to 15 per cent. It was boosted in 1950 to 18 per cent; then set at 20 per cent to run to 1954 when it was leveled at 18 per cent.

Now the new 14 per cent rate represents the first reduction in withholding tax in 10 years.

L.B. Baseball Rookie Invests Part of Bonus

A Boston Red Sox rookie from Long Beach who was signed last fall for a $20,000 bonus, already "plays like a pro in the 'investment league.'," according to a recent story in the Boston Herald.

The Herald article reports that Syd OBrien, 19, who has been playing winter ball with the Anaheim Red Sox farm team, has invested part of his bonus in mutual funds.

O'Brien, it said, was influenced by a family friend, Joseph Reed, who works for the Long Beach investment firm of Halbert, Hargrave & Co. Young O'Brien, the Herald said, put $5,000 into investments.

O'Brien said he realized he had limited years of earning capacity from baseball, so wanted to safeguard his financial future.

HOW NEW EMPLOYMENT OFFICE BUILDING WILL LOOK

NEW QUARTERS TO BEBUILT

L.B. Employment Service Will Move to 1350 Locust

A groundbreaking ceremony was held Friday for a 12,200 square foot building which will be occupied by the State Employment Service offices now located in Long Beach at 1313 Pine Ave.

The new structure, to be erected at 1350 Locust Ave., will be one story and of concrete block construction. It will be air conditioned and there will be a 18,160 square foot parking lot. It is being built by Mr. and Mrs. Russell F. Dansby and will be leased to the state.

* * * *

CONTRACTOR is R. S. Best of Long Beach; and plans were drawn by Palmer W. Palmer and Delma J. Daniel Jr., architects, A.I.A., also of this city.

The local employment office, with a staff of about 60, is managed by George Toll. They will move as soon as the new building is completed.

Toll has been manager here since 1943 and has been in the Public Employment Service 26 years.

* * * *

IN COMMENTING about the groundbreaking, Toll noted that the Employment Service here had made numerous moves over the years.

Locations and the years the offices were moved there have been as follows:

1921 Municipal Auditorium.
1933 645 W. Anaheim.
1933 First and Magnolia.
1935 2000 American.
1936 319 W. Broadway.
1938 324 E. 4th St.
1940 416 Pine Ave.
1946 600 Alamitos.
1951 1313 Pine Ave.

About two years ago Employment Service and Unemployment Insurance were separated. The Employment Service operations in Wilmington and San Pedro have been added to the Long Beach office under Toll's jurisdiction and his office now serves the Harbor area.

Unemployment Insurance offices in the area are managed by Vickey King, Long Beach; Larry Sherman, Wilmington; and Gerry Baillio, San Pedro.

Pacific Coast Sports-Trailer-Boat Show Will Be May 1-10 in Arena

One of the West's most successful outdoor shows will go indoors at Long Beach, May 1-10.

The fourth annual Pacific Coast Sports-Trailer-Boat Show will be held in the $8 million Long Beach Arena.

The show, previously held outdoors at Pierpoint Landing, has drawn attendances in excess of 100,000 persons.

* * * *

"WE THINK we'll do just as well indoors," says Fred J. Taylor, show producer. "The Arena is one of the finest exhibit halls in the world and we have splendid exhibits and special attractions planned."

Mamie Van Doren, currently starring in a riotous motion picture comedy, "Three Nuts in Search of a Bolt," will act as official hostess of the show, according to Taylor.

The show also will feature more than 250 individual exhibits including a full line of trailers, boats and surfing equipment.

"Virtually anything associated with vacation life and outdoor recreation in the west will be represented in the show including the latest models of boats, motors, campers, trailers and motorcycles," explains Taylor.

* * * *

SPECIAL EVENTS under consideration include flycasting, fly-tying, judo, boating and surfing demonstrations. Also being considered is an all outdoors western art show which would feature works of artists throughout the western U. S.

"We plan to present a show which will have appeal to the varied interests of the outdoors minded people of the Southland," asserts Taylor.

Taylor's brand of showmanship has been noted for headline catching gimmicks such as the 1957 attempt to set an underwater record by an aqualung diver.

Preview Oceana Series of Homes

Preview showing is being held this weekend on the new Oceana Series of Springdale South homes in Huntington Beach, according to Sy Bram, executive director of Sunkist Plaza Builders, the firm that built and developed the new community.

Bram remarked that this showing is being held ahead of schedule and is due to the rapid sellout of the Pacifica Series of Springdale South. "From the pre-opening enthusiasm shown by prospective homebuyers in our new unit, we expect the Oceana Series to follow closely in the footsteps of its predecessor," Bram added.

* * * *

A LEADING FACTOR in the popularity of this development, Bram added is the inclusion of a complete array of built-in appliances by Waste King-Universal, one of the leading appliance firms in the country today.

These include built-in range and oven in color, waste disposer, Modernaire range hood and fan in matching color.

The quality built three and four-bedroom homes with family room and two baths are priced from $18,250. They are offered on terms of no money down to all and all that's needed is $100 total costs.

* * * *

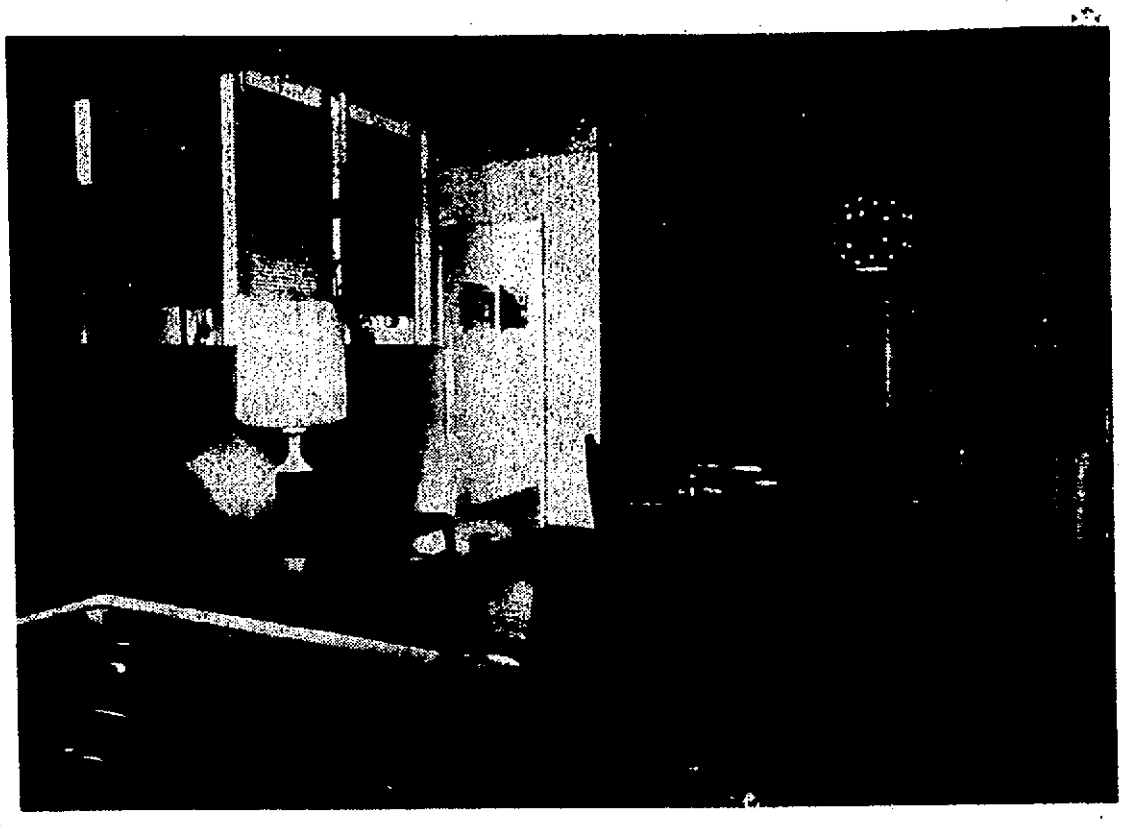

ADDITIONALLY, they feature sleek formica counters, natural ash cabinets, separate utility rooms vinyl asbestos floor tile, Custom-Aire forced air heat, sliding glass doors and custom lighting fixtures.

The Oceana Series of Springdale South Homes is located on Edwards Ave. just south of Westminster in Huntington Beach. Drive east on Garden Grove Blvd. to Golden West; right to Bolsa and right on Bolsa to Edwards and the models.

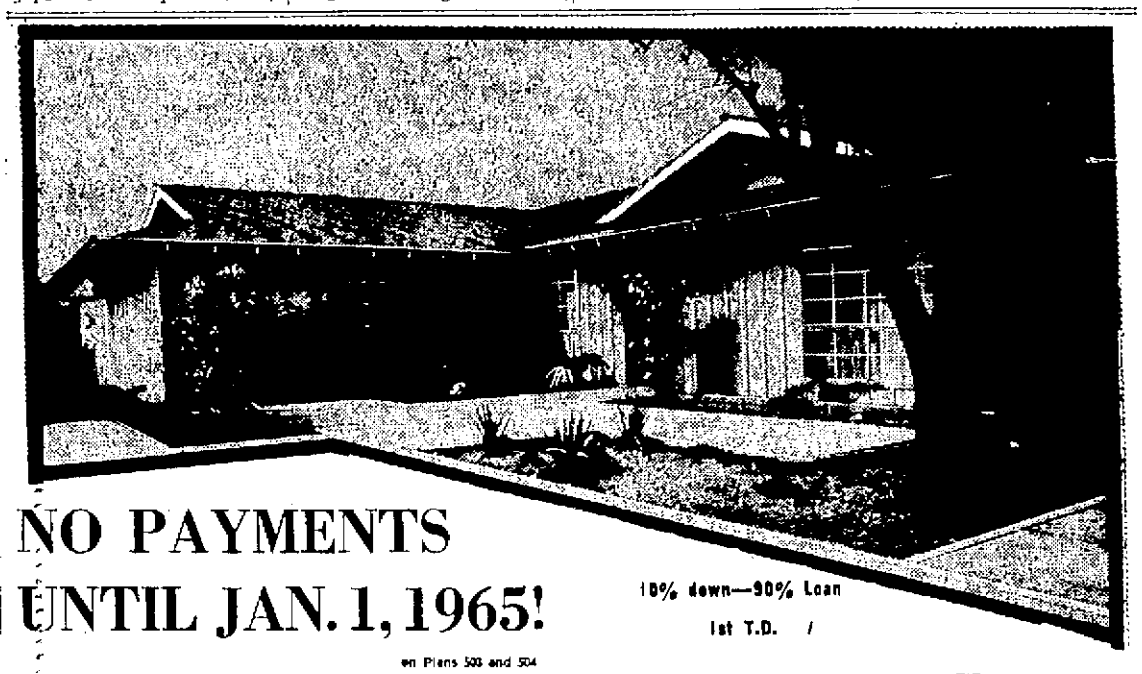

Loan Firm Hits $100 Million Mark

A $100 million savings figure has been reached by Metropolitan Savings & Loan Association, it was announced last week by Gunther J. Shirley, Metropolitan's president.

Metropolitan began operations in Los Angeles in 1936, with a staff of five employes. Today Metropolitan has three offices at 818 Wilshire Boulevard in Los Angeles, and branches at 18160 Sherman Way in Reseda, and 5901 Atlantic Ave. in Long Beach with a total of 75 employes.

Vet Needs No Cash for Home

Qualified veterans are eligible for a big assist in the purchase of a new home at Lake Park, the $40-million, 2,000-home community near Lakewood, sales manager Don Hermanson reports.

Hermanson said the ex-GIs may move in free at some of the Lake Park models, with the developers paying all costs and impound fees.

Also available is low down payment FHA financing at Lake Park, which features the lowest priced two-story homes in Orange County, Hermanson added.

* * * *

LAKE PARK homes are priced from $17,750.

All models feature a central entry hall and two-car garages, and some models include a den or family room.

To reach Lake Park from the Long Beach-Lakewood area, drive east on Carson (which becomes Lincoln Boulevard) to the model homes just east of Moody.

Garden Park Estates Location Outstanding

A GARDEN PARK ESTATE
This spacious two-story home is offered in Garden Park Estates. Officials say community is in an ideal location. They are priced from $19,225.

A superior location is one of the many marked advantages offered with residence in Garden Park Estates, the officials say.

Located on Knott Avenue in Garden Grove, residents are within minutes of the Southland's beaches and marinas; schools of top rating are close; a variety of huge suburban shopping centers are convenient, and nearby major arteries and freeways connect Garden Park Estates' commuters to all important work centers.

Quality keynotes each of the one and two-story homes, and they are available with three, four and five bedrooms and two baths.

* * * *

THE HOMES HAVE red cedar shingle or crushed rock roofs, with shake roofs optional on some; exterior vinyl stucco paint; sliding glass doors and sliding aluminum windows—guaranteed weather tight; lawns seeded in front, sides and rear.

The kitchens have large built-in ovens and range tops with matching hood and exhaust fan.

Sensibly priced from $19,225, veterans can move in with nothing down except costs and impounds, with monthly payments starting from $106.17. This includes principal and interest. Non-veterans are offered lowest FHA down on 30- and 35-year loans. Conventional and Cal-Vet terms are also available.

Payments Delayed Until Next January

A spokesman for Mesa Realty, sales agents at the Fountainhead development in Fountain Valley, said that stepped up sales this past weekend were due in great measure to the announcement that buyers would not have to make any monthly payments until Jan. 1, 1965, on plans 503 and 504.

Deferment of payments proved to be extremely popular with a great percentage of home-buyers visiting the 250-home Fountainhead development. The new method of payment, which requires 10% down, but defers all monthly payments until next January, was announced for the first time a few days ago. Evans Building Co., developers of the 65-acre tract in Fountain Valley, in announcing the new financing said that by offering home buyers two entirely different methods of financing their new home, it would make it possible for everyone who wanted a Fountainhead home to have one.

BUYERS MAY PURCHASE their Fountainhead home either through the new plan or by making a down payment of only $495, with regular monthly payments beginning at close of escrow. The two methods of financing plus the fact that the homes at Fountainhead sell from $1,000 to $2,000 less than comparable homes in the area, have made the development one of the most successful in Fountain Valley.

Designed as a family community, the builders included many, many features that appeal to today's active families. Each three or four-bedroom home is situated on an extra large lot; back yards are fenced, front yards are planted and landscaped; a sprinkler system is installed; carpeting and drapes are in. Also with the active family in mind, kitchens are completely built-in, including a dishwasher; storage and closet space is designed for the larger family; baths are spacious and beautifully designed; family rooms, covered patios and entry ways add to both indoor and outdoor family pleasure.

Located at Warner and Cannery in Fountain Valley, Fountainhead Homes are priced from $20,950.

Paramount Factory Turns Out Powered Edgers by Thousands

The parking strip in front of McLane Tool and Die Co.'s new 40,000-square-foot manufacturing and sales building in Paramount is probably the best manicured turf in an industrial area.

This is where the company's sole product, a gasoline-powered lawn edging tool, called Trim 'n Edger, is demonstrated to homeowners and prospective dealers.

Combining a manufacturing-wholesaling-retailing function is not unusual for Jim and Frank McLane. "We've been in one phase or the other in our 17 years in business," says Jim, "so we just decided to use all our experience."

* * * *

AS A MEASURE of their wholesaling success the McLane brothers last year sold over 13,000 units throughout the western and southern regions of the United States. This volume is due in part to the insistence of Frank, the production expert, that the Trim 'n Edger be of all-steel construction. As a tribute to this philosophy and the company's manufacturing ability, not one frame in the last 100,000 Trim 'n Edgers sold has been reported broken.

The frame, including the motor support mount, is all fabricated from one and one-quarter-inch thick steel flats quarter-inch thick steel flats rolled at Bethlehem Steel Company's nearby Los Angeles plant. Bethlehem also supplies steel rounds from which pulleys are made.

All component parts, except rubber tires, are manufactured in a 40,000-square-foot production area behind the showroom and office space. All dies used to form steel flats into component sections are designed by Frank McLane. Production machines are also custom built to meet rigid manufacturing standards.

* * * *

DESIGN OF the new building was controlled by the steel-minded McLane brothers. Virtually column-free manufacturing areas were made possible by tapered steel roof beams. A structural steel framework, fabricated from Bethlehem's wide flange sections provides a generous 105-foot clear span of glass for display windows. Second story office space, for future expansion, cantilevers 12 feet on steel beams over the front entrances. As Jim McLane says, "it's quite a change from our little 10x12 foot shack where we started."

McLane Tool and Die had its beginning in 1946 when Jim was in the Navy. Frank decided that with his tool and die experience he could supply component parts for tricycles. From this three-wheeled beginning the fledgling business moved into production of training wheels for bicycles. It was then that the brothers' retail store supported their manufacturing efforts. Nearly 80 percent of the business was concentrated in selling bicycles and accessories.

When their training wheel customer went out of business Frank and veteran Jim were left with a lot of wheels. From this stockpile of wheels came the idea for the first Trim 'n Edger. Since then the retail and manufacturing functions have changed positions of importance.

ON PRODUCTION LINE
One-position assembly at McLane Tool and Die Co. permits one employe to check each part as it is installed. The Trim 'n' Edgers are held in a pneumatic clamp so that each part is positioned accurately.

Trim 'n' Edger demonstration by Jim McLane on parking strip in front of building is often the clinching sales argument. The trouble-free unit is a commerical quality product. Patented feature permits the edger to travel atop the curb.

Somerset Homes Offer Charm

One of the few remaining "islands" of rural charm in the Southland is Somerset, a limited group of homes midway between Long Beach, Lakewood and Los Angeles.

The skylines of the big cities rim Somerset's horizon, but estates, Los Alamitos golf course and the race track are its more immediate neighbors.

The new one and two-story Somerset Homes are attracting thousands of home seekers with a grand opening celebration. There are prizes for everyone ranging from salad and glassware sets to folding overnight bags. Beautiful consolation prizes are given everyone who comes.

"THOUSANDS OF families have now toured our four model homes after trying their luck in our Treasure Chest game," reported Robert Richards of the Twaits-Wittenberg Company, builders.

Grand prize is a GE stereo set with AM-FM tuner and record player. The drawing for this prize will be held next Sunday, Richards said, adding that "Other prizes are available immediately; the ones already described, plus such attractive items as carving sets and pocket secretaries."

Boggs was one of the founders of the Institute of Farm Brokers on the national level.

SOMERSET HOMES APPEALING
Locating in an area of rural charm yet near metropolitan areas, Somerset Homes in Cypress have great appeal. The homes are priced from $26,500 and have many luxurious extras.

Satisfied Home Buyers Finest Salesmen, Says Builder Grant

Results of a recent survey taken by Robert H. Grant & Co., builder-developer of Stardust Homes, showed that nearly 50% of its new home sales were to people who had been advised and directed to the models by former customers.

To show prospective buyers that Grant isn't boasting when he claims "My best salesmen are my satisfied home buyers," the company prepared a unique testimonial brochure titled "An Interesting Report On Family Living In Prestige Communities Created by Stardust Homes."

The six-page publication features more than 45 personal testimonials (with photographs) on what it feels like to own and live in a Stardust Home, popular model exteriors from two current developments, and a statement of company policy from Grant.

* * * *

THE TESTIMONIAL brochure is the second of several projects in Grant's new merchandising program stressing the "human element" in selling its medium-priced (from $21,200) homes. The first was the establishment of a community newspaper known as "Stardust News." The publication tells purchasers and prospects of the many programs and events that await them at Grant's Fairway Park development of 1000 homes in Cypress.

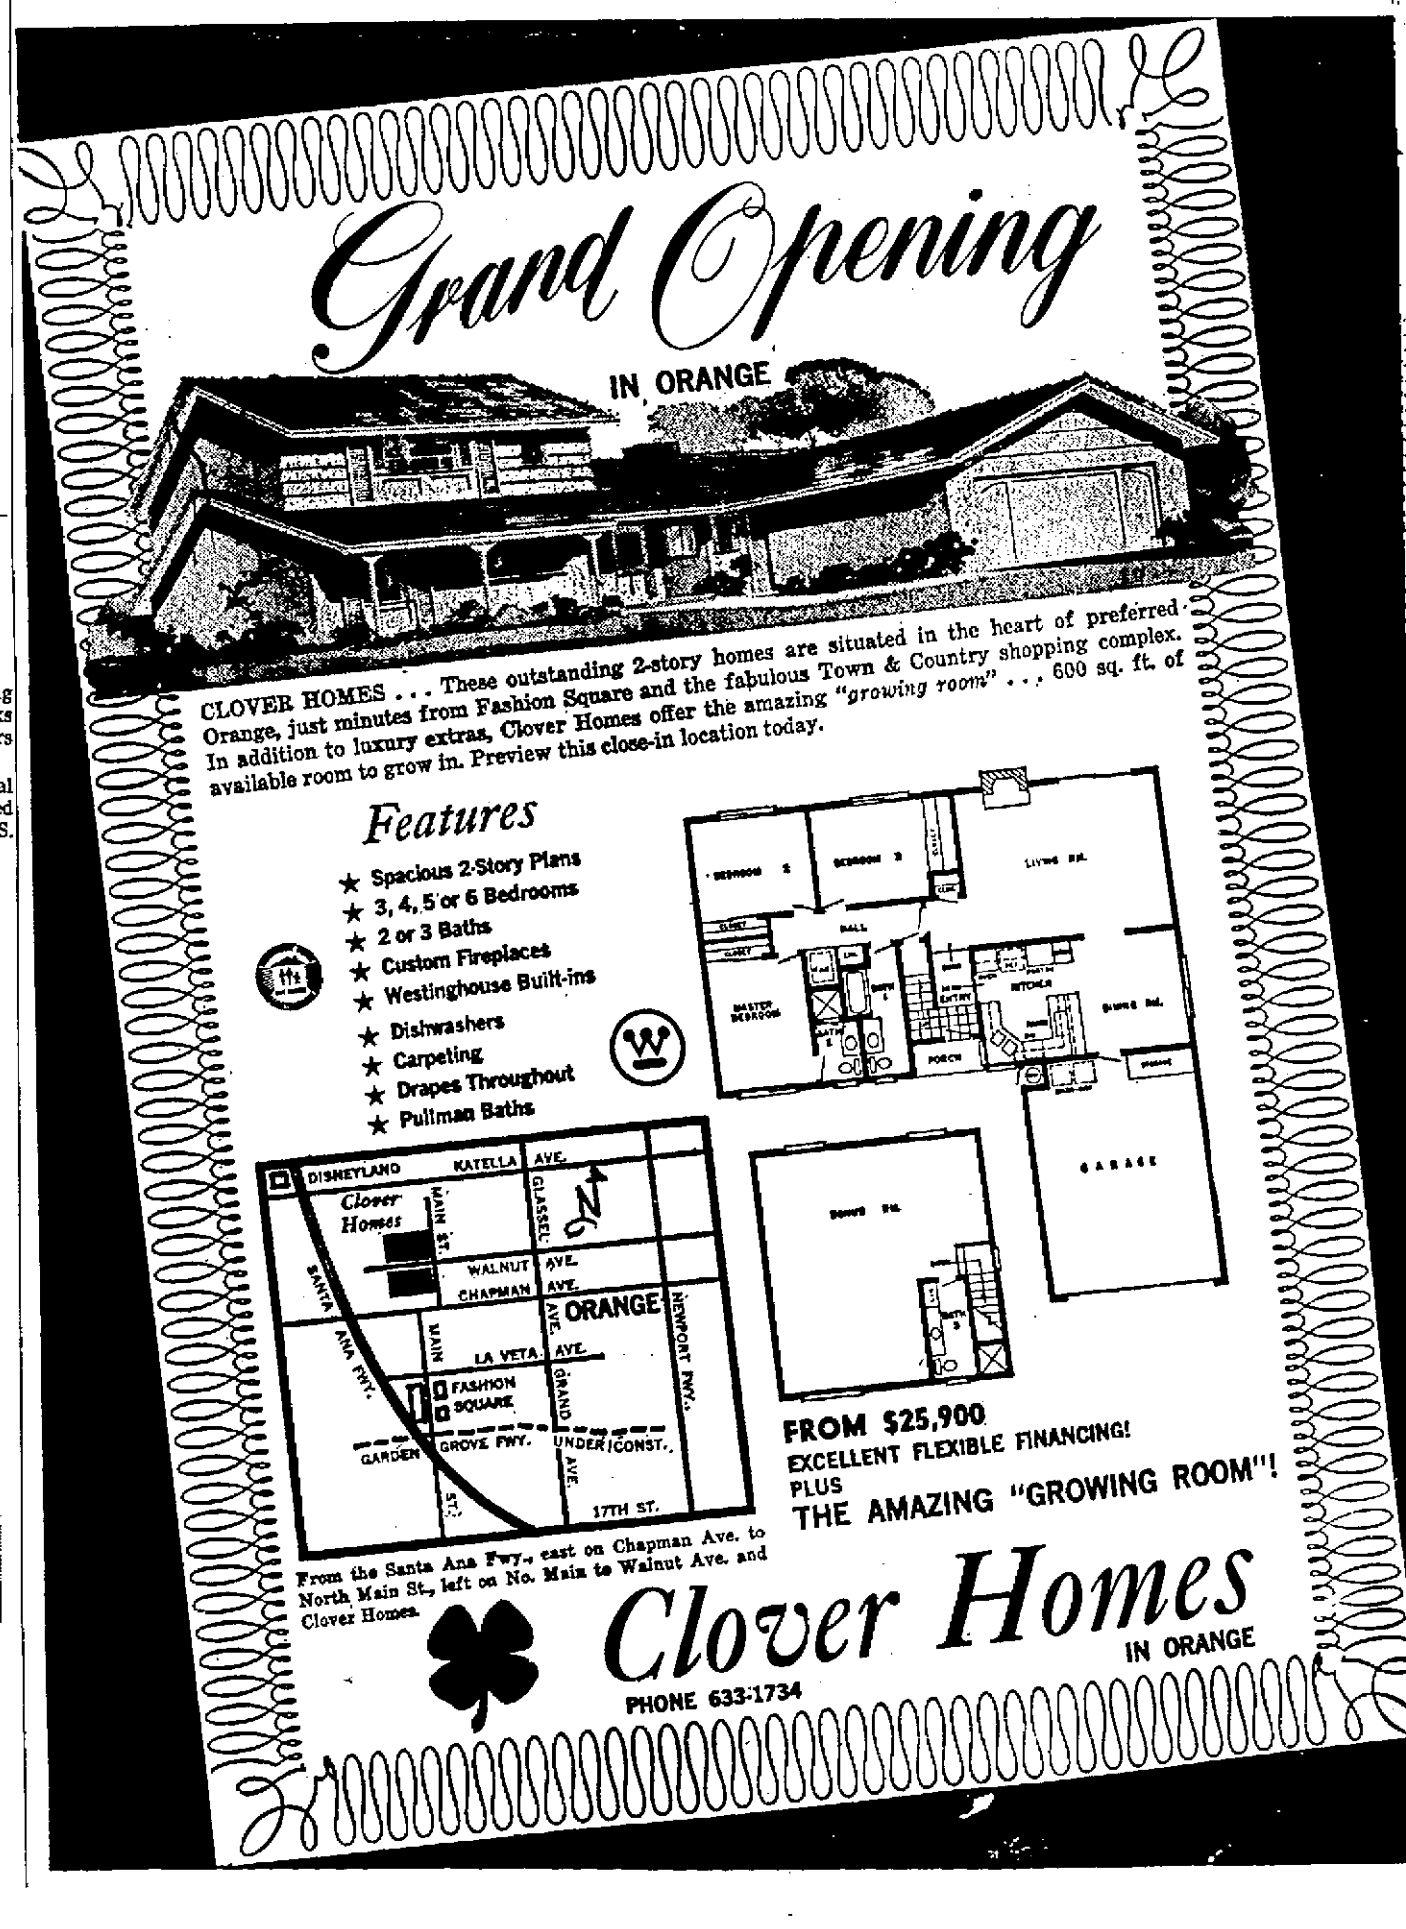

"As a pre-selling tool, the testimonial brochure contains more than its share of psychological sales value," says John May, vice-president, sales for Stardust Homes. "It affords my salesmen tangible opportunity to extend an invitation to prospects interested in our new homes to indirectly 'ask the one who owns one'."

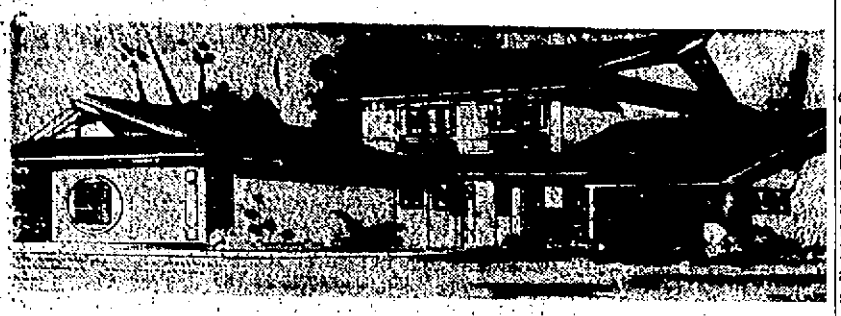

Grant has demonstrated his versatility in the real estate development field by building more than 5,000 new homes in Southern California during the past ten years, and ranks as one of the biggest builders in Orange County.

Copies of the testimonial brochure may be obtained from Stardust Homes, 1665 S. Brookhurst St., Anaheim.

THEIR COMMENTS WIN
Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Knutson receive first edition of Stardust Homes testimonial brochure and a new television set from John May, vice president, sales; Robert H. Grant & Co., for their original comments on what it feels like to own and live in a Stardust Home. Looking on are the Knutsons' daughters, Barbara and Beverly. The family lives in Grant's Fairway Park development of 1,000 homes in Cypress.

A SHOWCASE HOME

Spacious Showcase Homes Designed for Luxury Living

Located in a quiet residential neighborhood near schools, shopping centers and churches in the Showcase Homes development gives the owner an atmosphere of gracious living and a feeling of spaciousness and privacy with each home having the rear yard completely fenced and the front yard landscaped, stated William Krueger, the builder and developer.

Krueger further stated that the two-story home may be secured for the price of a single-story in that the lower level has approximately 1,500 square feet and is in itself a complete functional home consisting of three bedrooms, two baths and family-dining room.

* * * *

PRICED FROM $22,750, these two-story homes feature a growing room which can be finished with five or six bedrooms and three baths or can be used as a spacious one-room family activity center. The builder supplies three different blueprint plans which may be used by the owner in the future to finish off this room as desired to meet his particular family's needs.

Showcase Homes exteriors are enhanced with stone, used brick, and colonial brick. The attractive interiors have slate entry halls, wall-to-wall carpeting, fireplace, marble pullmans in baths, ceramic tile in baths, and oversize linen closets.

The all-electric medallion kitchen is equipped with built-in range, wide oven, automatic dishwasher, garbage disposer, breakfast bar and ash cabinets.

Showcase Homes Unit 2 is located on Hazard Ave. just east of Hwy. 39 in Westminster. Furnished models are open daily for inspection by McFarland & Mattocks, sales agents.

Sunkist Treasure Series Attracts Attention

Anticipation for the grand opening of the Treasure Series of Sunkist Plaza Homes, in Huntington Beach is running high, based on the success of the recent preview showing, according to Sy Bram, executive director of Sunkist Plaza Builders, the firm that built and developed the residential subdivision.

"From indications of the homebuying public who attended our preview," Bram remarked, "the new Treasure Series is expected to follow closely in the footsteps of the Buccaneer Series, its predecessor," that series sold out rapidly.

The Treasure Series of Sunkist Plaza Homes comprises a 72-home development on Springdale St., just south of Westminster Blvd, near vast stretches of ocean in Huntington Beach.

The promise of accelerated sales is attributed to the inclusion of quality materials and workmanship not usually found in homes of this price range.

* * * *

THE EXTRA VALUE built into the homes has propelled the Sunkist Plaza firm into the upper echelon of the homebuilding industry. They have built thousands of quality residences in various locations of the Southland.

And due to this voluminous operation, the firm has acquired a mass purchasing power that enables it to make the residences available with a minimum of outlay. An example is the fact that the homes sell for no down payment-only total costs of $150. All are priced from $19,750.

The new Treasure Series will incorporate three basic floor plans that can be incorporated in a selection of 18 exteriors of nearly every motif available.

"This, coupled with the development's location, are reasons why it has been termed one of the best home values in Huntington Beach," Bram stated.

To reach models, drive east on Garden Grove Blvd. to Golden West; right to Bolsa; right to Springdale; turn left and follow the signs to the furnished models.

HOME IS A TREASURE
This appealing living room is found in one of the new models offered by Sunkist Plaza in the Treasure Series in Huntington Beach. No down payment, only $150 in costs, is needed by qualified buyers.

Home Traffic Plan Important

LINCOLN, Neb. (UPI) — Careful planning of entryways can add to the comfort, convenience and pleasure members of a family derive from their home, a housing specialist at the University of Nebraska says.

The specialist, Mrs. Jerre Withrow, said function is the first thing to consider in successful planning for any area of the house. She described the entryway as the control center for circulation throughout the house.

From it, she said, family members or guests should be able to reach all areas of the house without interfering with activities in any one room. Location is the important factor in channeling this flow.

Americans Go on Record Travel Binge

Hawaii will lure more travelers than any other spot in the Pacific. Olympic Games will bring a surge of visitors to Japan in October.

By Fred Taylor Kraft
Travel Editor

AMERICANS are about to take off on another gigantic travel binge, easily the biggest in history.

An estimated 2¾ million will venture abroad, an increase of 10 per cent over 1963. These include cruise passengers — an ever-growing segment of travel—but do not include visitors to Canada and Mexico.

On the other side of the ledger, about 750,000 to 800,000—some sources put the figure as high as one million — overseas visitors are expected to come to the United States this year, compared with approximately 710,000 in 1963.

These estimates were compiled from reports submitted from more than 400 offices of American Express—one of the most honored names in travel —in 34 countries.

This and other surveys attribute the upward trend to these factors: rising discretionary income, lessening of world tensions, reductions in transatlantic air fares, and a multitude of special events of touristic interest.

OF THE TOTAL traveling abroad, 1¼ million will visit Europe. This is an increase of 15 per cent over the new record set in 1963 when, for the first time, more than one million Americans traveled there.

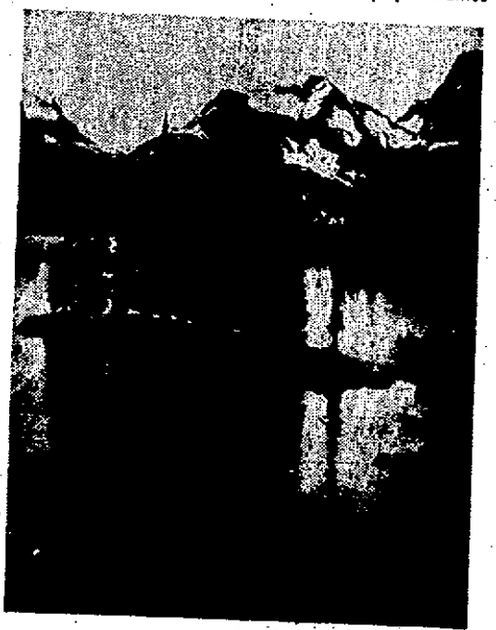

Europe, it is pointed out, reaps the major benefit from Americans making repeat trips abroad. Moreover, the frequency pattern has changed. Where in the past the traveler might make a return trip once in four or five years, the time interval now is more nearly 2½ years.

A big incentive this year, naturally, is the reduction in air fares which go into effect Wednesday. For instance, between Los Angeles and Paris, first class round-trip fares will be slashed by $190, from $1,266.10 to $1,076.10; economy class, from $820.20 to $719.50 for the period from April 1-May 21, and $805 May 22-Aug. 3; for the remainder of the year, $719.50.

Millions of Americans will be attracted to Canada's majestic forests, lakes, streams and mountains.

These fares affect all major airlines flying the Atlantic that are members of the Inter-Air Traffic Association.

IN ADDITION, a new excursion fare, even cheaper than economy, will be offered at selected times before, during and after the summer season:: eastbound, to June 11, July 13-Aug. 6, and Aug. 31-Nov. 5; westbound, to June 4; June 29-Aug. 20, and Sept. 15-Nov. 5. These excursions may not begin between 7 a. m. Fridays and 7 a. m. Mondays, and the traveler must stay away at least 14 days and no more than 21 days.

But air fares are only part of the inducement to go junketing to Europe. There are literally hundreds of special events billed this year (see Page 6). Among the really important ones are the Shakespearean festivals throughout Europe and particularly in England (Page 12), and the Swiss National Exposition, the Continent's largest 1964 event (Page 10).

THE PACIFIC — particularly the Orient—is growing more rapidly as a tourist attraction than any other area in the world. Japan will reap a tremendous tourist harvest this year. The 18th Olympic Games (Page 13) opening Oct. 10 will spur this influx although the Land of the Rising Sun is fast becoming one of the most popular travel destinations on the map.

The South Seas, with emphasis on Tahiti and Bora Bora, is on the itineraries of many, many more gadders this year than ever before.

However, as has been the case for years, Hawaii will continue to lure more vacationists than any other spot in the Pacific. Reduction in air fares from the West Coast will account for many new visitors as well as regulars.

Alaska, too, is set for a travel boom far larger than any it has ever experienced.

Altogether, says F. Marvin Plake of the Pacific Area Travel Association, visitors to the Pacific area will increase 18 to 22 per cent over a year ago.

CRUISE SHIPS, naturally, will get their share of the tourist dollar in the Pacific. Their luxury appeals to those who have the time. And everyone enjoys being pampered the way they are pampered on modern liners such as those of Matson Navigation Co., American President Lines and P & O Orient Lines. But those who plan to travel by sea should be thinking about their reservations; bookings are heavy, even for March.

There is scarcely a corner in the world, however remote, that Americans—passports and cameras in hand—won't be poking into. Spots overlooked almost entirely a few short years ago now are focusing clearly into the travel picture.

Take Africa: Fed by twin streams of trade and tourism, the Dark Continent is surging forward. Early bookings, with a heavy demand for tour packages, was noted the first three months of the year.

The Middle East will share thousands who are going to Europe or Africa, or both. Egypt, Greece, Turkey, Israel and Jordan are on most itineraries.

TRAVEL to South America and Central America is gaining but is still below its potential. One expert pointed to continued unrest in some Latin countries, fed by communism. This is a pity, because attractions throughout this vast land are endless. The Caribbean area is booming.

Vacationists do not have to venture abroad to see either of our nearest neighbors, Canada and Mexico. As a result, millions will visit these pleas-

Instant World Vacation

Astral Fountain, one of several at Fair, spouts 70-foot column of water in open-work cylinder, studded with stars rotating in framework of jetted water spouts.

By Mary Ellis Carlton

JUST 24 DAYS from zeroing in the world's greatest vacation extravaganza is the electronic countdown clock at the flat-roofed headquarters of New York's World's Fair.

For the past several months the time-measuring device (fair staffers call it the "ulcer machine") has been ticking off the frantically hectic seconds, minutes, hours and days before the long-awaited April 22 opening.

In January (while covering the New York spring-summer fashion showings), I had dinner at the Top of the Fair Restaurants housed in the heliport at Flushing Meadow Park, the world's most glamorous ex-dump.

Then, with the clock showing only 104 days to go, the grounds looked very much like the picture at left.

Some structures were nearing completion, others were only steel girders sprouting in the expanse of reclaimed swampland a quagmire of mud and melting snow. It seemed an impossible deadline to meet.

BUT ROBERT MOSES, the fair's articulate and forceful president, said then, like the Moses of Biblical days, that he would lead his people into the promised land.

And lead them he will — on schedule.

At twilight on April 22, a one million-candlepower beam of light—visible, weather permitting, from New Haven, Conn., to Atlantic City, N.J.—will shoot skyward.

Simultaneously, the world's largest fountain will burst into a brilliantly synchronized symphony of water patterns, color, music and fireworks; a 610-bell carillon will trill "There's No Business Like Show Business."

And, by midnight, despite probability of the greatest traffic snarl in history, it is believed some 500,000 of a predicted 70 million visitors will have clicked through the fair's turnstiles.

WHAT THEY will behold is the costliest ($1 billion), the most expansive (646 acres), the most controversial, most commercial and probably most successful moneymaker since Prince Albert masterminded the first world's fair at London's Crystal Palace in 1851.

No world exposition, say officials, ever had so much to offer each member of the family. A visit to the fair, they promise, "will be a vacation, an education, an inspiration."

Fair goers can discern and learn, gape and ache through 200 pavilions and exhibitions representing 51 countries, 24 U.S. states and close to 350 American firms.

To take in everything — from the House of Good Taste to the Mastro Pizza exhibit —would take average mortals 12 days, according to a promotion man for the fair.

THE FORTHCOMING Flushing frolic has been described by 75-year-old Moses as "everything for everybody from everywhere."

There are temples of religion, wonders of states, industries and new nations, pageants, Olympic Games of Progress, the space age, Ring-

Experienced travelers describe the Oregon coastline as the world's most beautiful.

Melody of Color

AS ALWAYS, the accent will be on color in Oregon this year. No state can boast greater beauty, from its spectacular coastline to its forests and green mountains.

For travelers arriving in the next few weeks, multi-colored masses of wild azaleas will brighten the landscapes in the coastal areas of southern Oregon. Rhododendrons will be in bloom for weeks, starting in May in the lowlands and then blossoming progressively in the higher mountain areas.

Splashes of golden yellow will be seen where bushes of gorse, Scotch broom and Oregon grape (the state flower) dot the roadsides anad blanket open hillsides. White dogwood and red currant blossoms offer contrast along the edges of wooded areas while lavendar irises, yellow buttercups, blue lilies, violets and lupine will add to the melody of color in the open fields and mountain meadows.

But there is more than flowers to be seen in Oregon. The Pacific coastline has been described by experienced travelers as the most beautiful ocean coastline in the world. It varies from wide, sandy beaches to rugged headlands that plunge headlong into the sea.

THE MOUNTAINS of Oregon are equally popular with visitors. At the northern end of the Oregon Cascades is Mt. Hood, looming high over Portland and the famous Columbia River Gorge. U. S. Hwy. 26 crosses the south base of the mountain, offering many views, flashing streams and rainbows of wildflowers. Hood River Valley draws its share of tourists and for the outdoorsman, the jagged Wallowa and Blue Mountains of northeastern Oregon offer the chance to "get away from it all." Hell's Canyon, on the Snake River, is famous for boat trips and fishing. But, for that matter, hundreds of mountain streams and lakes afford excellent angling.

Truly, Oregon is a place to "Relax . . . in a state of excitement."

ant countries this spring, summer and fall.

And, of course, many more Americans will see more of their own country. They will thrill to the marvels of the West, the Midwest and the South and the East. But No. 1 attraction on the domestic scene, and one of the greatest anywhere, will be the New York World's Fair (Page 5) opening in April.

It will matter little where travelers go this year, hotelwise. They are springing up in every corner of the globe, more modern and more comfortable than most dare to expect.

Some tourists prefer to travel alone. Others enjoy the camaraderie of group junketing. Travel agents have literally hundreds of tour packages up their sleeves for either kind, and they know a tour bargain when they see one. Travel agents are the best people in the world to know when planning a trip.

Tours to Fair

Five days in New York City during the World's Fair will be included in both Random Tours' spring and summer transcontinental full-escorted rail tours leaving Los Angeles April 23 and June 21.

Each of the three-week cross-country excursions will be conducted on modern, streamlined trains. Passengers will have deluxe Pullman accommodations and enjoy the comfort of Vista-Dome, private lounge and dining cars.

Overlooking the Han River at Seoul, South Korea, are the hotels of the multi-million dollar Walker Hill Resort.

Korea, Anyone?

By Jack Baldwin

IF Tokyo's Olympic Games are on your touring itinary this summer, consider rounding out your visit to the Orient with a flying side trip to the teeming, bristling city of Seoul — capital of South Korea.

The Korean government has joined hands with private enterprise in a $19 million tourist-attraction program including the recent construction of the multi-million dollar Walker Hill Resort complex.

Walker Hill is a galaxy of 26 modern buildings offering the latest inovations in Western accommodations mixed with the traditions of ancient Korea, the facilities range from a single room to secluded villas—some with individual chefs!

FROM TOKYO the flight to Seoul is a two-hour flight by either CAT — Civil Air Transport, the line of the Mandarin Jets, or by Northwest Orient Airlines. The fare is $30.

Upon arrival at one of the five, three-story satellite hotels dotting the 156-acre hillside site, the graciousness of orental hospitality becomes immediately apparent.

Most of the hotels' outside rooms present a panoramic view of the wide Han River Valley and the meandering river winding eastward toward the Yellow Sea.

All five hotels, each with its own dining room and bar, plus the 12 private villas, are linked to the main building by fast, free taxi service.

HUB OF ALL Walker Hill activities, both daytime and nightlife, is the four-story main building. Facilities include an indoor swimming pool, Turkish baths, a three-hour photo-finishing service, foreign banking exchange service, a lavish night club—plus the commonly-expected tourist shops.

While strolling through the halls of the main building visitors can — and frequently do—try their luck with the gleaming "one-armed bandits" which line the hallways.

Entertainment in the Clover Club with its clover-shaped rising and lowering floor include such western favorites as Louis Armstrong who opened the dining and dancing club at the beginning of the 1963 tourist season.

PERCHED high atop a hill is the achitecturally unique W-shaped Hilltop Bar.

Styled in the tradition of the country is the colorful Korean Mansion featuring exotic Korean cuisine. Folk dancing and ancient music presented while dining makes the rendezvous with the old world complete.

Accommodations are reasonable — $7.69 for a double to $13.85 for a suite. Private villas vary from $12.50 to $24.16 a day. Rates include a 10 per cent gratuity.

Recreational activities include water skiing, tennis, badminton, archery, boating, billiards, fishing, cycling, golf, hunting in season, and naturally—sight-seeing.

Japan Hotels

Japan Travel Bureau International has been named North American representative for seven of Japan's leading hotels.

Effective June 1, travel agents, airlines and steamship companies will be able to obtain immediate confirmation of rooms at the Imperial Hotel (Tokyo); Kyoto Hotel (Kyoto); Fujiya Hotel (Hakone); Kanya Hotel (Nikko); the New Osaka and Osaka Grand Hotels (Osaka), and the New Grand Hotel at Yokohama.

Orient travelers are reminded by Nobuo Yokoyama, JTBI manager in Los Angeles, to make requests for hotels at the time they make their travel arrangements either with a travel agent, airline or steamship company.

Additional first class hotels in other areas of Japan will be added to the JTBI-represented hotel list, according to Yokoyama.

Sun Valley Fun

THERE are few double-gaited resorts in the West. Mountain dude ranches don't flourish until their desert counterparts have closed on summer's heat. At the same time, ski country habitues move to the beaches. But up in the Sawtooth mountains of Idaho, Sun Valley makes an effortless change from skiing and sleigh riding to an even broader span of activities than that offered in snowy months.

From June through August this mountain playground's guests will be golfing on a recently expanded 18-hole course, fishing in the nearby famous rainbow trout steams, riding over rolling foothills through pungent sage and bright wildflowers.

Too, they can enjoy swimming and the novelty of skating on an outdoor ice rink, both of which are also winter fare here. And there's tennis, bowling, hiking and rock climbing and trap, skeet, rifle and pistol shooting. Expert instruction is available for every sport.

A SUMMER switch on Trail Creek cabin's dinner parties reached by sleigh in winter are its post-sundown, outdoor barbecues with hayracks for transport.

Contrasting with the after-ski lager fest in the Tyrolean style Ram is the mint julep hour on the Lodge lawn with music by the Sun Valley trio. Hap Miller's seven-piece orchestra plays for dinner on the Lodge terrace at the edge of the skating rink.

Menus range from New York steaks and trout almondine at the Lodge to a buffet array at Challenger Inn.

Hawaii to Celebrate

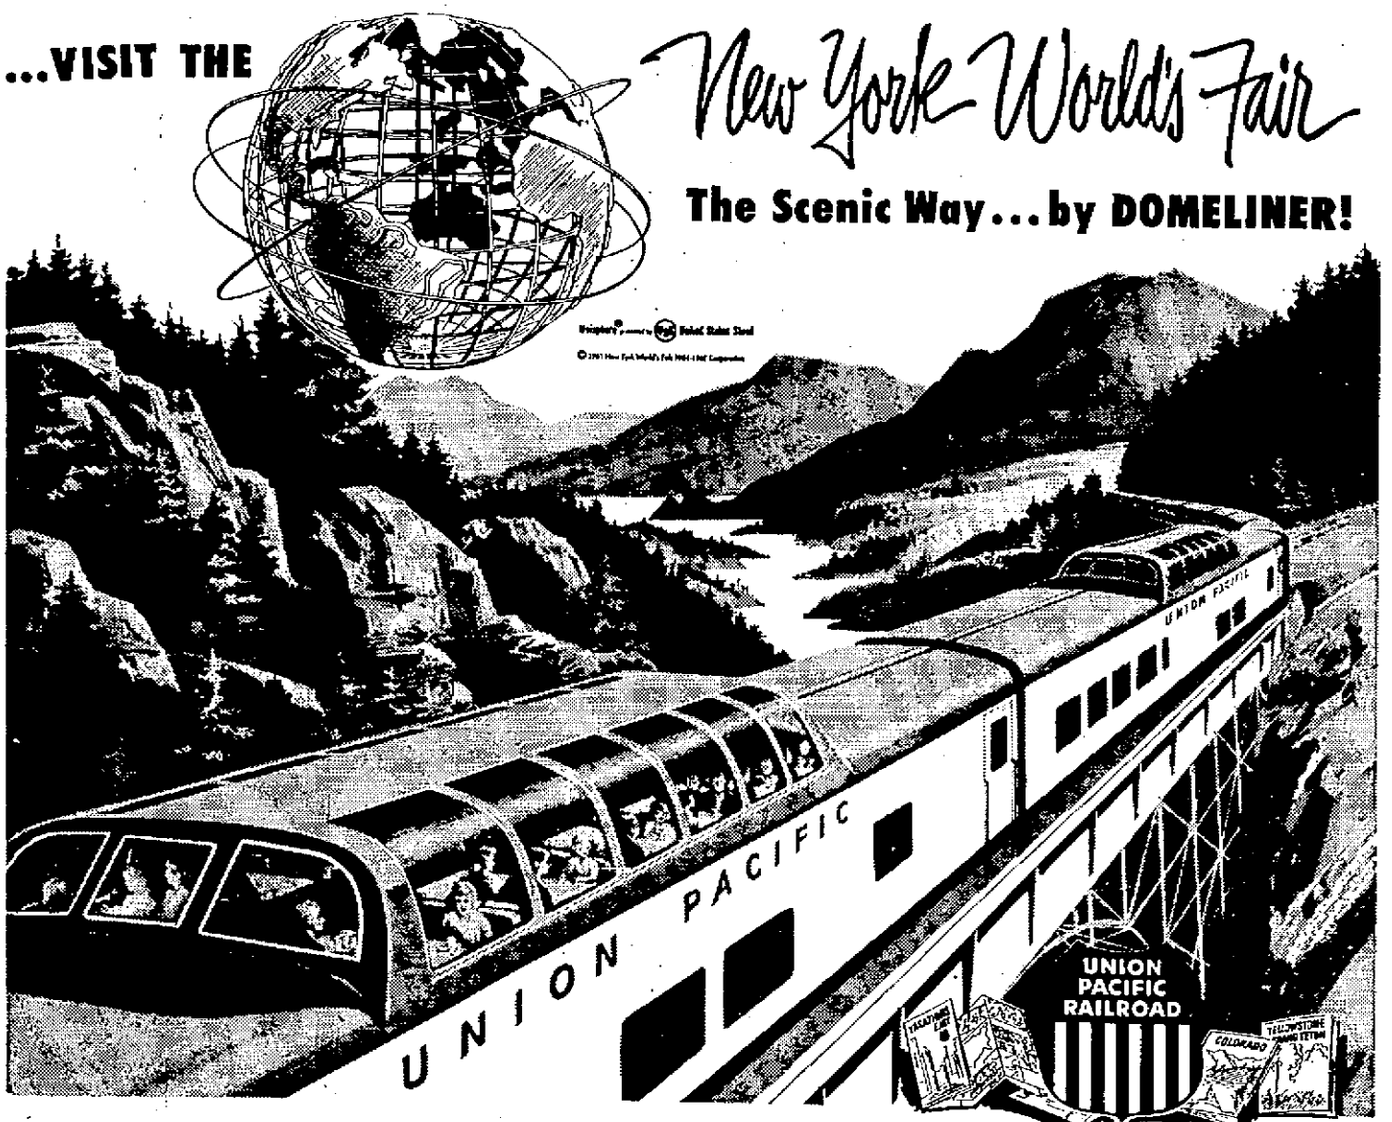

Hawaii's early-November special attraction, the Whaling Spree at Lahaina on the Island of Maui, will be supplemented this year by a one-day Makahiki, or harvest celebration and welcome to winter at Hilo on the Island of Hawaii and on the Island of Kauai.

The Kauai program is scheduled Nov. 6. The annual Whaling Spree on Maui will cover the weekend of Nov. 6-7-8. It is one of Hawaii's major special events and is in its third year. The program at Hilo will be on Nov. 8. There also will be a special program in Honolulu, Nov. 5. Another major November event will be the annual Festival of the Pacific held in Honolulu, Nov. 14-21.

The Lahaina Whaling Spree marks the return of the whales to the Lahaina Roadstead for the winter season, and also reenacts the days of the last century when the historic Hawaiian town was the winter headquarters for the whaling ships and their boisterous crews.

Man to Know

If you need help planning your vacation itinerary, consult a travel agent. Travel agents not only have the latest information about travel all over the world, but they'll make your travel and hotel reservations, too, even for layover and side trips and any specific event you might wish to attend. Because there is no charge for normal services such as these, the travel agent is a good man to know.

Europe's Biggest Event

THOUSANDS of Americans who sail or fly to Europe this year will visit Switzerland not only for its spectacular scenery and world-renowned hospitality, but also for the Continent's biggest event of 1964—the Swiss National Exhibition at Lausanne.

Held only every 25 years, the exhibition opens April 30 and continues through Oct. 25 with the entire Swiss nation on display. Housed in 12 futuristic buildings covering more than 6 million square feet will be exhibitions on Swiss history, political, economic and social customs and institutions.

Among the exhibitions will be a Circarama, a movie played on nine screens making a complete circle, showing trains of the future, advanced developments in telecommunications, highways, and air and sea transportation.

Unique attraction at Swiss National Exhibition will be a submarine which will take visitors to Lake Geneva's floor.

A UNIQUE attraction will be the first submarine designed expressly for sightseers. Built by the late Auguste Piccard and his son, Jacques, internationally famous scientists, the submarine will make hour-long trips to the floor of Lake Geneva.

Vacationing in Victoria

Victoria, B. C., and Vancouver Island offer exceptional opportunities for the traveler, for the investor, and in all fields of business and industry, according to Geoffrey I. Edgelow, Victoria alderman, in the Southland on a "get acquainted" tour last week.

Sponsored by the province of British Columbia and by Western Air Lines which arranges many trips to British Columbia, Edgelow pointed out that his fellow citizens vacation in Southern California in winter and that more and more Southland residents are spending their vacations in the Victoria area.

"And why not?" he asks. "Summer days rarely are warmer than 75 degrees. And our winter temperatures governed by the Japanese current, range between 45 and 65 degrees. Besides offering some of the finest scenery in America, we have wonderful fishing and water sports, we play golf the year around, and we're uncrowded."

British Columbia, twice the size of California, has only 2 million residents. Victoria (as we're expanding while Southern California is exploding") has a population of 125,000."

Calypso Land

Lovely Jamaican miss offers enticing smile with distinctive hat at one of many craft markets in Jamaica.

KINGSTON, largest and most important city in the West Indies, is fast becoming a favorite stop for vacationists in the blue, blue Caribbean.

That's because the capital of Jamaica (about the size of Long Beach) is a trove of the unusual—offering sunny relaxation, a variety of sports activities, spectacular scenery and places of historic interest dating back to pirate and slave-running days, top hotels and restaurants, exotic night spots with calypso and other dances of the islands, a great assortment of native bazaars and modern shops, free-port shopping, and, best of all, a friendly foreign flavor.

Only a stone's throw from Kingston's modern Palisadoes Airport are the ancient remains of romantic Port Royal—one-time wickedest city in the world—and later a bastion of British naval might.

WITHIN a half-hour's drive from Kingston lies Spanish Town, the capitol of old Spanish Jamaica—with a history of more than 150 years preceding the arrival of the British in 1665—a spot also favored by vacationists, particularly photographers. Hope Botannical Gardens also is popular with visitors. Scores of other points of interest, fairly bursting with flowers, flowering trees, the luxuriance of banana fields, coconut palms and sugar cane, all are a part of Kingston's magical spell.

Offical center of the city is Victoria Square, where Kingston's main thoroughfare, King Street, opens into a broad plaza. This general area teems with shops, theaters, restaurants and night spots; the offices of the Jamaica Tourist Board (80 Harbour St.), the Institute of Jamaica, museums, and other interesting spots.

AT THE FOOT of Kings St. is Victoria Crafts Market in which is concentrated the island's greatest array of native handicraft. World-famous Jamaican rums also are sold here, probably the largest native market in the Caribbean.

Like other Jamaican resorts, there are numerous free port shops. In these, special categories of imported goods as well as native-made products may be purchased tax free.

Perhaps one of the best nightclubs is the Glass Bucket, which serves fine meals and drinks and offers dancing, native and foreign floor shows, and orchestra and calypso music.

KINGSTON is particularly well known for its climate, being cooled by trade winds by day and breezes at night from the mountains at its back. Sportsmen like its superb golf courses and availability of water cruising and abundant fishing.

One of the newest hotels is the Sheraton-Kingston, a low lying hotel "village" in tree-shaded grounds. The Myrtle Bank, previously mentioned, also is modern with air-conditioned rooms. Spacious grounds set it apart from the bustle of the downtown waterfront.

The best way to see the Kingston area is to rent a car and have your hotel help you arrange your tours. Of course, guided tours also are available. Either way, you'll find Kingston a happy stop in your Caribbean adventure.

Search for Shakespeare

WHERE do you find the Bard in Britain?

That's a fair question for 500,000 Americans preparing to visit during Shakespeare's 400th birthday celebrations this year.

The answer is — nearly everywhere — but some places more than others. Counting the more than 30 cities which are holding Shakespeare Festivals or celebrations, plus those towns appearing in his plays, and those connected with his life, a Shakespeare Tour of Britain can be a matter for two days or two months.

But two towns are essential to any list. In Stratford-upon-Avon, April 23, in a house still standing on Henley Street, William Shakespeare was born. His father, an alderman with a glove shop in the same house, had him baptized in the Church of the Holy Trinity a few days later. You may look at the entry "Gulielmus Filius Johannes Shakespeare" (William son of John Shakespeare) in the parish register. Across the fields in Shottery is the thatched cottage where the poet's future wife Anne Hathaway, had her home.

A GIANT "Shakespeare Exhibition" is to open on the poet's birthday and be on show beside the swan-bedecked Avon all summer. It is a hundred yards from the Royal Shakespeare Theatre, which is planning a season of the complete "historical plays" with an outstanding cast. A festival of Shakespeare music and arts will go on all summer, presenting Yehudi Menuhin, the Bath Festival Orchestra, and dozens of other famous artists.

London is the second indispensable town on any Shakespeare tour. On the way there —or from there as the case may be—halt a while at Oxford. Amidst 800 rich years of history, there is an inn, the Crown, which has the one room in England where Shakespeare is known to have lodged.

At Windsor, inspect the awesome royal castle and the Chapter Library adjoining St. George's Chapel. It was once the School hall of the chapel choir boys and saw the first performance of "The Merry Wives of Windsor" for Queen Elizabeth I. She wanted to see Sir John Falstaff in love, and Shakespeare wrote the play in 14 days especially for her. Have a pint of beer at the Star and Garter Inn, where Falstaff lodged. Bardolph was apprenticed in the kitchen.

LONDON is to be a paradise for the theatergoer from now to November. Six famed national theaters will present a festival at the Aldwych branch of the Royal Shakespeare Theatre, through May. Sir Laurence Olivier will play "Othello" for the first time in his career.

For a real Elizabethan evening in a historically accurate setting with a good time, good food and rollicking entertainment, visit the "Elizabethan Room" of the Gore Hotel. This year a four-room Shakespeare exhibition will be added to help visitors feel a truly 16th century atmosphere.

Or take England's richest literary highway south, through Rochester to Canterbury and Dover. Chaucer's pilgrims passed here, and Falstaff held up Prince Hal on Gad's Hill, where Dickens built a house.

Dover has a site described in "King Lear," where from Shakespeare Cliff "the fishermen that walk upon the beach appear like mice." You can confirm that they do. Also, a pageant of Shakespeare scenes will be given in historic Dover Castle, July 8-18.

DRIVE WEST to Salisbury, which has some claims to be the finest Elizabethan town surviving in Britain. Shakespeare acted Adam in "As You Like It" at stately Wilton House nearby.

Proceed to Bristol, where a Shakespeare Festival including the Bristol Old Vic, is scheduled through May 16. From there visit Berkeley Castle, Gloucester, and Tewkesbury, all great names in the history plays. Visit Warwick, and Kenilworth Castle, where Shakespeare probably saw his first plays when the Earl of Leicester entertained the Queen in 1574.

Drive North for Scotland and that highland grandeur so mystically suggested in "Macbeth." You may visit Glamis, Forres, Cawdor and Inverness. Perhaps from the summit of Dunsinane Castle you can see Birnam Wood (it moved in the play).

Photos by British Travel Association.

Swans still glide on River Avon by the Royal Shakespeare Theater just as they did in Shakespeare's time.

Hotels Speeded in Japan

THE JAPANESE believe that one of the best ways to give visitors an impressive image of their beautiful country is to make their stay as comfortable as possible. Accordingly, they are in the midst of a Gargantuan hotel-building program, not only in Tokyo where the 18th Olympic Games open Oct. 10, but throughout the islands.

The first of these new hostelries — each an elegant palace for the travel worn — already have opened. Others will swing open their doors next month and throughout the summer. By fall, thousands of new rooms will greet the tourist bandwagon.

Largest of them all, and one that the Japanese are pointing to with understandable pride, is the Otani-Sheraton which begins operations in August. With 1202 rooms, it will be capable of accommodating 2,007 guests.

Opening the same month will be the 592-room Tokyo Prince.

THE 76-ROOM Ueno Kokusai Kanko opened in January, followed by the 222-room Hotel Takanawa in February. The 110-room Fairmont begins operations next month and the Western-Japanese style Daiei Kanko will take its first guests in September.

Americans won't have to go to Tokyo to enjoy the luxury of clean, new hotels. In Osaka, the 753-room Shin Hankyu opens in August, followed by the 769-room Shin Osaka Hotel Annex in September.

In Kobe, near Osaka (where new super-express trains will speed Olympics visitors to the capital at 120 mph) the 142-room New Port opened this month, and the 201-room annex to the Oriental Hotel begins business in August.

Nagoya, in the same general area, opens its 261-room Nagoya Kokusai and the International Hotel Nagoya in April.

OTHER NEW hotels include the Hotel Royal, Sapporo, 94 rooms, opening May; Hotel San-ai, Sapporo, 225 rooms, July; Sendai, Sendai, 89 rooms, May; Kawasaki Nikko, Kawasaki, 60 rooms, May; New Fujiya, Atami, 294 rooms (100 of them Japanese-style), May; Toba Kokusai, Toba, 63 rooms, this month; Grand Hotel Gifu, 69 rooms, April, and Kakata Station, Kakata, 124 rooms, this month. There are many others.

All this construction does not mean that there will be no difficulty in obtaining accommodations during the late summer and early autumn. Certainly, these new hotels will add to such hostelries as the Tokyo Hilton opened in 1963, the posh Hotel Okura and a host of other hotels that were available; but it must be remembered that the influx of tourism in Japan will be the greatest in the nation's history.

THE NEW hotels range from luxury establishments providing the ultimate in comfort to the inexpensive for visitors of moderate means. And not all are western style: The Ryokan, whose mood is completely Japanese, is immensely popular with tourists, is available everywhere.

But Western Style or Japanese, vacationists will find that the tradition of gracious service has not been forgotten.

Around the World With DELAPLANE

"Could you tell us the best months to visit Tahiti? Hotel costs? Any other facts that would be helpful."

BEST time would be starting next month — the rainy season is ending. The most popular month is July. These French islands celebrate July 14 Bastille Day for a full month. All the outlying islands people come into little Papeete town. And nobody goes to bed.

Last letter I got from Tahiti said some thousand Foreign Legionnaires are now based there, waiting for France to test a new atom bomb in the Pacific. I gathered that the Legion wasn't doing much for the island. No Paradise.

Hotel costs: Hotel Tahiti is best at $12 to $17 single, $15 to $20 double. Matavai is about two-thirds that price. Best of the medium-cost hotels.

Pan American is now flying this route. So is TAI from Los Angeles — the French airline. (It recently changed its initialed name. But you can find it in the phone book under TAI still.) Flying costs to Tahiti are high enough that I don't think it is worthwhile unless you are going to go onward to Australia and New Zealand. Or stay at least two weeks.

"If we buy a car in Europe, could we put purchases in the trunk and lock it and send them home that way?"

YOU CAN. But you have to declare them when you enter the U.S. The rule is that you have to declare EVERYTHING you get overseas. Even if it was given to you.

A Guide to Fair Going

ling's circus, towering fantasies of glass and steel, predictions of things to come, re-creations of things past.

Exhibits are being executed through ingenious use of electronics, Cinerama, television, stereo, computers, Disneyisms and Hollywood showmanship.

HERE'S A GUIDE to New York fair going:

The fair runs daily from April 22 to Oct. 18, 1964, and from April 21 to Oct. 17, 1965. Gates open at 9:30 a.m., exhibits close at 10 p.m.; but many restaurants and nightclubs will stay open until 2 a.m.

Best days to avoid the big crowds: Mondays and Tuesdays.

Visitors can travel by taxi from Manhattan for about $4, by helicopter for $10, by special excursion boat, bus or train. But the city's three subway lines charge only 15 cents for transportation to the fairgrounds from any point in the system.

Admission tickets ($2 for adults, $1 for children) will be available at the gate. Although most exhibits will be free, fair officials expect the average adult to spend $7.20 a day on admission, meals, souvenirs, shows.

Cheap—at half price—for an instant, ready-mix world vacation.

Mexico's City of Silver

YOU AWAKEN to strange but pleasant music, the music of church bells tolling, cocks crowing, and burros braying. Remembering happily where you are, you breathe deeply of the fresh, clean air and go to your balcony to look down on the extraordinary scene.

Potted petunias and geraniums, wild orchids and bougainvillea splash their color across the red tile-roofed, whitewashed adobe buildings that pyramid up the terraced hills. The sounds move closer and on the narrow, cobblestone streets you see pigs and flocks of chickens scurrying out of the way of Indians with their burdened little pack animals, and sport-shirted tourists out for an early stroll.

You are in Taxco — 100 miles or so south of Mexico City—practically every American's concept of what a Mexican town should be.

TAXCO, pronounced TAHS-co, once the center of a vast silver mining district, is so beloved by the Mexicanos that it has been designated a National Colonial Monument. As such, the quaint cobblestone streets must stay and the construction of modern-style buildings is prohibited.

If you are staying at the Hotel Victoria, the Rancho Telva or one of the other comfortable hostelries in the center of town, you join fellow tourists for a stroll as soon as you have breakfasted. The silver shops for which the town is internationally famous already are open, and from the back rooms come the sounds of the silversmiths' hammers. You leave the narrow street to examine and exclaim over the artistry and variety of the products and, naturally, you barter and buy like crazy.

PRIOR TO the mid-1920s, Taxco was in a state of decay from its heyday as a community supported by the rich silver mines. Then William Spratling, a teacher of architecture at Tulane University, stumbled onto the place. He was so overwhelmed by its architectural beauty that he decided to stay.

It was through Spratling's influence that Taxco became a National Colonial Monument. But he did not stop there. The town needed to regain its former eminence, the natives needed jobs. Spratling revived the almost lost art of silversmithing. Today, a number of mines are operating nearby, and there are more than 100 silver shops in the town, many of them operated by his former employes.

One of the few level spots is the Central Plaza on which rests the Iglesia de San Sebastian y Santa Prisca which, because it dwarfs all other buildings, is the first thing you see when you enter Texaco. With its ornate spires and multi-colored dome, it is considered one of the most beautiful and probably one of the best preserved of the old churches in the Republic.

AS YOU EXPLORE the Plaza, you yourself are relaxed by Mexicans idling on benches under the laurel trees, artists in front of their easels, children making a pretense of selling inexpensive souvenirs.

You are in the midst of a world of make-believe that's very real.

Taxco was founded in 1520 by Hernando Cortez, the Mexican conquerer about the time the Spanish conquistadores discovered the rich mines. Later, a Frenchman, Jose de la Borda came to town—long after the first decline in mining—and discovered a fabulously rich lode of his own. This was in 1747.

From his original and succeeding strikes, Borda amassed a great fortune. In gratitude, he built at a cost of 8 million pesos the great church, completing it in 1758. Still not satisfied, he then rebuilt much of the town itself, which is why just about every structure in Taxco today belongs to the 18th century.

TAXCO was forgotten in the latter part of the 18th century when its mining industry took another nosedive. However, in 1876, the mines were reopened with the help of foreign capital and worked at great profit.

In 1920, when a modern highway connected it with the capital of the Republic—and William Spratling arrived—it shed its cape of isolation to become what it is to this day, a city of silver ringed by emerald mountains that never fails to delight tourists.

Tourist Card

If your visit to Mexico is not more than 30 days, the Mexican Government will issue your tourist card free. If your stay is to be one to six months, the card will cost $3. A $5 multiple entry card permitting you to come and go at will is valid for six months. The Mexican Emmigration Service will issue the cards for each member of your family; you can also get them from the Mexican Government Tourism Dept., 3106 Wilshire Blvd., Los Angeles, or from some of the airlines serving Mexico.

Lure of Alaska

FROM the colorful Gold Rush country of the Yukon to the fringe of the Arctic Circle, the lure of Alaska as a vacation paradise grows each year. The 49th State expects the greatest influx of tourists in its history during the coming season.

One of the popular ways of getting there will be sailings via the Inside Passage route from Seattle. In this one, the ship glides through serene and protected island-dotted waters, never out of sight of the panorama of lush forests, great mountains, tumbling waterfalls, silently-moving glaciers and picturesque Alaskan settlements.

Many tours are offered this year—by plane, cruise ship, ferry, rail and motorcoach—all of which your travel agent will know about. They visit the bustling communities of Anchorage and Juneau, retrace the steps of the miners of '98 to the Ester Gold Fields and old Yukon trails; take in memorable areas such as Mt. McKinley National Park, Lake Bennett, Alyeska (Alaska's ski resort), Matanuska Valley and Skagway.

Some of the tours include side trips, including a two-day Nome-Kotzebue jaunt that reaches primitive Eskimo villages far above the Arctic Circle.

Fair Planning

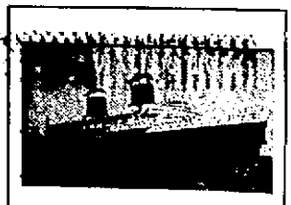

Special planning kits for the vacationer going to New York World's Fair or Hawaii this year have been prepared by United Air Lines.

Colorful, informative and up-to-date information on these popular travel locations are featured, along with suggestions on where to stay, scenic side trips, special services available, and what to see, are included.

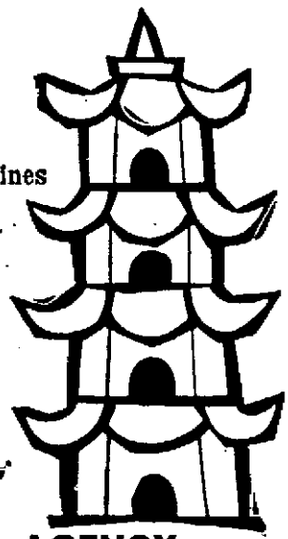

The kits are available at $1 each from United Air Lines, P. O. Box 727, Garden City, N. Y., 11531.

OUR COVER

A bronzed youth, riding a sliver of plastic, is chased shoreward by a million pounds of churning, bubbling water. He accepts the challenge and with tiptoe balance he zips through the salt spray at speeds up to 30 and 40 miles an hour. If he's good, the surfer wins the race. But not always. To find out what happens when the surfer loses the race, read "Bronzed Muscle and Boiling Surf," by Jerome Hall, on Page 7.

NEXT WEEK

Some call Albie Pearson "Mr. Big of the Angels"; others, "The Littlest Angel." Whatever you call this 5-5, 140-pound Los Angeles Angels centerfielder, he's the biggest gun on the team. Last season he batted .304, expects to do better in the season just ahead. Next week, Southland features Albie on its cover, and tells about him as a baseball player, team sparkplug and a man.

Romance of the Easter Orchid

By Hoyt McAfee

EVERY woman who sports a lovely corsage on Easter Sunday will feel more in tune with the spirit of the occasion. Will it consist of roses, gardenias, carnations, orchids, or some other flower? It all depends upon her own preference, or the choice of the person giving her the corsage.

Generally speaking, in major cities across the land, roses, gardenias, and orchids seem to dominate the scene wherever women congregate. Tastes vary from one area to another. Large floral shops in metropolitan centers report, however, that they receive the greatest volume of requests for (1) orchids and (2) roses.

In that connection, one major floral outfit some time back conducted a survey on the subject. It established why such impressive numbers of American women favor the orchid corsage over any other nosegay. To quote some of their replies:

"THE ORCHID gives me a lift in spirit." Another: "It adds a certain chic touch to a woman's appearance." A third one: "To me, it's like a badge of distinction." A fourth: "I think of the orchid as the most glamorous and dramatic of all flowers."

She very definitely has a point there. From close association with two wild-orchid hunters, I know that to be so. They invade remote jungle regions of Central and South America in search of rare specimens. They even risk their necks and meet with hair-raising adventure to collect them.

Take the tropical Renanthera, for example. Uncounted thousands of American girls proudly wear it on Easter Sunday, as well as on other special occasions. Only a rare one among them realizes what a dramatic background it has.

EVEN GADABOUTS like Linda Christian, Ava Gardner, and Debra Paget admitted their knowledge of its history was "skimpy." This particular orchid has blossoms of a bright scarlet color. They always seem ready to burst into flame.

This variety of orchid may be preserved—even worn—almost a week. In the jungle regions of Colombia, Venezuela, Panama, Guatemala and Mexico, appreciative natives look upon this fire-colored orchid with a measure of reverence. In the Maya country of Northern Guatemala, they will stand in front of it for five minutes or longer: speechless with admiration.

My orchid-hunter friends have seen them step forward and stroke the Renanthera's petals gently, much like you'd treat a fond household pet. Latin gallants give the Renanthera only to that very special girl in their lives. "In-the-know" American men take it along as added "bait" when they are serenading a Latin cutie on her balcony porch.

A GIRL who attends a fiesta or a promenade with the Renanthera pinned to her blouse or dress becomes the magnet of admiring eyes. Other women, less fortunate, sigh enviously and comment: "What a thoughtful novio (sweetheart) she must have."

More than all else, an orchid corsage represents a man's tribute to a woman's femaleness. Some girls secretly feel that it sets them apart from the crowd. Men who bestow it as a gift, orchid experts maintain, have a keen appreciation of "the glamorous look."

—Richard Wallmeyer Drawing

Glamour and drama combine in the background of orchid, floral queen of the corsage.

To reach wild orchid country in Central and South American lands, requires tramping through jungle growth, fording swollen rivers, and fighting off the assaults of wild hornets. After hours of prowling in vain, muscles begin to ache and the quest begins to seem a wild-goose chase. But when despair sets in, suddenly something exciting happens.

There—just ahead and just beyond a tangle of jungle growth—looms a riotous profusion of wild orchids! Flame orchids with dove-shaped petals and other enchanting specimens—all of them washed and nurtured by a thousand tropical rains. Clusters of them entwined around old jungle trees.

THE DISCOVERY stirs the hunter deeply, weariness of bone and muscle are forgotten. Such was my response when I accompanied orchid-hunter friends into stretches of jungle in search of rare orchids.

Native guides responded to the find swiftly—by leaping forward, touching the delicate petals, and murmuring over their sheer beauty. In their view certain orchids possess a personality—even a soul! Hence the reason they exercise such meticulous care in handling them.

Wild-orchid hunters stumble across tiger and butterfly orchids frequently. Then there are specimens which some native tribes regard as "lucky." Still others which are thought to be afflicted with a curse.

Some orchids have disagreeable odors—lovely and enticing blooms from a distance, their stench upon close approach is gagging.

Additionally, there's a variety of jungle orchid with a fragrant scent. It expells a perfume more redolent than that of the gardenia. This one flourishes in hideaway areas of back-country Colombia and Venezuela.

AN ORCHID hunt across territory inhabited by primitive native tribes in Colombia can prove dangerous on occasion. Through an oversight, my two hunter-friends learned that the hard way. Down a long stretch of winding jungle river they ventured in their dugouts. Unfortunately, their native guides had paid that area of the country no recent visit.

In the meantime, an uncivilized tribal group—one adept in the use of poisoned darts and blowguns—had moved in and taken over. No one of them was in sight, however, when my friends arrived there. Led by their native guides, they alighted and hacked their way to a spot covered with fallen and crumbling tree trunks.

But what they'd discovered was a sight to remember. Beautiful orchids tumbled to the ground in masses and formed one far-spreading floral carpet! It seemed like a sacrilege to think of removing one petal—or orchid—from that magnificent mound of beauty. And when my friends and the guides did step forward, the move almost proved their undoing.

FOR SUDDENLY, native tribesmen of the area peered from behind jungle bush and poured out their "hot reception." They shot their poisoned darts and arrows in the direction of the unwelcome introduers. Fortunately, the aim of the tribesmen was erratic.

Genuinely frightened, my friends and their guides fled the scene, jumped into their still-intact dugouts, and made their escape down river. Some 30 hours later they reached a friendly village. By questioning some people there they were able to determine the magnitude of their blunder.

That spot a-wash with a riotous growth of wild orchids was, their informants deduced, in all probability a sacred burial ground. No wonder the enraged back-country tribesmen had declared "poisoned-dart warfare" on the hunters!

As women may fully appreciate at this point, the corsages they wear on Easter Sunday may well be spiced with a history of high adventure and romance.

Wood Carvings from Old Sweden

By Helen L. Gillum

LONG AGO in Stockholm, a young lad sat on the back steps of his home and worked with his small knife on a block of wood. His father was a wood carver by trade, and some day he, Eric, would follow in his father's footsteps. But now, for his own amusement, he plied his knife back and forth and in and out, fashioning a diminutive peasant farmer, and, from a similar piece of wood, the peasant's wife.

After his work was finished to his satisfaction, he proudly painted the little figures, adding yellow and red and white to the wife's clothing and sturdier colors in brown, blue and black to the small bearded farmer. Then he perhaps set the figures aside, and, as he grew older, and became more skilled in the woodworkers' art, completely forgot the tiny figures in the pride he took in creating larger and more pretentious works.

The little boy in Sweden of the 1890s never dreamed, of course, that many years later a grandniece in America would acquire and cherish his crude hand-carved figures, or that such humble Old World pieces as these would some day be considered highly desirable in the field of collectibles.

TWO MINIATURE figures, owned by Mrs. Clarence Bonesteel of 312 Smith St., Long Beach, are only 5½ and 5 inches high. But the smooth, yet plainly discernible knife marks, the rough dress and heavy work shoes of the quaint little couple, and the soft patina on the old wood and paint make them irresistibly charming.

A napkin holder owned by Mrs. Bonesteel and made by the same great-uncle several years later is also interesting. In contrast to the squat peasant and his wife, the holder is 12 inches high and is in the shape of a svelte young Swedish woman. The brighter colors and better workmanship are indicative of the advancing skill of the young wood carver. Narrow slits in the lady's skirts hold the napkins.

Miniatures of a farmer and his wife were carved from wood long ago by a great-uncle of a Long Beach woman.

An intriguing feature of the Swedish miss is her "jointed" arms and tiny leather hands.

On a kitchen wall in the Bonesteel home is an attractive arrangement of other woodcraft by the same great-uncle. Two 11½-inch-wide, circular plaques, or "bread-slicers", are gay with brightly-colored figures of young folks in Swedish national costume. Cut-outs of a dancing boy and a dancing girl in holiday attire decorate the wall between the two plaques.

LA REINA RULE

WHAT YOUR NAME MEANS

Send your name to La Reina Rule in care of Southland Magazine, 604 Pine Ave., Long Beach 12, Calif., for origin, meaning and brief genealogy, for reply only in this column.

DEAR MISS RULE: Please give brief data on BYNUM.—B.B., Lakewood.

B.B.: BYNUM was formed many centuries ago in Anglo-Saxon England from the words, "Binna-Ham" meaning "battle-standard carrier's meadow." This apparently referred to the home location of a retired warrior. No other data is accessible on Bynum.

DEAR MISS RULE: Please give data on JERNIGAN.—G.J., Long Beach.

G.J.: JERNIGAN traces back into the 11th century when its source was the old Teutonic "Gern-Wig" meaning "eager warrior." A century later when Gernwig had been introduced to France, it was spelled Gernigan; after usage in England it evolved as Jernigan. Ancestors in Britain include Walter Gernegan of Suffolks, 1273. The Jernegan shield from Norfolk is silver, emblazoned with three red, diamond-shaped belt buckles.

DEAR MISS RULE: May we have data on SCHUG.—P.H., Long Beach.

P.H.: SCHUG harkens back to its old German occupational origin and deciphers as a dialectical form of "Schuh" meaning "shoe." Many centuries ago a provincial German shoemaker artisan bequeathed his trade-name to his descendants.

DEAR MISS RULE: What is the background of MATA.—C.M., A.M., Long Beach; R.M., Wilmington

C.M., A.M., R.M.: MATA originated in medieval Spain and Portugal. This name can mean "thicket of bushes," but the old definition applying to the family name was "home at a grove of trees" or "home in an orchard."

DEAR MISS RULE: Could you analyze TACKETT.—R.T., Garden Grove

R.T.: TACKETT, English in background, had two sources. One was the syllable phrase "Tacco-et" for "little one born in the daytime," from the baptismal name Tacco meaning "day." Tackett also evolved from the old French-English "Taquet" meaning "a small good omen," referring to parental delight in the birth of a son.

DEAR MISS RULE: May we learn about ROOTLIEB?—D.R., Artesia

D.R.: ROOTLIEB is an American form of the ancient German warrior title "Hrodo-Leif" meaning "glorious hero." Gradual surname evolution resulted in changes from Hrodoleif to Rot-leif, then Rot-lieb and Rootlieb.

DEAR MISS RULE: What is the origin of ABBATE?—G.A., Long Beach

G.A.: ABBATE is one of several spellings of "Abate" which in Italian means "abbott" or "head of a monastery." This term was used as a surname in honor of an ancestor so nicknamed from his serious, benevolent bearing and manner, similar to a church prelate.

DEAR MISS RULE: May we have history on MAREZ.—H.M., Long Beach

H.M.: MAREZ is Spanish but was developed from the ancient Gothic given name "Mar" meaning "famous one." Following the Gothic invasion of Spain in the 5th century, A.D., "Mar" was used, combined with the Spanish descendancy suffix "-ez" with the complete surname meaning "son of the famous one."

DEAR MISS RULE: Would you publish data on SWORDS.—R.S., B.K., Long Beach

R.S., B.K.: SWORDS was first used by the son of a "Sweordere" or maker of swords. This ancient English surname can also be from a trademark sign over the doorway of a shop, a picture of a pair of crossed swords. It is strange but no coat-of-arms is available for Swords.

DEAR MISS RULE: May we have data on FORSYTH?—N.F., Long Beach

N.F.: FORSYTH had its origin in Stirlingshire, Scotland. This name is from the

Bronzed Muscle and Boiling Surf

Churning foam tops a wave rising toward its crest and propelling a surfer shoreward. Delicate timing and a sense of balance are a surfer's talents.

By Jerome Hall

THERE'S this dream, see, and it's a swinger. Every surfer has it. All the time. And it's always the same. These great, big waves. Twenty-footers, see?

Swingin'.

The waves come rolling toward shore with perfect rhythm and peel off against the beach. Ahead of each, just far enough ahead to keep from being swallowed in foam, is a lone rider.

By shifting his weight, he trims his board to a new angle, cuts sideways at 40 miles an hour along the swell of water as it reaches high, searching for a place to crash.

As the white water of the wave's advance rises and arcs ahead, it seems to envelope the bronzed surfer and his board, curling over the top of him and collapsing with the force of a thousand . . . nay, a million pounds.

But in the surfer's dream, see, the bronzed youth shoots through the tube of water and out from under as the wave crashes with a frightful roar and rolls down the coastline.

The surfer is hardly dampened by the spray.

That's the dream.

But the dream is turning into a nightmare.

Today surfing is a vast, uncharted world of sport that is gaining devotees in the manner of a tidal wave, causing a dangerous situation on the Southland's beaches.

"There are just too darn many people surfing," claims surfer Ron Maury, "who do not know how to surf." Maury is qualified to criticize, since he is a native-born Hawaiian, and co-founder of the Long Beach Surf Club.

The 100-member Long Beach club is the current international champion, a status recently acquired along the shores of Makaha, the magic Hawaiian word in surfdom. The Long Beach club sent 15 members to the international championships last month and its delegates won first place in four of the six categories, a performance that was startling if not astounding.

THE LONG BEACH club, which has members ranging in age from 16 to the 50s, is being used as a model in surfing. Those who are interested in advancing the sport, clearing its clouded image, are convinced that surfing clubs are the only answer.

"Surfing is out of hand now," says Maury, who began riding boards through the Hawaii breakers as a small boy 30 years ago. "Any kid with the price of a board can give the entire sport a bad name. But people are beginning to get a better impression of surfing even though it gets more crowded and the situation keeps getting worse."

Just how bad the surfing situation will become is anybody's guess. The sport has emerged from its initial growing pains and taken on an aura of glamour, has acquired status. With status will come a new tidal wave of devotees. This summer it may be The Boiling Surf.

One who has done much to boost the image of the sport is 16-year-old Corky Carroll of Surfside. Corky is international paddling champion, an appellation earned against men with many years of experience in the one phase of surfboarding that depends more on muscle than tip-toe balance.

THOUGH CORKY has the physical dimensions of most any 16-year-old, "he will be the greatest paddler in history," in the estimation of Maury, who has known all of the good ones in the past quarter century. "He's close to it right now. He'll be champ for the next 100 years. Nobody will touch his records."

In support, Maury tells the story of Corky's entry into the international meet last month. The young fellow wasn't going to compete because he did not have a racing board, a specially-built board that costs about $1,000 compared to the $75 average cost of an ordinary board.

But Maury convinced the lad he should do it for the experience. Twelve entered the three-quarter-mile race wherein the contestants kneel on the boards and paddle with their hands. Four of the 12 had the expensive racing boards. Corky finished ahead of three of the specially-built boards to win the stock-division championship.

"Finishing second under those circumstances is about like a high school kid borrowing his dad's station wagon and finishing second in the 500-mile race at Indianapolis," says Maury.

THE OTHER three championship trophies won by Long Beach Surf Club members went to Mike Doyle in the open-class Diamond Head race (he finished ahead of Corky on a racing board), to Nancy Nelson who won the women's all-around title and to Doyle paired with Linda Merrill in the tandem class. Doyle, a Long Beach State College student, resides in Surfside. Miss Merrill and Miss Nelson in Capistrano.

In the tandem event the two ride a single board and perform acrobatics while the wave sweeps them shoreward. They encounter about the same problems as a circus high wire act trying to perform in a hurricane.

Surfing is a dangerous sport, make no mistake. "It's like fighting the bulls, in some ways," says Maury. "There's a moment of truth, waiting for that wave." But in 30 years he has been clapped in the head only once. That accident was a recent one, caused by a crowded beach.

When a rider loses his board, it becomes an unguided missile tossed about by an ocean that has more raw energy than all the rockets and bullets and TNT at man's command. There have been deaths on Southland beaches in recent weeks from such accidents.

THERE IS TWO-FOLD danger in a "wipeout." If the fallen surfer is not hit by the board, he is almost certain to be struck by the force of the wave. The water churns beneath the surface as well as above it and when it catches the surfer it tosses him toward the ocean floor.

He must then struggle back to the surface, timing himself so that he does not come up too soon, for he would be caught in a foam so thick that he could not breathe.

Too, he must remember that there is another wave right behind which might send him hurtling back to the bottom with lungs empty.

"The first thing we try to teach," says Maury, "is to have respect for the ocean even though you're only a few yards from shore. But some of these young fellows just won't learn

Cattle Brands of the Dons

Accoutrements of western pioneer days—chaps, spurs, branding irons—gain new interest in these days of television westerns. Above, some of the branding irons that have come down from the dons to the present on Bixby Ranches.

By G. J. Salzer

IN THE DAYS of the great ranchos, cattle brands were important to every ranchero, his associates and his hirelings, and so it was in the Long Beach area until time and exploding population changed the ways.

But time and television westerns have altered the mood again and knowledge of the branding of cattle and of the brands used in this section become of interest. Of special note are those brands used before there was a city of Long Beach as well as those employed by Rancho Los Alamitos.

The use of brands goes back more than 4,000 years. Egyptian tombs indicate that cattle were branded as early as 2,000 B.C. The American custom of cattle banding was adopted from Mexico. The Mexican Dons branded their huge herds with their family coat-of-arms and, as the cattle industry moved northward into Texas, this method of indicating ownership was gradually accepted by the Americans.

Today, there are hundreds of thousands of cattle brands registered in the United States. At one time there were no fences in the vast West and even today much of the cattle area is open range. Cattle wander far in grazing, herds become mingled. The round-up permits separation of each owner's stock and because calves always follow their mother, the ownership of unbranded calves is easily determined.

The annual spring round-up has as one of its principal purposes the finding and branding of the past year's calf crop.

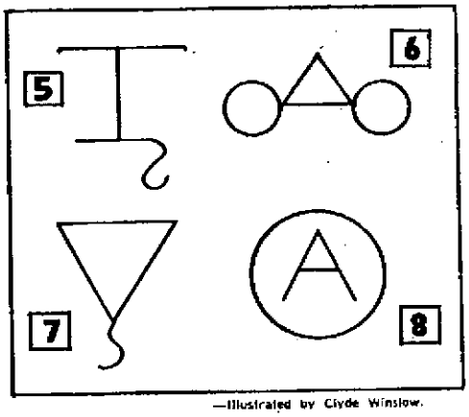

IN THE EARLY days of the cattle industry, ranchers used large brands that nearly covered an animal's entire body. Later, when cattle hides began to bring a good price, this practice gave way to the smaller, carefully forged branding iron that left a neat, easy-to-read mark—usually on the left hip or high on the left ribs.

The legibility of a brand depends on the cowboy applying it and on the type of iron used as well as the design of the brand used.

The best branding irons are made from high-quality metal, one-half to one inch thick with the face drawn and beveled to a width of about one-quarter of an inch. Letters and symbols are usually about four inches high and the handle about 36 inches long.

The brand is applied with a grey-hot iron, about the color of the branding fire ashes. A red-hot iron produces an overburned brand. This often results in sores which may become infected. Cattle are never branded when hides are damp as this causes a scalded or blotched mark.

In 1784, 15 years after Spain acquired California, a land grant was given to Manuel Nieto. This land grant covered about 156,000 acres.

—Illustrated by Clyde Winslow.

The brand used by Don Manuel Nieto is not found in any Registry Book.

WHEN DON Manuel Nieto died in 1804, his son, Juan Jose Nieto, inherited the Rancho Los Alamitos and his daughter, Manuela, the adjoining Rancho Los Cerritos.

On June 30, 1834, Juan Jose Nieto sold the Rancho Los Alamitos to Jose Figueroa, Governor of California, for $500, and the brand passed from Nieto's hands to those of the Governor. This brand was a triangle with a small line on top. (See Illustration No. 1.)

After this transaction, brands became a little easier to trace.

It appears that the original brand of Juan Jose Nieto that was acquired by Governor Figueroa was transferred to Don Abel Stearns. Don Abel purchased the Rancho Alamitos in 1842 and recorded two brands in 1853. (See Nos. 1 and 2.)

The records for both brands reads, "Abel Stearns comes and presents the foregoing brand and earmarks and proof of its transfer to him and the same is registered as his brand and earmarks this 15th day of April, 1853.—Wilson Jones, Recorder."

ANOTHER BRAND USED by Don Abel Stearns (See No. 3) was registered as follows: 'Abel Stearns comes and presents for registry this counter brand, April 15, 1853.—Wilson Jones, Recorder."

Brand No. 4 was confirmed to Don Juan Temple, January 11, 1844, recorded by Don Felipe Lugo.

Brands Nos. 5 and 6 were issued to John Temple, May 15, 1852.

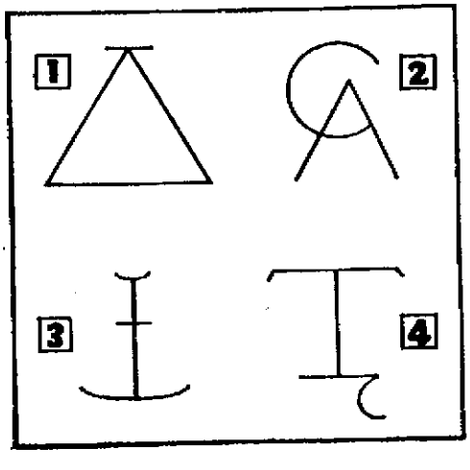

Brand No. 7 was first used by the Bixbys to stock Ranchos Alamitos and Cerritos. As shown in the Book of Brands, J. Bixby and Company inverted the triangle and added a tail to the old Nieto brand. Recorded June 28, 1870, by T. D. Mott, Recorder.

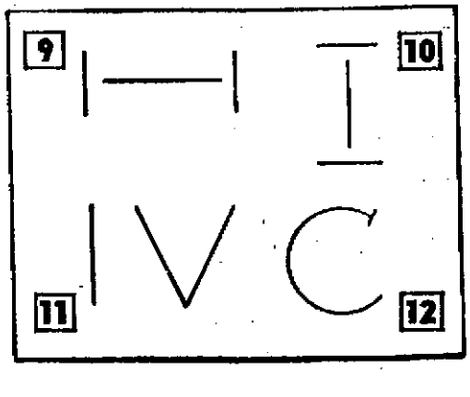

Circle A, a John Bixby brand (See No. 8), came into use shortly after 1880 and was handed down to Fred H. Bixby.

Since that time Mr. Bixby has used Nos. 9 and 10, known as the Three Bar Brand, and No. 11, known as the IV Brand. All these were made by a straight iron laid on the hide to form the different brands.

The C Brand (No. 12) is now used by the Fred H. Bixby Company.

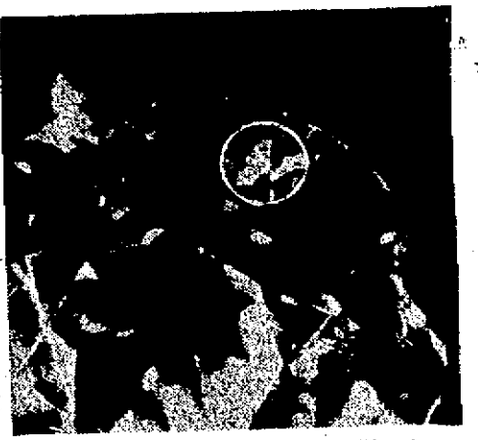

In the accompanying illustration are shown thick leather chaps, homemade, which were worn to protect the rider's legs from chaparral and other growth through which he was compelled to ride in carrying out his duties. A gun in the patch holster at left center of the picture was carried to protect the herds. It is a .44 caliber mounted on a .38 frame—a Colts and carried for hunting game as well as protection.

The author of this article on early brands is assistant secretary of the Fred H. Bixby Ranch Co., operators of Los Alamitos Ranch; Long Beach; El Cojo and Jalama Ranches, Lompoc; Rowland, La Puente, and Shorb, Anaheim.

He's a Diamond's Very Best Friend

By Larry Allison

WHEN AN FBI agent retires at 50 after 21 years of carrying a revolver and working on cases ranging from World War II sabotage to capturing armed robbers, what does he do—go on with another form of police work, or take up a hobby?

Smiling, quiet-spoken George J. Nagel, who would never be taken for a special agent of the FBI, did neither—and yet he did both. Nagel, for 10 years the Bureau's senior agent in the Long Beach area, started a business of his own that smacks of both his FBI career and his favorite pastime—working with jewels.

Former FBI agent, George J. Nagel now operates a diamond appraisal service, making scientific gem appraisals and preparing documented positive identification of stones. He is shown with microscope used in detecting flaws, nicks and/or other clues that make up gems' "fingerprints."

An ex-rock hound who still cuts and polishes gems for the fun of it, Nagel now operates Long Beach Diamond Appraisers, which offers jewelers, jewelry owners and insurance companies what is probably the only service of its kind in the nation. Acting as an impartial observer interested in neither buying nor selling jewelry, Nagel makes scientific appraisals of value and in addition gives the jewelry owner something almost unheard of in the past—a document providing positive identification of the gems.

It is the identification system that hints at Nagel's former career. As an FBI agent, he frequently had to try to identify valuable stones recovered from thieves.

"SOMETIMES this is just about impossible," Nagel says. "The first thing a jewel thief does is remove the bigger stones from their settings. Once this is done, even a person who has had a diamond ring or bracelet for years rarely will recognize the loose diamonds."

If a large stone has an obvious identifying characteristic, the thief will cut the stone into smaller ones and peddle them.

Nagel's solution to this problem is to provide with every appraisal a precise, written description of the jewel based on a microscopic examination of its hidden flaws.

"The description furnished in an ordinary appraisal of a diamond," Nagel says, "could apply to 1,000 different stones of the same size. But actually, every stone is unlike any other—just like human fingerprints."

And, like fingerprints, descriptions of jewels can be filed and coded for possible future use. Nagel, who keeps records of all his appraisals, is building up just such a file now to protect his clients. Eventually, he believes, the file also will aid police in theft investigations.

THE "FINGERPRINTS" of a diamond or other precious stone are its inclusions, or flaws. When properly recorded, a gem can be identified by these characteristics even if it is later cut into smaller ones.

Types of flaws, which number in the hundreds, include carbon patterns (in diamonds), minute fractures and two and three-phase inclusions.

An emerald, which has a value about equal to a diamond of similar quality, has three-phase inclusions. These are tiny pockets containing liquid (which may be millions of years old), a bubble of gas and a speck of crystal. By examining the shape of the crystal contained in the pocket, an expert can tell if the emerald is from South America (square crystal) or from mines in Siberia (diamond-shaped).

Nagel's description of a gem also includes its type of cut, weight, and dimensions to a hundredth of a millimeter.

When it comes to setting the value of a jewel, Nagel again uses a scientific approach. A diamond, the gem most frequently appraised, is graded for weight, flaws, color and proportions, then its value is computed mathematically. Diamond prices are standard throughout the world because they are controlled by the South African cartel De Beers Consolidated Mines, Ltd.

BUT DON'T ASK Nagel what the going rate is for a one-carat diamond. "That's like asking what a two-door automobile is worth," he says. "It depends on many factors—its flaws, color, and whether it is cut to ideal proportions for brilliance." Prices may vary as much as 400 per cent between two stones of the same size.

Nagel's services are drawing good response from insurance companies, which need not only an accurate description of insured jewels but an appraisal without guesswork, and by jewelers, who mostly do appraisal work as a sideline they'd just as soon not be involved in.

Individual owners of jewelry like the scientific approach, too. "There's something about owning a diamond," Nagel says, "that makes a person wonder just how much it's really worth."

Nagel frequently does appraisals for people considering the purchase of a stone, and his clients come from as far as 200 miles. Some of them buy jewels as investments, and want an exact appraisal before they make a purchase.

Whether or not diamonds are a girl's best friend doesn't much concern Nagel. But, he says, in recent months they have been an excellent investment; in 1963 alone, diamond prices rose from 10 per cent for less valuable stones to 30 and 40 per cent for rare, high-quality ones.

"IT USED TO BE that American diamond buyers shopped in Europe," Nagel says. "Now it's the other way around; Europeans are putting their new wealth into jewelry, and the buyers are shopping in the United States. Scarcity of the better stones is forcing up prices."

Nagel, who retired a year ago, doesn't talk much about his experiences in the FBI except to say he never once had to draw his pistol. His family, accustomed to years of hearing little of his involvement in top-secret investigations, seldom ask about his former career even now.

Before venturing into his new work, Nagel studied at a gemological institute in Los Angeles.

Nagel, whose two daughters, Nancy, 19, and Patty, 18, attend Long Beach State College, runs his business in the Heartwell Bldg. at 19 Pine Ave. together with his wife, Jeanne. Mrs. Nagel, now learning how to use a microscope, is his secretary, receptionist and—quips Nagel—"the administrator."

Nagel's business suite, far removed from any sort of jewelry store, resembles more a lawyer's office except for his instruments and some replicas of famous stones he keeps on his desk.

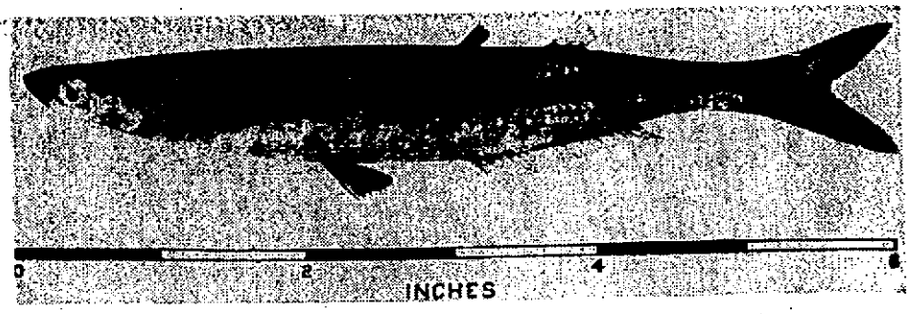

But on the walls are five surrealistic-looking oil paintings, done by Nagel, which give him away. On close inspection, each proves to be a microscopic view of a jewel—inclusions and all.

Ex-agent Nagel has no security problems with his business, because he never keeps jewelry in his office overnight. Nonetheless, he remains in touch with "the boys" of the FBI. "I was in the Bureau a long time," he says fondly, "and I still am. Once you're an agent, you always are."

Man-Nature Ritual by Moonlight

By Lou Jobst

EACH YEAR—starting in March and ending in September—Southern California goes grunion hunting, a strange man-nature ritual that is played only in the light of a full moon.

The newcomer to the region is likely to eye with suspicion his first invitation to hunt grunion, recalling the "snipe hunt" and other back east hoaxes, but the initiated will respond with glee to word the silverlings are running.

Grunion—for the record and the skeptical—are slender, silvery fishes, five to eight inches long.

IN MASSES of thousands, the grunion fling themselves onto sandy Southland strands about 10 to 15 times (see accompanying calendar) each year to mate and spawn. With equal ardor and since the turn of the century bands of beach roving hunters throw themselves on the fish, scooping them into gunny sacks and even clothing, in a one-sided orgy called "grunion hunting."

The grunion spawn, during the Spring and Summer, on three or four nights following each full or new moon. They come in only at high tide periods ranging from one to three hours.

During the time ashore the grunion mate, dig holes, lay their eggs and retreat back into the sea.

ALL RUNS, except those in April and May, peak spawning months, are open season.

The rules are few. The grunion can be caught only by hand and it's unlawful to dig holes, use nets or set traps. A $3 fishing license is required for all persons over 16. There's no limit.

Although authorities have closed the peak season they are not afraid the grunion will be decimated, the fish are too prolific for that.

Marine biologists say a single female will spawn four to eight times a year, producing 1,000 to 3,000 eggs every 15 days.

The grunion, to be eaten, should be scaled, rolled in meal and fried.

Grunion Hunt Schedule

Here's your 1964 Southland Grunion Hunt Card (clip and keep):

Dates	Beginning Times
March 29-30-31	10 p. m., 10:30 p. m., 11:30 p. m.

Day of the Jokers

By Enole Chamberlin

IT IS THE morning of April First—just any old year. What a wonderful day it is! A day when you can play pranks and jokes from sun up until midnight and no one gets mad. Or they are not supposed to, anyhow. Your mind darts here and there like a swallow after a flying insect. You are trying to think of whom you will tackle first. Then right in front of you on the ground you see the cap you lost yesterday. The one you had to take a scolding about. Hah! You'll get it and April fool Mother. You reach for it. Wham! It goes snapping over behind a hedge, jerked by a string. Laughter is salt on an open wound. Words jar against your ears.

"April Fool!"

You set your teeth. What a horrible day this is. There should be a law against it. But really you know there is nothing the matter with the day. To the boys who pulled the joke on you, it's a glorious day. And to you, when you have pulled off a good fat joke, it will be a glorious day, too. And that's how it has been for many a year, and will probably continue to be. For everyone likes a joke—when it's on the other fellow. And this whole April Fool business is a joke on all of us for no one seems to know just when or where or why the bit of tomfoolery started. There are many suppositions as to its origin but no real knowledge. However, there is one opinion about it which has a more likely sound than any of the others. To understand why we must consider the calendar.

YOU KNOW, of course, that in 46 B. C. the Julian calendar came into existence with March 25 being the first day of the year. This New Year date was celebrated as we celebrate New Year's today, only more so, since the festivities lasted for a week. The fun-making reached its height on April 1 when friend visited friend exchanging gifts much as we do at Christmas time today. Then, in 1564, the Reformed calendar succeeded the Julian. France was the first country to lay away the old and start using the new. This calendar set the New Year back to January 1, as it is today.

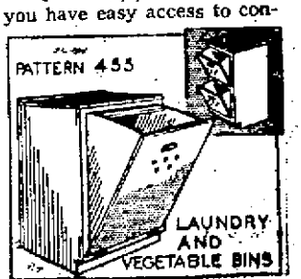

So, keeping up an old custom but doing it in the spirit of a joke, people exchanged mock gifts. They made elaborate visits to friends for the sole purpose of making fools out of them if by chance they had forgotten the changed calendar. Once started, the custom of trying to fool people was, as it is today, too good a thing to discard. So it was continued even after its origin was forgotten.

SOME TIME passed, perhaps, before the April foolishness spread to other countries. After all, it was some years before some of the other nations adopted the changed calendar. Besides, communication was slow and uncertain in those days. But spread the custom did until today even the Oriental people have taken it on. They send friends on fruitless errands, to the market to get something which does not exist, macaroni seed, for instance, or to carry a message to someone who isn't at home. College students in England make a big production out of the Fool's Day. They spend much time thinking up pranks which sound so honest that people do not think of them as jokes at all—until it is too late.

In America, April 1 is a day of merriment. So, if you have a prank played on you while you are trying to think up one to play on someone else, take it in good part, laugh it off, and just keep on planning how you are going to even the score and a little more. Always, of course, in a manner which is not rough, unmannerly or dangerous. For this day should be a day of laughter for both the joker and the victim.

SOUTHLAND HOMES

Substance, Beauty and Time-Matured

By Stella George

SEVERAL years ago Mr. and Mrs. Robert Williams built their house at 3851 Gundry Ave. in Bixby Knolls. The street is in the quiet, established residential area where the trees have had a chance to grow, and homes have the substantial, mature beauty that only time can achieve.

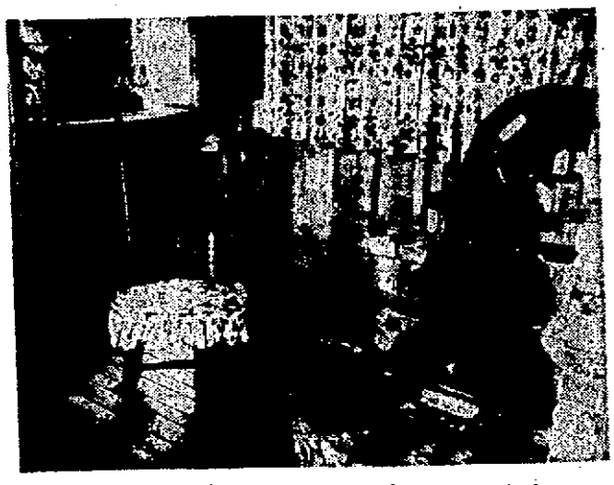

There is an inviting cordiality about the Williams home which has instant appeal. This is due to the good layout of the house, the furniture arrangement, and the excellent use of color throughout. Mrs. Williams is a professional interior designer, and her home reflects her talent in this calling.

Walls, carpeting, and drapes are of an oyster shade, a good neutral background color for the predominant blues and greens in the furnishings and accessories. The carpet is a thick, luxurious wool turf that always looks new and wears almost indefinitely.

TWIN turquoise sofas face each other in front of the fireplace. Another conversation grouping is placed across the way with a couch and peacock green chair. In front of a bay window is a dainty desk made of fine walnut—in reality it is one of the first cabinet sewing machines made, circa the late 1800s. Now, with the machine itself removed, it serves in a new capacity.

Originally, the dining room was formal, but in recent years the Williams opened up walls to combine the dining and family rooms into one large area, with an open kitchen adjoining.

Mrs. Williams has blended the old and the new with skill. The new dining room set is continental height. At the other far end of the room is a walnut rattan conversation group. Bookshelves line one wall, giving way for space at one end for a built-in gun rack. The wall decoration behind the rattan grouping is most original, designed and executed by Mrs. Williams. It is a three-dimensional tree which she carved from plywood, then painted with appropriate colors. Branches are realistic: pieces of manzanita placed here and there with birds and butterflies perched, ready for flight. The tree covers the entire wall. The "something old" in the room includes such items as crystal pieces on a triangular corner table, very old and decorative books, and other heirlooms.

A pot-bellied little stove standing on specially built used brick pedestal is a unique bit of kitchen decor.

Of special interest in the window groupings at the left is a desk which was once the cabinet of an early-day console sewing machine. Above, furniture arrangement in living room is especially inviting for visiting. Carpet is thick wool turf.

Most used area in the home, perhaps excepting kitchen, the family room has this interesting grouping.

THE KITCHEN is an Early American flower garden, that is to say, the decor is enhanced with flower displays in abundance. An interesting decoration in the kitchen is an old pot-bellied stove, black and very small in size, which rests on its own used brick pedestal. Nearby, is a comfortable rocking chair, conveniently close to a telephone. A dinette adjoins the kitchen on one side, a service porch on the other. The latter is as attractive as the large rooms, complete with flower arrangements.

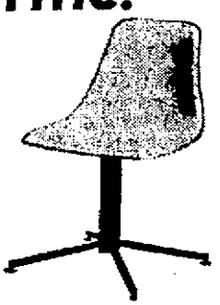

The master bedroom is spacious, made even more so with a bay window. A tete-a-tete table and two chairs fit into the alcove. Blue is the accent color in the room. The second bedroom is now used as a den. Twin beds serve as large sofas which were indispensable when the room was used as a bedroom by a now-grown daughter, are very handy in the den.

The patio leads to a pool and rear garden. Shrubs and plants flourish in abundance.

Sequoia of the Dinosaur Age

Earl Frothingham stands in front of his 40-foot Dawn redwood, a tree whose history goes back 100 million years.

By Irma McCall

WOULD YOU like to see a tree with ancestors that sheltered dinosaurs?

Pass up the palms, eucalyptus, and peppers, but stop at 4702 Village Road and on the north side of the front yard you will discover a Dawn redwood. The owner, retired forester Earl Frothingham, declares, "This sequoia is the prize of all my 60 different kinds of trees. A friend in Berkeley gave it to me in 1950 in a gallon can. Now it's at least 40 feet high.

"The Dawn redwood is unique, for its history goes back 100 million years. Scientists thought it had been extinct for 20 million years.

"BUT IN 1944 a Chinese forester working for his government discovered an enormous tree in a secluded valley in Szechaun. He had never seen one like it, so he took some needles and cones back to Nanking. An expert there was amazed! The foliage and cones were identical with fossil specimens of the Metasequoia which grew in the age of dinosaurs. Luckily peasants wanting land had never cut the forest in this hidden valley.

"Seedlings brought from China have done well in California."

When Frothingham retired in 1945 he wanted to find a satisfying hobby. He told his sister Frances, "I'm going to plant as great a variety of foliage on this lot as possible."

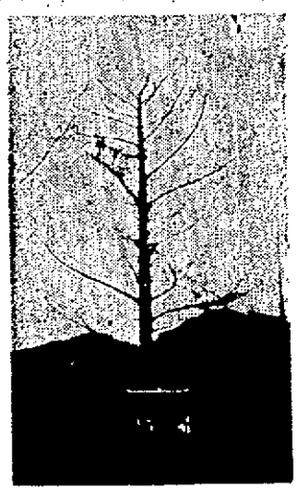

The 60 by 150-foot lot does not seem crowded, although 60 varieties of trees and numerous plants and flowers flourish there.

By appointment visitors may see his Elysian garden and forget freeway roar as they wander along tranquil paths curving through the greenery of the back yard. They may rest by a plot of peppermint geranium, gift of Julia Ellen Rogers, and dream they are in the tropics while munching sweet white sapote.

Plant Trees Now

In some places you may still be able to get fruit trees bare root. Check to see that the roots are in good condition, plump, not shriveled; prune off broken or scuffed ones before you plant.

If the bare-root season is over where you garden, you will find all the trees in cans or balled and burlapped at your California Association of Nurserymen shop and ready to set out.

A Metasequoia in China, where first one was discovered. Photos were in 1947.

The Daughter of the Emperor

Sophia Loren, heading a cast that includes nine great stars in Samuel Bronston's "The Fall of the Roman Empire," portrays the daughter of the emperor, trapped in the struggle for survival of the Eternal City.

"The Fall of the Roman Empire" relives the drama and the grandeur of the world that was Rome.

There comes a time in the destiny of an empire when the first stones of a noble edifice begin to crumble. Samuel Bronston's "The Fall of the Roman Empire" tells the story of this crucial moment in history when the virtues and principles that made Rome great, typified by the Emperor Marcus Aurelius, were destroyed by his licentious and power-obsessed successor in the Second Century, A. D.

Bronston has again enlisted the services of director Anthony Mann and cinematographer Robert Krasker, the team responsible for his memorable "El Cid." Also part of the Bronston team once again are designers Colasanti and Moore, who have recreated in full scale and majesty the Roman Forum as it existed 1,800 years ago.

The pomp and pageantry of the day, the thrilling sweep of battles between Rome and its rebellious subjects, the elements of personal drama and a poignant love story are all realized with full impact in Ultra-Panavision and Technicolor on the wide screen.

Heading the roster of great stars is Sophia Loren in the moving role of Lucilla, daughter of the Emperor, with Stephen Boyd as Livius, gallant soldier and suitor. Alex Guinness is nobly cast as the wise Marcus Aurelius, with James Mason as his friend and philosopher, while Christopher Plummer portrays the infamous Commodus, heir to the Imperial throne.

Rounding out this impressive array of acting talent are Anthony Quayle, John Ireland, Mel Ferrer and Omar Sharif.

The story of "The Fall of the Roman Empire," embodying the conflicting forces of good and evil in a disordered world, is as valid today as it was in the time of ancient Rome, providing significant as well as enthralling screen entertainment.

Soup for Sunday Supper

Delicious, nutritious, Hearty Bean-Olive Soup is a good Sunday supper filler-upper.

By Mildred K. Flanary
Southland Magazine Home Economics Editor

ARE YOU looking for a Sunday evening "filler-inner"? Well, few other types of food have the "stick-to-the-ribs" quality inherent in Hearty Bean-Olive Soup.

You can make an entire meal of this nutritious and delicious mixture of white navy beans, ripe olives, onion, carrot, celery and parsley seasoned with bacon, salt pork and molasses.

Just before serving add milk and heat through to piping hot for one of the most filling soups you've ever savored. And don't forget, after the beans are cooked, mash some of them to give the soup desirable thickness.

Besides possessing popular flavor, ripe olives are noteworthy nutritionally. They contain pro-vitamin A, ascorbic acid (vitamin C), six B vitamins and essential minerals, including calcium and iron. And their fruit oil, which is readily digestible, provides much-needed food energy.

Hearty Bean-Olive Soup

1¼ cups white navy beans
5 cups water
½ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon molasses
2 oz. Salt Pork, cubed
1 medium-size onion
3 slices bacon, diced
1 small carrot
1 stalk celery
3 sprigs parsley
1 cup ripe olives
2 cups milk

Place beans in large kettle. Add water, salt, molasses and salt pork. Chop onion and add half to beans. Cover, bring to boil and simmer 2½ to 3 hours, until beans are cooked. Fry bacon; add remaining onion and fry until tender and transparent. Finely dice carrot, celery and parsley (or cut coarsely and whir in blender with about 1 cup of bean mixture). Mash some beans with a spoon. Add onion, bacon, carrot, celery and parsley. Cut olives into large pieces; add to bean mixture. Simmer for 30 minutes. Add milk and heat through. Serve immediately. Makes 2 quarts soup.

Recipe of the Week

FOUR FRUITS flavor a bread recipe that wins $5 for Mrs. Cecil E. Shortridge, 12702 Monroe St., Garden Grove. The recipe:

Four Fruit Bread

2 cups sifted all-purpose flour
¾ cup beet sugar or cane
3 tsp. baking powder
¼ tsp. salt
1 tsp. grated lemond rind
½ cup currants or raisins, chopped
⅓ cup cut-up dates
2 eggs beaten
3 tblsp. shortening—melted
1 cup mashed bananas

Sift together flour, sugar, baking powder and salt. Add lemon rind, currants and dates. Mix together lightly. Mix together eggs, melted shortening and mashed bananas. Add to dry ingredients all at once and stir just enough to blend well. Turn into greased 9½x5¼x2¾ loaf pan. Bake at 350° for 45 to 50 minutes. Yield: One loaf.

What's your favorite recipe? For each recipe published in this space, Southland will pay $5. Men are urged to submit their recipes along with the ladies. Send yours, with name and address to Recipe Contest Editor, Southland Magazine, 604 Pine Ave., Long Beach 12, Calif.

Low, sleek and efficient, this barbecue gives the chef an opportunity always to be in the midst of good times.

By Bill Meyerriecks

TIME soon for those outdoor barbecues again, and Sketchbook this week presents a unique idea to revamp and revive interest in back yard or patio barbecuing. It's an oriental style brick barbecue and the plan shows where every one of the 394 bricks sets down, both in illustrations and detailed instructions. You can't go wrong.

Designed in U-shape, the unit is about 18 inches high and covers about a 5-foot square. It is a complete unit of fire pit and serving tables —the chef can stay with the party!

The charcoal pit is one layer of brick deep in the center section. The sides, or tables, are redwood bolted to the underlying brick. Guests, six to eight, can be seated comfortably.

Or you can use the unit as a buffet to keep food handy and hot.

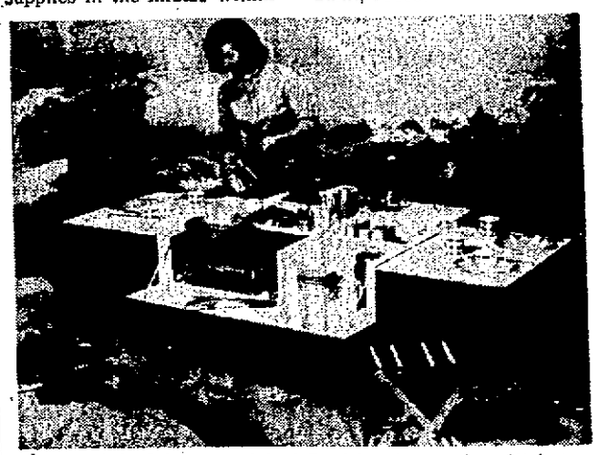

The Sketchbook plan shows an alternate for using an hibachi for barbecuing; an exact arrangement of bricks in the center section of the unit where the original type charcoal holder fits.

When ordering, specify Barbecue Plan S-154 and send 50 cents with name and address to Building Editor, Southland Magazine, 64 Pine Ave., Long Beach, Calif., 90812.

Build a Camp Kitchen

IF YOU ARE an outdoor lover and are looking forward to camping next summer, now is a good time to get into the swing by building the camp kitchen pictured below, a unit that will make meal preparation easy and will serve as camp food center. It has compartments for utensils, canned goods, food containers and camp stove. Top leaves open to make dining table space for as many as six persons, with food and supplies in the middle within everyone's reach. Handles on each end make carrying easy. Dimensions are, when folded, 28x39x9 inches. It fits easily into the car trunk.

The kitchen is easily constructed from a pattern, which also includes the "how to" of making the stools. To get it, specify Kitchen-Stool Pattern No. 336 and send $1 in currency, check or money order to Steve Ellingson, Pattern Dept., Southland Magazine, Box 2383, Van Nuys, Calif., 91409.

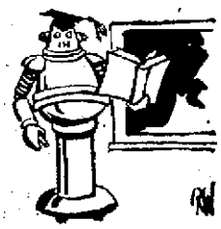

NBC's Bob Osborne and Lori Patrick enjoy outdoor kitchen.

HOW YOUR CHILD LEARNS

A Human Factor

By Howard E. Kent

QUESTION: There have been a lot of new theories and approaches introduced in recent years in our school systems—a faster rate of work, more emphasis on science and math, new ways of teaching algebra, experiments in television instruction. Students seem to adjust pretty well to the changes. But how about the teachers?

ANSWER: Teachers are human. Many of them resist change. The idea of television instruction, for example, raises fears of being replaced by the machine. Instead of accepting TV as a tool, many teachers receive it as an enemy.

As surely as students have feelings of inadequacy and insecurity on the first day of school, teachers feel inadequate and insecure when asked to change their habits and patterns of teaching.

The difficulties of educational progress are much the same as those of science, which has always had to fight ignorance and fear, not only among the public but in its own ranks.

QUESTION: Do the educational facilities of a community affect its economic development?

ANSWER: When deciding whether to locate in a community, most major companies these days inquire about the adequacy of the school system, the amount spent for education, and the number of high school and college graduates living there.

Gov. Terry Sanford of North Carolina said recently:

"I am convinced that the half a billion dollars invested in new plants in North Carolina in 1961 and 1962 could not and would not have been invested except for the support of education in our state."

Famous for its support of public education in modern times, California is today a mecca for Americans in search of better jobs and a progressive environment.

QUESTION: How much are we spending a year per pupil to send America's children to grade and high school?

ANSWER: Cost per pupil on the basis of average daily attendance is $455.

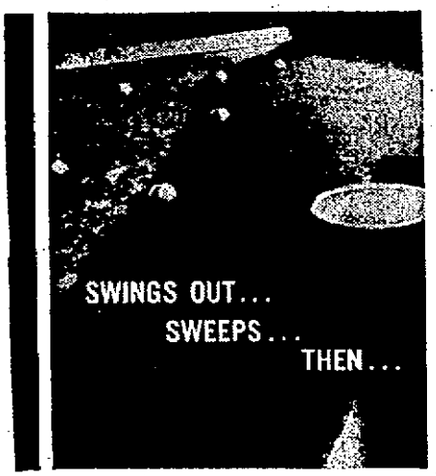

Violas Plentiful, In Prime Now

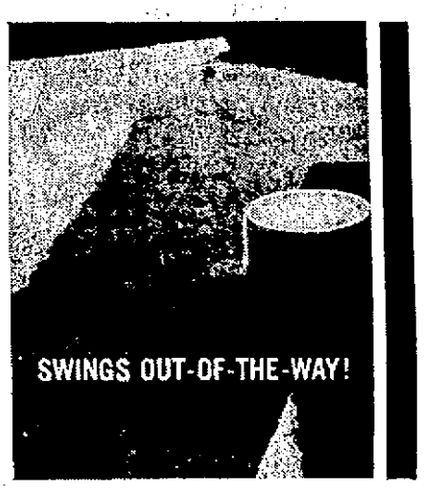

Violas are plentiful and in their prime in the nurseries as seedlings now. They differ from pansies only in being all of a color (self-color the nurserymen say), but this gives us a chance to "paint" our garden with a single color if we want to. A solid edging of yellow violas or the clear blue violas is handsome indeed. They do want moisture and protection from snails and slugs.

MEDICINE AND YOU

New Drug May Aid Virus Fight

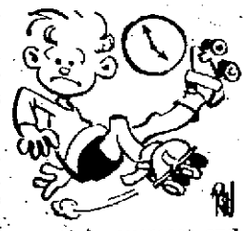

By Ben Zinser

Southland Magazine Medical-Science Writer

A NEW DRUG now used mainly to counter virus infections in the eye may prove to be of value in the treatment of certain systemic virus infections, Yale University researchers believe.

The drug is idoxuridine.

One scientist, Dr. Paul Calabresi, thinks idoxuridine may be effective against smallpox and other viruses that have a core of DNA (deoxyribonucleic acid).

Viruses are microscopic particles with a protein overcoat and a core of either DNA or RNA (ribonucleic acid). Because of idoxuridine's mode of action, it would not be effective against RNA-type viruses. However, there are many significant DNA viruses, such as smallpox, herpes, chickenpox, some type of encephalitis and some rare but usually fatal tropical diseases.

Science has long been searching for an effective antiviral drug.

AN ACCIDENT is most apt to happen to a child between 3 and 6 p. m. on a Saturday, according to research conducted by Children's Hospital Medical Center in Boston. The Boston study discloses that hunger or fatigue, particularly during the hour before a scheduled meal, predisposes to accident.

THE TECHNIQUE of orophonics—breathing into a telephone—can be an aid in the diagnosis of respiratory ailments, four Evanston, Ill., doctors report.

The doctors have tape-recorded 50 cases of normal breathing and breathing heard in colds, asthma, bronchiolitis, pneumonia, infectious croup, whooping cough and other disorders. They also recorded the breathing of premature infants with respiratory stress and those with normal breathing.

These tapes were played over a telephone for evaluation.

In the past two years the doctors have listened to the telephone breathing of 232 patients in a study to test the effectiveness of this diagnostic aid.

The study is reported in the American Journal of Diseases of Children.

LARGE DOSES of prednisone, a cortisone-like drug, benefited nine patients with multiple sclerosis, reports an Emory University physician.

All patients began to improve within two to four days, reports Dr. R. F. Kibler. No patient relapsed less than two months after the drug was stopped.

The medication was administered after flareups of the disease had caused moderate to severe weakness in two or more extremities.

The report was made to a medical meeting jointly sponsored by the New York Academy of Sciences and the National Multiple Sclerosis Society.

A NEW ANTIBIOTIC, nalidixic acid, is proving effective against a wide variety of micro-organisms that cause urinary tract infections, according to a report in British Medical Journal. The new drug will be known as Negram when it becomes available for general use.

GIVING THE new drug Trasylol both before and after certain types of surgery may prevent fatal pancreatic inflammation, new research suggests.

Inflammation of the pancreas is not uncommon following surgery of the pancreas or the biliary tract, three researchers note in the AMA Journal. However, experiments with animals indicate that dosage with Trasylol before and after surgery may prevent development of postoperative pancreatitis.

AFTER 32 YEARS' experience of using cadaver blood for transfusions, a Soviet scientist says transfusion complications are fewer than when live-donor blood is used.

Dr. B. A. Petrov of the Sklifosovsky Institute, in a report in Medical World News, a doctors' news magazine, says the best cadaver blood is that extracted from subjects who have died of sudden heart standstill (cardiac arrest). Reason: This blood rarely clots and can be stored without adding anticlotting substances.

Shutterbug Tip

Whether you're shooting movies or still pictures, learn to be "background conscious." As you compose your subject in the camera viewfinder, be aware of distracting items to the rear, such as telephone wires, trees, buildings, or other features that can only detract from the over-all effect of the picture. An all too typical example found in many snapshots is a telephone pole seemingly growing out of a person's head. Learning to watch out for such eyesores and eliminating them by a change in camera angle or subject position will go a long way toward improving your pictures.

Who'd Succeed the President?

By Vera Williams
Southland Magazine Book Editor

WHAT happens when a President is incapacitated for a long period and unable to serve? Who succeeds him and under what circumstances?

These questions are paramount in the minds of many Americans as they realize that an aging speaker of the house and an aged president pro tem of the Senate are one and two heartbeats, respectively, from the White House.

The dark 17 months from the fall of 1919 until March 1921 when President Woodrow Wilson, a broken shell of a man, was so ill that the executive branch of the government had little or no leadership are recaptured in "WHEN THE CHEERING STOPPED" by Gene Smith (Morrow, $5.95.)

Dedicated to the cause of the League of Nations, Wilson set out on a national tour in late 1919 to "sell" the League to the American public in order to win U. S. Senate approval of it. He was stricken on the trip. Succeeding attacks of cerebral thrombosis left him half paralyzed.

His wife, his physician and his secretary sealed him off from the world. Mrs. Wilson was accused of "petticoat rule" but Smith thinks she did only what a devoted wife would do—she protected her husband from worries and cares.

What about the government?

One of the points Smith brings up is that the sick man obdurately refused to consider reservations which Sen. Henry Cabot Lodge insisted upon for League ratification.

If Wilson had been in even fair health, would he have yielded? If he had, would the Senate have ratified the League? If the Senate had, would the League have survived as a potent force for world peace? Would that have changed the history of the world?

They're good questions, in 1964.

PROBABLY because we'd all like to run away from something, a story about little runaways has a tender appeal. "WHERE DO GOLDFISH GO?" (Crown $3.95), by France's young novelist Claude Cattaert, has just such appeal. It's a story that takes one little girl, Valerie, and one little boy, Pitou, shakes them well, and produces a medicine good for whatever ails you.

Pitou is the concierge's son, a ragamuffin. Valerie, on the other hand, has an English governess (that used to be THE status mark for little French girls), a tutor of her own, and devoted parents. Valerie has a goldfish all her own, and watching the poor fish in its endless and futile circling of the bowl, Valerie wants to set it free. But non, little girls must not free little goldfish, and come to think of it, the number of things little girls mustn't do far outnumber the things allowed. So Valerie and Pitou run away; object number one is to free all the goldfish in Paris.

Their adventures, laughable and poignant at the same time, make a wonderful new book about childhood.

Twenty-seven leading scientists of the leading scientists of the Western World engaged in a symposium in London recently to consider the responsibility of medical and biological research to cope with the advent of nuclear power and other new potentialities for destruction.

Their papers, arguments, rebuttals and witticisms were edited by Gordon Wolstenholme, director of the Ciba Foundation, sponsor of the conference, and published as "MAN AND HIS FUTURE" (Little, Brown, $6).

Commentary by Sir Julian Huxley on evolutionary dangers and possible solutions launches the forum, appropriately enough. J. B. S. Haldane, the celebrated authority on genetics and biometrics, discusses the biological possibilities of the human species in the next 10,000 years, and anthropologist Carleton S. Coon explores growth and development of social groups.

Guarding the interests of religion and the world of letters is Rev. H. C. Trowell, pediatrics specialist in the Colonial Medical Services and ordained priest in the Anglican Church.

Here, indeed, is genius to lead humanity to a happier and healthier world.

PEPE ROMERO, Mexico City's most popular English-language newspaper columnist, has written a new novel, "A MILLION PESOS!" centering around Mexico's weekly National Lottery (Doubleday, $3.95).

A Monument to Community Effort

Activities of the Jewish community in Long Beach now center in this fine building, a three-quarter-million-dollar project. Organization's modest start is recalled.

By Caroline Coleman

IN 1948, some 700 Jewish families lived in Long Beach.

Needing the cohesion of a strong community effort, they formed the Jewish Community Federation, with Irving Schneider as president.

A Jewish Community Center was opened in an apartment at Third Street and Lime Avenue.

There now are 3,000 Jewish families in Long Beach, Lakewood, Rossmoor, Seal Beach and Signal Hill.

FOCAL POINT still is the Jewish Comfunity Center, but that no longer is an apartment on Lime Avenue. It is a fine, three-quarter million dollar building at 2601 Grand Ave. opened in 1960. Approximately 3,400 people belong to the Center, which has the unique policy that it is families, and not individuals who join, unless the individuals are single.

The Community Center offers an informal educational, cultural and athletic program geared to Jews of all ages. It has an Olympic-sized, 75 by 40 foot swimming pool and patio. There are seven meeting rooms for club sessions, classes, dances (round, square and what-have-you?), lectures, concerts, plays. There is a library, workout room, outdoor basketball courts, etc. There are programs for senior citizens, the middle-aged, the young marrieds, college folk, teens, tweens (between grade school and high school), and little folks.

IN THE SUMMMER, the Center offers a day camp with crafts and trips to the beach and parks. In the winter, youngsters are taken on snow trips to the mountains.

Couples, children, in-laws and parents are counseled by the Jewish Family Service, housed in the Community Center.

Also the Center houses the Jewish Community Federation, as well as the Federation News, a bi-weekly newspaper, of which Sidney Hartmann has been editor since 1947.

Morton J. Gaba is executive director and Judge Max Z. Wisot, president of the Jewish Community Federation.

EMANUEL GYLER is president of the Center, of which Gerald Bubis is executive director. Murray Greenwood is president of the Jewish Family Service, of which Bernard Miran is executive director.

Dr. Julius Robbins is chairman of the Federation Jewish Education Committee, which among other projects directs the Central Hebrew High School on Sunday mornings in the Community Center.

Gene Lentzner is chairman of the federation community relations committee, which has for its main project the development of sound intergroup relations and the protection of civil rights and liberties.

THE JEWISH Community Federation and its agencies and activities have many new and exciting projects on the drawing boards. The Jewish Community Center is considering plans for the development of country camping for children and adults and more intensive programming particularly in the cultural area. In addition plans are afoot for the development of a health club and auditorium that will provide additional recreational resources for the community.

The Jewish Family Service would like to expand its counseling program in the area of group counseling and develop placement services for children in need of foster care.

The Jewish Community Federation is establishing a Free Loan program to provide sums of money, interest free, for those who may need it for special purposes such as medical emergencies, schooling or small business opportunities.

Uncle Sam's 'Instant Navy'

Ammunition and foodstuff are also in ready reserve for fast action when emergency calls up the crews.

Photos by Skip Shuman

Forty warships and 12,000 men, including ready gun crews such as this, can be added to the U. S. Navy in almost instant fashion from ranks of the 4-hour stand-by reserve.

By Terri Sattori

A TELEPHONE rings in the early hours of morning and a sleepy civilian Jones, college student, is abruptly jolted into an alert Seaman Jones, crew member of an antisubmarine warfare detachment of the United States Navy Selected Reserve.

The conversation is short, one sided and to the point.

"Lt. Wallace here. The President has just declared a national emergency. You are ordered to report to your ship within the next four hours. You are to discuss this with no one. You may tell your wife or parents that you have been recalled to the ship nothing else. Is this clear?"

There is nothing else to say but—

"Yes sir!"

AND ANOTHER crew member of an antisubmarine warfare detachment of the United States Navy Selected Reserve is on the way.

Admittedly, this would be a shock for Tom Jones, Seaman, USNR. Seaman Jones is in Junior College. His wife works at a downtown department store, and his mother-in-law babysits Tom Jr. while Tom finishes his college education.

Indeed, this would be disturbing to all concerned. All the way from Tom Jones to Capt. Smith, a successful lawyer who was to have presented a case at 9 a.m. tomorrow.

This is the risk men of the Selected Ready Reserve units take when they enlist. Once they are inducted into the program, the latest devised by the Navy to provide increased forces and the capability of immediate response to initial hostilities from any enemy, they are placed on a four-hour standby.

THEY DRILL one weekend a month aboard a commissioned reserve ship on which they are full fledged crew members. Usually during one of these sessions, the ships put to sea and the men are required to handle equipment and exercise at general quarters. After three years in these units, they are obliged to spend two years in the regular Navy.

There are many questions that may be asked as to why a man would choose this particular way of discharging his military obligation and the answers would vary greatly.

But the question as to why the Navy initiated this program in the first place was answered as recently as the 1961 Berlin crisis which witnessed the activation of eight ships from the West Coast. Long Beach contributed three ships and 350 men to this endeavor. The destroyer USS Colahan, and two destroyer escorts the USS Vammen and USS Marsh, all permanently based in Long Beach, served an extended tour which lasted nine months in the trouble riddled southeast Asian area.

HOW EFFECTIVE are these ships manned by the so-called "Weekend Warriors," who constitute from 70 to 75 per cent of their crews? The answer to that lies in their performance records.

All three ships' performances equalled or in the case of the Vammen, excelled the regular units with which they associated.

The Vammen, presently commanded by Cmdr. Michael Cullen, USNR, who at that time served as the ship's executive officer, is the only ship in naval history to successfully rout and "sink" three submarines in three separate exercises, which were carried out during the 1961 recall. This amazing feat ultimately led to the ship's being awarded the coveted Samuel B. Roberts trophy, an award given in recognition to the outstanding Group II Destroyer Escort of the Pacific. The Vammen was also one of the first ships of the Navy to participate in vertical assault maneuvers which landed Marines via helicopter on the coast of Thailand. This was history's first vertical envelopment.

THE VAMMEN'S record is only one of the outstanding performances by reserve ships, but it offers substantive proof for the Navy's contention that it can have a standby complement that is ready and able to provide realistic and decisive support to the regular Navy in time of national emergency.

Today, if any of these ships were suddenly called to ac-

'Guardian of Nobles'

By Eleanor Avery Price

ONLY rarely do we see the wonderful large dog, the Kuvasz, and possibly we wouldn't recognize him if we did, for he bears a resemblance to the Great Pyrenes. Altogether there are about 175 of these in America, and most of them are in the East.

The color of the Kuvasz is pure white. As the dog grows senile, his coat may take on an ivory sheen. He is strong boned, well shaped, and well muscled. He stands from 25 inches to 29 inches at the shoulder when full grown.

During World War II, Germany and Hungary lost many fine kennels of this breed, yet fanciers have turned to these countries as well as Canada for good stock.

THERE are several stories as to the origin of the Kuvasz. Most likely his ancestors came from Tibet and from there went into Russia and on into Central Europe from the Russian Steppes, carried by the Huns. Noblemen of Hungary were the first to realize what fine qualities the dog had, and so they bred them seriously. They gave him his name which means "guardian of nobles." It is said that King Matthias I, 1458-1490, depended on Kuvaszok as guards as well as companions for hunting deer, bear, and wild boar. He is supposed to have owned thousands of these dogs and only parted with them to impress other nobles and dignitaries.

After the reign of King Matthias I, the dogs became widely distributed and found popular use as plains sheepdogs to defend livestock from wild animals.

In the home the Kuvasz loves children, can be trained for all kinds of work including guiding the blind.

LAST week we mentioned the fact that the German shepherd is continuing his great rise in popularity. Please, this does not mean that everyone who has a German shepherd should try to raise puppies. Remember what happened to this fine dog after Rin Tin Tin? There were so many haphazard breedings that the dog suffered, a great decline, bad tempered dogs appeared, and the problem of hip dysplasia was magnified ten-fold. Veterinarians say the dog they dread most to see is an unsound German shepherd. So, bad ones are still with us.

HARBOR LITE Dog Obedience Club will graduate a novice class at 7 p.m. Wednesday at Peck Park, San Pedro.

Climaxing a nine-week training period, the handlers will be awarded trophies. Graduation certificates will also be awarded to all handlers.

Judging the graduation will be Mrs. Lynne Farley of Torrance and Steve Molot of Los Angeles.

Harbor Lite Dog Obedience Club will be open for registration of two new novice classes April 4 at 2 p.m. and April 8 at 7 p.m. at Peck Park, 560 N. Western Ave., San Pedro. The public is invited.

Large and handsome, the Kuvasz is a rare animal in this area but rated as a fine, versatile dog.

Dogs need no pedigree to enter class. Small dogs should be at least four months old, and larger dogs should be at least three months old. It is common sense that it is easier to train a pup obedience when he is young than to let him acquire bad habits. It takes much longer to train an older dog than it does to train a young one.

'Instant Navy'

tive duty, they could be at sea within six hours after notification by the President. They stand, already armed to capacity. Foodstuffs already have been requisitioned and are stored on the Naval Base waiting for that "time." The only thing lacking is the men who carry with them at all times their mobilization orders, thereby cutting red tape to a minimum. These cards also give the men priority on all available transportation so they can get to their ships as fast as possible.

This is impressive when it is realized that nationally, the Navy's standing attack force could be bolstered by 40 warships and 12,000 men within a matter of hours.

THE MEN who serve in the program come from all walks of life. Many of the men are college or senior high school students who want to be assured of a three-year deferment in order to finish college or establish themselves in their civilian roles.

The remainder are men who have served in the regular Navy and re-enlist in the reserve program to acquire 20 years service time and its benefits. No matter what the reason for belonging, the importance is that these men are willing to sacrifice a certain amount of security to provide our nation's defenses with a relatively inexpensive combat ready naval establishment.

In the words of Winston Churchill, "These men are twice citizens."

Azaleas Can Be Problem Plants

For some gardeners, the azalea is a problem to grow; for others, not so. See article for some helpful ideas.

By Joe Littlefield

AZALEAS are among problem plants of the gardening world, often failing to respond to the best of the gardener's care. Here is some information that may turn failure into success for some whose enthusiasm for azaleas far exceeds their results in growing them.

Azaleas in the ground that are sickly looking should be checked to make certain the planting medium around the root ball is firm. If you can poke your fingers out of sight below the surrounding ground level, the material is too loose! Firm thoroughly, and add more planting material, then firm well to level of the surrounding garden soil. This firmness around root ball area, holds water longer so that roots get enough moisture, and also keeps fertilizer grains from leaching down below the root area.

THE MAJORITY of wholesale azalea growers agree that azaleas should be planted in peat moss, preferably in sphagnum type or a very fine kind. The peat moss should be pre-moistened. An easy way to know whether it is of right moisture content for planting is to squeeze a handfull. If few drops drip out, this is about right.

First step to set out a plant is to dunk the pot into a pail or tub of water, the water an inch or two above top of pot. Plant should be taken out when bubbling of water stops. Now you're sure the ball of roots is thoroughly soaked.

Hole for the plant should be two or three times wider and no more than two to four inches deeper than the root ball.

No drainage hole is necessary if the soil is well drained silt or sand. Heavy, hard packed soil needs drainage. Some gardeners have found that a three-inch bore two to three feet deep down from bottom of plant hole and filled with pea size gravel provides the necessary drainage.

The plant is taken out of the pot, the root ball is scored with the point of a nail or the sharp edge of a piece of broken pot to break the tight mass of roots that form a glazed condition. This helps roots get a faster start in the new medium. If the root ball is loose, then no scoring is necessary.

PLANTING azaleas in peat moss requires patient attention to the job at hand. Peat should be packed down repeatedly until it forms a mass as solid as that of the baled moss — in other words, but firm! Water and plant food will then be held for better absorption by the roots.

There are three kinds of azaleas, evergreens for sun, shade lovers and deciduous.

The sun loving kind grow in lots of sun, excepting in the desert, yet grow quite quite well in considerable shade. The shade loving kinds grow in shade, yet tolerate about three hours of sun daily, probably would grow in desert areas where it isn't too cold. Neither sun nor shade types stand cold mountain winters.

The deciduous type in colors of white, yellow, pink and orange, grow in cold areas, and grow well here.

Those bare-root trees and roses which you purchased and planted earlier will demand some attention now that foliage is starting to show.

Feeder roots have started and the plants will now accept light fertilization. If you have planted trees in a lawn area you will have to be careful not to over water as they are getting some moisture from normal lawn watering. However, as the trees grow, you will have to remember to water deeper as the roots go deeper. Many tools are available at garden shops to aid in deeper watering. There is a way however to help in depth watering and fertilizing in harder soils.

A product especially for this purpose is now available at your nursery that contains a 16-4-2 fertilizer value plus chelates and trace minerals combined with a penetrating agent. Regular applications of this material should overcome any hard soil problems around new plantings. Insects often destroy tender foliage on new trees before the tree gets a good start. A good early season spray is needed.

Tips on Gardening

Garden tips for the week . . . Loosen soil around geraniums, pelargoniums and fuchsias that should have been pruned back by now. Start watering and feeding as new growth shows.

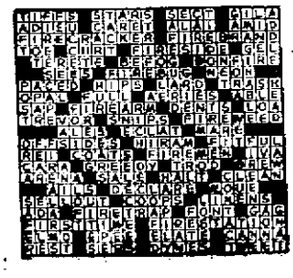

Feeding camellias is a post-bloom item. Liquid fish, an acid-type fertilizer, or one of the balanced commercial fertilizers and iron chelates are all used with success.

Why not try gardenias in a warm, protected spot? The big kind, whose blooms you see the florist selling, is Gardenia jasminoides and is fairly hardy. However, its smaller cousin, Gardenia jasminoides var. radicans, with smaller but equally fragrant flowers, will take more of a beating and come up laughing.

Check now with your C.A.N. nurseryman on crabgrass control. Don't wait. Get into action now before seeds germinate.

Do not delay planting your tuberous-rooted begonias. They're just too beautiful to forget—once you've planted them.

The Lure of Surfing

until it's too late."

Surfing magazines, too, are trying to teach the wild young men. "Don't show up at the airport (going to Hawaii) looking like a bum," advises one. The author said he got dressed up and the airline agent said, "You look so respectable I won't charge you for your excess baggage."

ANOTHER helpful hint in a surfing magazine: "Stuff your surfboard into a sleeping bag when going to Hawaii so you'll be sure to have some place to stay."

Another: "Macaroni and Kool-Aid are cheap in the islands, too," which might have been the most useful piece of information on all of the 108 pages.

As you can see, this is the sport's reconstruction period.

There are dozens of surfing beaches in Southern California which lure the golden girls and the browned boys the year around. Even now there are crowds of them on weekends. Hundreds of them flock to Huntington Beach in autos that protrude the six-foot-long slices of plastic they'll use to defy nature.

Next time take a closer look. Mostly, they're just ordinary kids from down the block. No, maybe a little bit braver than ordinary kids. Maybe a bit more cocky than the average kids, for you have to be.

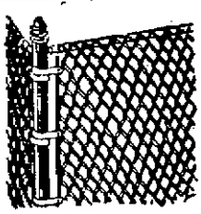

And they're not all kids, either. Respected businessmen surf. Movie actors surf. Professional athletes surf. People, just people, surf.

These are the reconstruction days. They're getting the scurf out of the surf.

early Scotch phrase "Forseath," a beautiful description meaning "at the woodland pool." The Forsyth coat-of-arms is a silver shield emblazoned with a red, scalloped-edge chevron placed between three blue, gold-crowned griffins. The clan motto "Instaurator ruinae" deciphers from Latin as "Rebirth out of ruins." Robert Forsythe was a south Pennsylvania land owner in 1781.

DEAR MISS RULE: Would you explain DENNING.—A.D., Long Beach.

A.D.: DENNING is traced to the old Saxon English syllables "Den-Ing" translated as "home or place of the Danish family." This refers to ancestors living at a Danish settlement on England's east coast.

Denning also had an Irish source, the Gaelic clan name O'Duinnin meaning "sons of the young, brown-haired one."

Irish Dennings were from southwest Cork and were hereditary historians for the MacCarthys.

Herbs Are the Hardy Ones

THERE ARE distinct advantages to growing herbs. First and foremost, very few of them demand good soil. In fact most thrive in average to poor soil. This is an advantage to the gardener who does not wish to replace his soil.

Next, a wide variety of herbs may be grown in a small area. This will delight many a gardener with a small yard who is looking for something living to create an interesting picture.

And, not only will a hot, sunny place be the perfect spot for a good many herbs, but just think of all the delightful seasonings you will have for your food if you grow herbs.

If you fear that some herbs may become invasive, one good way to confine these is to set each plant in a hollow building tile sunk in the soil.

MILES ARNOLD

An Easter Egg Tree

WITH SPRING bursting into life on trees and flower beds all around us, Easter Sunday is a perfect day for a jaunt into the Southern California countryside.

And if you should grow hungry while jaunting, Arnold's Farm House in Buena Park will be a marvelous place to stop for Easter dinner. Located at 6601 Manchester Blvd., adjacent to the Santa Ana Freeway, the Farm House is an extremely large serve-yourself restaurant with an atmosphere that recaptures much of the spirit of country dining. Owner Miles Arnold and his staff have added numerous decorative touches for Easter, including a manzanita "tree" hung with sequined eggs. Stuffed toy animals are displayed throughout the dining room.

The special Easter menu at Arnold's, which will be served from 11:30 a.m. to 8:30 p.m., will include many fresh entrees famed for their rich flavors and aromas. Topping the list will be splendid Easter ham with pineapple sauce, served for $1.95 on the dinner which includes three salads selected from 20 varieties on display; choice of two vegetables, hot rolls and butter and beverage. Other entrees on the dinner will include roast leg of spring lamb with mint jelly, $2.15; eastern round of beef, $2.15; baked breast of chicken Hawaiian with pineapple, shaved almonds and coconut, $2.25; roast prime rib of beef au jus, $2.75; Farm House fried chicken, $2.25, and potted Swiss steak, $2.10.

Skilled, courteous waittresses help the guests with their trays, escort them to their booths, serve the rolls and a la carte desserts and keep their cups filled with delicious coffee.

Easter Rabbit Goes to Sea

CY, A MARINELAND SEA LION, KISSES "BUNNY" DONNA DOUGLAS OF "HILLBILLIES" IN A WHALE OF AN EXHIBITION

By BERT RESNIK
TV and Radio Editor

THERE'S GOING to be a whale of a special on TV this Easter Sunday. It originates, of course, from Marineland.

"The Beverly Hillbillies" will be featured in the hour production airing 7 p.m. on channel 2.

Co-starred will be the bottlenose dolphins, whales and sea lions of Marineland who have been on camera so frequently they wonder why they haven't been contacted by the Screen Actors Guild.

In a two-year period, for example, Marineland was the center of attraction for 67 different television programs, according to William F. Monahan, vice president and general manager.

About 25 members of Cub Scout Pack 216, San Pedro, led by Cubmaster Nick Maricich, will be seen in the audience with "The Beverly Hillbillies" during "Marineland Carnival" at 7 p.m. today, channel 2.

There was almost more TV production there than in Hollywood.

Marineland's sea life, bunch of hams, have learned to play it cool. There's almost something fishy about the way they check the TV monitors while splashing through their paces.

ADVERTISING MANAGER OFFERS

New View on Movie Commercials

By BERT RESNIK

In the screening room of the television station, the advertising manager of the manufacturing firm sat and squirmed.

The movie, "Goodbye Mr. Chips," was excellent and that was the principal reason his company had purchased it for television airing.

His job right now—it was November of 1962—was to check and see that the commercials were inserted correctly before the movie went on the air in a few weeks.

As Devid Seigel, vice president in charge of advertising for Riviera Manufacturing Co., sat and squirmed, he felt something akin to treason.

For what instigated the squirming, what irritated him, was the commercials—his commercials.

Not that the content was bad—there were just too many of them.

HE TRIED CONCENTRATING again on the movie and found himself engrossed in the drama.

Greer Garson was dying in an acting masterpiece that almost brought tears to Seigel's eyes.

Then, suddenly, like the sound of a fire alarm, another commercial was clanged onto the screen.

Greer Garson couldn't die in peace.

"Stop the camera," shouted Seigel, or words to that effect.

The lights came on in the screening room and the television station crew stared at him.

"What do you say we show the public this movie without interruptions by commercials?" asked Seigel.

They looked at him as if he were crazy. But, after all, it was his company's movie and if he wanted to throw away their money, that was his business.

And the company's business.

SEIGEL TOOK HIS IDEA to the company's other executives.

Like the television station crew, they looked at him as if he had lost his mental marbles.

"To put it mildly," said Seigel, "there was great apprehension."

They told him what he had heard many times before—the more commercials, the more business. It all worked on percentage.

Seigel didn't agree.

"The fewer commercials, the more business and the better the image," said he.

And he said it again and again and again.

The other executives finally agreed to try it "one time."

When "Goodbye Mr. Chips" went on the air, it was preceded by about a 3-minute commercial and followed by one the same length.

There was an occasional crawler, like a silent news bulletin, that quietly passed across the bottom part of the screen. It read: "Presented by Riviera Convertible Sofas."

IT WAS A 2-HOUR, 40-MINUTE MOVIE. In a movie of that length, there normally are about 35 minutes of commercials. Riviera, at Seigel's insistence, had settled for six advertising minutes.

Within 10 days the company received 3,000 letters and postcards. In essence, each piece of mail said the same thing:

"It's a pleasure to go into your living room and see a movie instead of commercials flanked by chopped bits of movies."

The "one time" try became company policy. The firm, for example, is sponsoring four movies uninterrupted by commercials today.

It still purchases spot announcements in other TV productions, but most of the company's video budget is allocated for buying outright movies to air without interfering advertisements.

There's one other thing. Under the new policy, Riviera's business has been booming.

Critic Claims Video Doesn't Learn from Own Lesson of 'Their Greatest Achievement'

By RICK DU BROW
United Press International

HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—After the significant television coverage of President Kennedy's assassination, several discerning writers took note of a devastating fact:

That, for the networks to achieve their peak performance, they had to abandon (except for news) virtually every aspect of broadcasting identified with their day-to-day product, not only in the obvious content demand, but in tone, attitude and respect for human intelligence.

As the four historic days lengthen into months the networks indicate that this lesson of their greatest achievement will continue to have little or no effect on them.

It is doubtful that a more ironic or forceful indictment could be prepared for those who do not swallow, wide-eyed, testimony of the medium's growth.

NEXT season's entertainment schedule will continue to be more of the same. And though this is to be expected, there is also no indication that there will be any significant increase in prime-time, regularly-scheduled public affairs programming.

The new human dimension the Kennedy coverage gave television will not have any experimental or special impact.

The public affairs people are the best in television; yet, with all their excellent work, even they give the impression too often that they merely let events determine their major coverage rather than using their wonderful, incomparable tool — television — to go out and create works of immediacy and humanity that become major events in themselves.

* * * *

AN EXAMPLE of this type of cerativity was last year's three-hour prime-time NBC-TV study of the desegregation situation, which, though bulky in spots and perhaps overlong, was an immense idea in the right direction.

Likewise, there was CBS-TV's live, transoceanic "Town Meeting of the World" via satellite.

The important thing is that the supreme function of television is to acquaint members of the human race with each other.

THE KEYMER TWINS are an entrant—that's right, one entry—in the Miss Los Angeles County Pageant to be televised 8:30 p. m. Tuesday, channel 13. Checking their rule book, judges found it was permissible for 17-year-old Melody and Marilyn of San Gabriel to compete as one contestant. Sound like double-talk?

SPECIAL

IMPRESSIONS: Vincent Price hosts a color tour of "Masterworks of Mexican Art," more than 2,000 artifacts recently at the L.A County Museum, at 4:30 p.m., ch. 9. Films will be presented to President Mateos of Mexico.

MARINELAND CARNIVAL—"Hillbillies" stars Irene Ryan, Donna Douglas and Max Baer join the Smothers Brothers, Cliff Norton, underwater swimmer Zale Parry, the Les Brown Orchestra and assorted "sea critters" in an hour-long watery spectacular at 7 p.m., ch. 2. Taped on location at Marineland, show even adds the voice of Herb Vigran so that walruses Wally and Willy can chat with Miss Ryan. Both Baer and Miss Douglas turned down doubles for their water scenes.

1964—America's power, potential and problems, with emphasis on the challenges of nuclear arms, education, old age, automation and leisure, are examined at 7:30 p.m., in color, ch. 7, during the fourth and final documentary in John H. Secondari's award-winning "Sage of the Western Man" series. Cameras capture Americans at play at Miami Beach and L.A., at work in Detroit, launching space vehicles at Cape Kennedy, gambling in Las Vegas and mourning in Dallas.

AMERICAN COMMUNISM—Richard Basehart narrates David L. Wolper's documentary of the nature of our Communist enemy at 8:30 p.m., ch. 11. Sen. Joe McCarthy, Alger Hiss, the Rosenbergs, Gus Hall and Earl Browder are recalled as we view the history of the Communist Party in the U.S., its infiltration techniques and the ambiguous tactics of its protagonists.

BREAKTHROUGH: Medicine—Shape of the Future—John Chancellor is reporter for a graphic look at the medicine and surgery of tomorrow at 10 p.m., ch. 4. The Lou Hazam-produced hour watches a kidney transplant, curing ulcers by freezing, the use of glue in skin grafts, an implant of a plastic cornea and the use of electronic devices.

A special filmed message from Pope Paul VI winds up the hour.

'Hazel' Leads Dog's Life in Don's Home

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—Don DeFore, the harried householder of television's "Hazel" series, has a bigger home, a larger family and more pets than he does in the show. But he doesn't have a maid to compare with Hazel.

In fact, Don and his family have no "live-in" help at all.

The only Hazel in the DeFore menage is a tiny Australian Silkie terrier by that name.

Off-screen and on, DeFore is the prototype of the American family man. He resembles the ad man's conception of the businessman debarking from a commuter train, attache case in hand, to greet his wife in the station wagon.

But that isn't the way it works in real life.

* * * *

DON DRIVES the 10 miles from the studio to his Mandeville Canyon home in a new automobile, courtesy of his sponsor (Ford).

True, there's a station wagon in the driveway, but it was purchased by the actor. And the house is such that George Baxter — DeFore's television character—couldn't begin to afford it.

A mansion by any standards, the home includes five bedrooms and five baths. DeFore had it built 18 years ago in what he calls a combination New England-Iowa farm house style. It's red with white trim and a shale roof. It nestles cozily on two acres of prime suburbia with a free-form swimming pool and a little red barn with attached silo which doubles as guest house and pool house.

The motif is carried throughout the interior with early American decor and a scattering of antiques.

* * * *

MUCH OF the furniture was turned out by Papa DeFore in his workshop. Woodworking was his hobby until three weeks after the "Hazel" show made its debut. A power saw almost lopped off one of his fingers so Don has spent less time playing cabinetmaker.

Don is particularly proud of his den. Everything in it relates to railroad lore. His father was a railroad engineer.

The coffee table is made up of old railroad ties fastened to a length of track. It took the actor a year to bleach the ties and bolt them together.

* * * *

THE DeFore clan is a large one. The children are Penny, 19; David, 18; Dawn, 15; Ronald, 13; and Amy, 4. Penny lives at a sorority house at the University of Southern California, but the others swarm all over the place.

DON DEFORE . . . Leads Happy Life

BERT'S EYE VIEW

about them. They ignore them.

If you start the dolphins in their act, stand back, brother, until they're finished.

You're not going to interrupt them with commercials and have them resume their act from where they left off. They won't buy that.

One program that did its shooting at Marineland for four years was "Sea Hunt."

And thereby hangs a pail.

Now it seems, during these early days, that Bubbles the Whale was housed in the fish oval tank along with other briney specimens before her own special tank was constructed.

A diver periodically came down with an aluminum bucket containing food for the fish.

Bubbles compatibly followed him around and occasionally touched the diver with her snout.

This was her signal that she wanted to share the food. The diver obligingly fed her.

* * * *

DURING an early "Sea Hunt" production, a veteran underwater photographer submerged in the fish oval tank.

Bubbles started nudging him. He tried to ignore her. Nudge. Ignore. Nudge. Nudge.

In a few moments time, the photographer was being bounced off the wall like a handball. Afraid he'd be the basic element in wall-to-whale carpeting—nothing finny about that—he came up for air.

The explanation for Bubble's unusual behavior was simple.

The photographer's underwater camera was encased in aluminum. It resembled a bucket, the very same bucket that Bubbles was accustomed to being fed from. She was a little unhappy when he didn't feed her after she nudged him.

The photographer understood the simple explanation. However, he simply refused to go down again, even with the aluminum case concealed.

* * * *

THERE' NO CONCEALING Marineland's daily schedule from its paying customers so that television can have priority.

"We welcome TV," said Monahan, "but our shows go on schedule for our customers first even if there is only one person in the audience."

One rainy day there were only three persons, boys huddled under one umbrella, in the 3,000-seat Sea Arena auditorium. Following the rule — but reluctantly — the show went on as usual.

When the time came for the next show, it was still raining. Again there were three persons in the audience—the same three boys.

Like television, they came back for a repeat performance.

VIET NAM: The Deadly Decision — A probing, in-depth report on the military and political aspects of the war in Vietnam is anchored by Charles Collingwood at 7:30 p.m., ch. 2, with Far Eastern correspondent Peter Kalischer reporting on the military aspects of the crisis while Southeast Asia correspondent Bernard Kalb dwells on the political ones. A 13-man CBS task force, including four camera teams, flew to Saigon three weeks ago, and, in Paris, Collingwood examined the French role in the Vietnam crisis and interviewed the widowed Mme. Ngo Dinh Nhu. How America got involved there in the first place, and what we are planning to do in the weeks ahead, will be detailed in a round-table wind-up, and in interviews with Amb. Henry Cabot Lodge and Vietnam's leader Gen. Nguyen Khanh.

DICK VAN DYKE—Brainstorming for a new program idea, Rob decides to do something never before done on television—radio. For the cast, he assembles a trio of old-time radio stars to recreate their memorable roles. During the 9:30 p.m., ch. 2 show, we see Arlene Harris (The Chatterbox) and Bert Gordon (The Mad Russian) playing themselves, with Edwin Carp (The Fish Man) portrayed by actor Richard Haydn, author of "Diary of Edwin Carp."

FOR HIS ROLE as "Davy Crockett," Fess Parker wore buckskins and seldom got close to a razor. As a congressman in "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington," he was closely shaven and trimly attired in modern-day three-button suits. In fall, Fess goes back to buckskins and away from razors for his role in a new series, "Daniel Boone."

BACK TO BUCKSKINS

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—Fess Parker, who flashed to overnight stardom in a three-part "Davy Crockett" video show almost 10 years ago, will revive the character on television by changing his name to Daniel Boone.

Sound haywire? That's the way television works.

Parker and 20th Century-Fox planned to introduce a new hour-long series in the fall titled "Davy Crockett." But legal hassles and possible complications with Walt Disney (who produced the original show) forced a change of plans.

So 20th and Parker decided to keep the buckskins and 'coonskin hat but change the character to another frontiersman hero, Dan'l Boone, who happened to be a contemporary of Crockett's.

The Alamo, Jim Bowie and Sam Houston, of course, will be missing from the new series unless the producers decide to louse up history.

ACTOR PARKER is an admirable man, tall (6 feet 5), good-natured and placid. A Texan, he'd have made a formidable frontiersman himself.

Like a good many out-sized actors, Fess is more at home in western costume than in modern street clothes. Like John Wayne, the late Gary Cooper and Charlton Heston, he looks as if someone had thrown a lariat around him to get him in a dress shirt and necktie.

"I suppose it's true that big men feel uncomfortable in street clothes," he said. "But you put any male in clothes that don't suit him and he'll feel a little bit uneasy."

Such was the case a year ago when Big Fess played a modern congressman in "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington," a flop television series.

Parker explains the disaster by saying:

"I'm still living in the shadow of Davy Crockett. Now that we've changed the character to Boone I'm concerned that it may cause some confusion to viewers.

"You'd be surprised how many adults don't know the difference between the two men."

MORE COMPLICATED than his appearance would suggest, Parker is going ahead with the new series as a basis for regaining his popularity and establishing himself as a motion picture star. It's a beginning.

"I haven't worked very hard at this business," he said during lunch in the studio commissary. "I invested in real estate and went sailing instead of concentrating on an acting career. It was a mistake. I came up so fast I wasn't prepared for the success.

"After this series I'd like to play some comedy for a change. I'm an essentially comic character anyway.

"The studio agreed to put me in a picture if I accepted the series. I'm really excited about that. Right now I'm waiting to hear what movie they'll get for me."

If Parker can rekindle the old fire that made a national rage of Davy Crockett (and himself) a decade ago, he shouldn't have any trouble picking his shots in movies.

'Twilight Zone' Fading Out

HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—Writer Rod Serling has been notified that his "Twilight Zone" series is going off television.

Next week, he jumps out of an airplane.

"There is no connection," says Serling.

The 39-year-old Serling was a World War II paratrooper. His decision to jump is based on a belief in that form of combat.

Rod is a mature man when it comes to facing a crisis in this television business. "Twilight Zone" got "booted off" once before, so he's used to it.

"The other time we were tossed off with the knowledge that we might come back in hour form," he said. "This time we have no assurances that we'll ever come back,

There was a slim chance that "Twilight Zone" might have moved over to ABC-TV next season. However, that hope was dashed in negotiations between Serling and ABC's brass.

SPECIAL

CHRYSLER THEATRE — Veteran producer-writer-director John Houseman offers his first production for this series with Anthony Franciosa starring at 8:30 p.m., ch. 4, in color, as a young man with a bitter resentment against society. Blaming his former wife for the failure of their marriage, he alienates his father, his girl friend, his work foreman and his son with his bitterness—so decides to turn to something new, robbing a filling station safe, which he's cautioned to do unarmed. Pat O'Brien, Bethel Leslie (of the Boone repertory group), Lisabeth Hush and Russell Collins are featured. (Hour is preempted next week for a Tennessee Ernie Ford variety-comedy special, with Jack Benny, Andy Williams, Annette Funicello and Dorothy Provine.)

7 The Hollywood Palace. Series gets its first guest host-hostess team as Tony Martin and Cyd Charisse welcome Corbett Monica, Bert Gordon, Gaylord and Holliday, the Berosini Chimps, the Three Bozzaros Brothers (clowns) and The Amandis (teeterboard act).

10:00 P.M.

2 Gunsmoke, James Arness, Jay C. Flippen. Lonely widower farmer accepts the job of hangman in order to buy seed for a crop and regain the custody of his only child.

SINGER Martha Tilton is featured during "Musical Years—Benny Goodman" at 7 p. m. Saturday, channel 7.

SPECIAL

THE MUSICAL YEARS — KMPC personality Dick Whittinghill, a former Pied Piper singer, hosts the second in a series of musical specials recalling the great bands of the 30's and 40's. Benny Goodman, the king of swing, will be recalled at 7 p.m., ch. 7, by liltin' Martha Tilton, former Goodman sidemen Eddie Rosa on clarinet and Babe Russin on tenor-sax, plus Bobby Hammack and the orchestra, Ziggy Ellman, Jess Stacey, Gus Bivona and Lionel Hampton will recall anecdotes of their experiences with Goodman.

Pan and Fan Mail

Seeing the clairvoyant (her lovely eyes) on the Perry Mason show March 12 "bugged" me until I decided she reminded me of a Long Beach product.

In Wilson Hi School (1937) Priscilla Moran played the colead in "Death Takes a Holiday"—later was hired by Paramount.

Do you know if Lori March (the clairvoyant) is Priscalla Moran?

Mrs. S. Dahl, Long Beach

Miss March, who lives in New York, is represented in Southern California by the Kumin-Olenick Agency in Beverly Hills. They're "bugged" too. Can't find a biography on Miss March. There's hope, though, if they ever finish their spring cleaning. In the meantime, will the real Priscilla Moran please step forward to answer Mrs. Dahl's question?

* * * *

There's a lovely, haunting theme song for the "Hollywood and the Stars" series. I believe it's from some old movie. Could you please find out the name of the song?

Mrs. Louise Kratky, Long Beach

The name of the song — it's new, not old—is "Hollywood and the Stars." It was composed by Elmer Bernstein especially for the program. It has not been recorded for general distribution.

* * * *

What frequency is radio station KCJA, your Long Beach city government station?

Paul Moser, Los Angeles

Paul, I hate to disillusion you, but we don't have a KCJA any more. We haven't had a KCJA since November 1949.

I know it's still listed in our phone book under the water department in the "Long Beach City of" classification. But look, Paul, you can't believe everything you read.

Anyway, we do have a KDO-236 which is on the 155-megacycle band and is used by the water department for emergency communications with the fire department.

If for some reason you want to reach KDO-236, try calling the phone number listed for KCJA. But you'll have to wait for an emergency before there's anybody there to answer.

Q. Is it true that Ted Sorensen is being subsidized by the Kennedy family to write his biography of the late President to counteract the Lasky book? Also is it true that the Washington Evening Star has been purchased by the Kennedy family?—Mrs. J. W. H., Washington, D.C.

A. Sorensen is under contract to the publishing house of Harper & Row, is receiving no subsidy from the Kennedy family. None of the Kennedys plans to purchase the Washington Evening Star. The late President once thought of buying a newspaper after he finished his Presidency, but he never mentioned the Star.

Q. Lynda Bird Johnson, the President's daughter—does she plan to marry a Roman Catholic? — Ben Schmidt, Wheeling, W. Va.

A. Her fiancé is of that faith.

Q. How many Russian tourists visit the U.S. each year? And how many American tourists visit Soviet Russia?—I. English, Hanover, N.H.

A. Approximately 100 Russian tourists visit the U.S. Approximately 15,000 American tourists visit Soviet Russia.

Q. Has the Garry Moore variety TV show been canceled? If so, why?—Frances Ford, Binghamton, N.Y.

A. It has been canceled. Reason: poor ratings. But there's a possibility it will be reinstated, TV program schedules being what they are.

Q. Does Jack Paar ever appear without his hairpiece? It's the most unusual triangular hairpiece I've ever seen. How much does it cost?—D. T., Denver, Colo.

A. Paar always wears his hairpiece in public. Cost estimate: $500.

Q. Is it true that 20th Century-Fox plans to pay Elizabeth Taylor no more than $2,500,000 for her stint in Cleopatra, no matter what?—Dave Stabile, Los Angeles, Calif.

A. That's the story.

Q. Will Dinah Shore return to TV next season?—Hilda Lewis, Newark, N.J.

A. In all probability.

Q. How old are the Duke and Duchess of Windsor? Have they had plastic surgery?—Dane Vinson, Atlanta, Ga.

A. The Duke is 69, the Duchess 67. She recently underwent minor facial surgery in a London clinic.

Q. Who is the Princess Royal in Great Britain?—Fred Wickersham, New York, N.Y.

A. The Princess Royal, 67, is the only daughter of King George V. Shy and sensitive, she lives quietly in a flat in St. James Palace, has a home in Yorkshire. Recently she took on some additional public duties of the Royal Family because the Queen Mother was ill, and the Queen, Princess Margaret and Princess Alexandra were all expecting.

Q. Whatever happened to the negotiations between the Vatican and the Hungarian Communist authorities for the release of Josef Cardinal Mindszenty? — K. Lyles, Washington, N.C.

A. Mindszenty, 71, may have been released by the time this sentence appears in print. In any event his release is imminent.

Q. I understand from women who have danced with him that President Johnson is a crack ballroom dancer. Is he better than Kennedy was? — Janice Drew, Washington, D.C.

A. President Johnson is an excellent ballroom dancer. President Kennedy's back gave him so much trouble he usually avoided dancing. Johnson is undoubtedly the best dancer to occupy the White House in decades. Eisenhower never danced in the White House. Truman didn't know how to dance. The late President Roosevelt was a victim of infantile paralysis.

Q. What ever happened to former screen star Jean Arthur?—George Newell, Arlington, Va.

A. Miss Arthur, 55, lives in northern California, does no screen work.

Q. Has Rosemary Clooney ever been reconciled with her former husband, Jose Ferrer?—M. L. C., Quincy, Mass.

A. Yes, for more than a year now.

Q. Who is the girl who used to dance with Fred Astaire on his TV specials?—L. Weeks, Ft. Worth, Tex.

A. Barrie Chase.

Q. Is it on the level that Eva Gabor is 15 years older than her mother-in-law?—Bertha Gersch, Miami, Fla.

A. Eva Gabor, 39, is married to Dick Brown. Brown's father, Saul, a textile manufacturer, recently married Joyce Rowley, 25, a London model.

Q. Do the Beatles have to pay income tax on the money they've earned in this country?—Amos Bartley, Seattle, Wash.

A. No. The U.S. tax treaty with Great Britain says that an employee of a British company working in the U.S. for less than 183 days a year will not be taxed in this country. Income tax rates in Great Britain, however, are much higher than in the U.S. The Beatles work for a company they own called Nems.

Q. In front of Grauman's Chinese Theatre in Hollywood, where the stars put their footprints in concrete—do they have the footprints of any child stars?—Constance Keel, Ojai, Calif.

A. Yes. Shirley Temple's and Hayley Mills' (l.).

Q. I understand that more crimes are committed in nice weather than poor weather. Is this true?—Ted Lowrie, Jacksonville, Fla.

A. True.

Q. Who said: "A husband is what is left of the lover after the nerve has been extracted"?—Evans Wylie, Abilene, Tex.

A. American humorist and writer Helen Rowland.

young Americans carry out the spirit of

CHRISTIAN PEACE

Young Samaritan, Stanford medical student Andrew Nichols, examines ailing child in church hospital in Rio Verde, Brazil. Financed by drug firm of Smith, Kline and French, Nichols spent nine weeks at hospital.

This Easter, as millions of Christians worship the world over, a red-haired, freckled girl named Ann Davison will attend Mass in Arequipa, Peru; then spend her holiday in a makeshift dispensary, examining the sick children of Indian peasants.

In a jungle clearing in New Guinea, an electrician, a carpenter and a construction superintendent from the Midwest will attend Lutheran services, then inspect the concrete-block building recently constructed by them to serve as that area's first school.

In Dar es Salaam, Tanganyika, a young Quaker couple will mark the holiday in that African capital's YMCA. Working with teenage Africans new to city life, they will discuss health, hygiene, sanitation and how to start community groups.

In other nations of Latin America, Africa, Asia and the Middle East, hundreds of other young U.S. Christians will be similarly marking Easter. They are not members of the Peace Corps, nor are they missionaries. Instead they are carrying out a message far older than that of the government agency. In the spirit of Christ and of the Good Samaritan, they are giving up a piece of their lives to serve their fellow men.

While the Peace Corps has been growing rapidly and drawing acclaim, a similar, religiously oriented "Peace Corps" has been growing quietly alongside it. In a number of Protestant denominations and in the Roman Catholic Church, organizations have been founded to send Christian men and women for short-term service in foreign lands. So far, the number of these "lay missionaries" represents a mere handful. Yet those who wish to join—mostly men and women in their 20s and 30s, but also married couples and retired people—are so numerous that directors of the programs haven't the resources to accept all comers.

Of course, there is nothing really new about churches sending people overseas. Missionaries have been spreading the gospel of Christianity ever since St. Paul. But previous missionaries made it a life's calling and were concerned primarily with saving souls. The current crop have other careers and agree only to interrupt them to give a few years to their faith. And, without theological training, they neither preach nor proselytize. Instead they concentrate on living with people, working with them and helping them to help themselves.

■ they want involvement ■

"It's the same spirit as the Peace Corps," says the Rev. Victor Fernandez, S.J., director of the Papal Volunteers for Latin America, the Catholic lay missionary group, "only more so. People today seem to want to involve themselves with the lives of other people. In our case, the people want to relate this involvement to the higher meaning of God."

Of all the groups sending laymen overseas for short-term service, the Papal Volunteers are the largest and most successful. Concentrating wholly on Latin America, they now number 282 Volunteers in 13 countries—including some working in the very shadow of the Christ the Redeemer statue in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, shown on today's cover. Among them are 96 teachers, 41 medical technicians, 27 community development experts, 20 social workers and 10 volunteers assigned to credit unions and cooperatives. Fifty are helping to train catechists to carry on grass-roots religious education programs.

The volunteers include one nurse who staffs a clinic deep in the Amazon jungle of Brazil; a number of young men who are radio technicians and whose job is to maintain the transmitters by which missioners conduct "radio schools" for Indians in the high Andes; a public-relations man who is helping to set up Latin

America's first Catholic Information Center. A Tulsa, Okla., couple with five children, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Farnsworth, are assigned to a village in Guatemala, where Farnsworth is helping establish a peasants' co-operative. In the same community, Dr. Joseph Trimble, 60, a Tulsa dentist, operates a public health clinic.

Actually, the Papal Volunteers predate the Peace Corps. It came about, as did so many recent Catholic innovations, at the instigation of Pope John XXIII. The first move on the part of North American bishops was to set up a Bishops' Committee for Latin America, with Richard Cardinal Cushing as chairman and the Rev. John J. Considine as director. The second was to set up the Volunteers—in September 1960.

■ 2 months' preparation ■

Today, the Volunteers are recruited through diocesan directors. They sign up for two-year terms, are given assignments as their skills are required. Local dioceses pay their expenses and transportation, Latin dioceses to which they are assigned furnish room and board. They draw about $30 to $60 a month. They get about two months' instruction in language and local customs at one of four intercultural centers in Puerto Rico, Mexico or Brazil. They also get a little religious instruction—"but for their own benefit, to give meaning to what they are doing," says Father Fernandez.

If the Papal Volunteers concentrate on Latin nations, however, Protestants are big in other areas. The Walther League of the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod has sent volunteers to New Guinea, Nigeria and Haiti. The small Church of the Brethren, a pacifist church, has assigned persons all over the world. The American Friends Service Committee, continuing a long Quaker tradition of service, has 50 volunteers, age 21 to 30, in India, Tanganyika, West Germany and Guatemala, under a new two-year program called VISA—Voluntary International Service Assignments.

The Mormons, of course, are famous for their youth-missionary program, which was a model for the Peace Corps. Under it, all young Mormons give two years to church work after completing their education. Some spend this period in the U.S., others overseas. However, the Mormon program also includes proselytizing, since every Mormon is an ordained minister. The Seventh-day Adventists, who also have a large overseas missionary program, now are considering a short-term one for laymen, according to Francis Millard, Adventist associate general secretary.

Many groups also sponsor summer work projects overseas for college and high school students. Largest of these is administered by Ecumenical Voluntary Service, an arm of the National Council of Churches, which runs overseas projects in 34 lands. Most of them are strict manual labor. A typical example is a project completed in Korea last year, in which 12 college students dug a well and constructed a community center for a peasant village. Unlike the other projects, students who go to these work camps pay for the privilege and must furnish their transportation besides.

Like the Peace Corps, these young Christians of all denominations have been welcomed and praised for their service and dedication by the leaders of other lands. But it may be that the people they work for are not the greatest beneficiaries of the Christian answer to the Peace Corps. Archbishop Romolo Carboni, apostolic delegate to Peru, may have summed it up best in speaking about the Papal Volunteers in that country. "This program has been a great help not only to the people of the countries where the missioners are working," the archbishop said. "It has been a help to the very lay missioners themselves, who are working out their salvation in a spirit of generous dedication."

Preparing for service, Papal Volunteers study Spanish, Indian dialects in class in Arequipa, Peru.

Teaching, Quaker youth gives basic literacy lessons to Tanganyikan boy (l.), while Papal Volunteer does same for Peruvian. Biggest task of Christian volunteers is teaching; some spend spare time at it.

Building, young American works alongside Japanese in construction project in Tohuku, Japan.

do you know what to do WHEN SOMEBODY'S SICK?

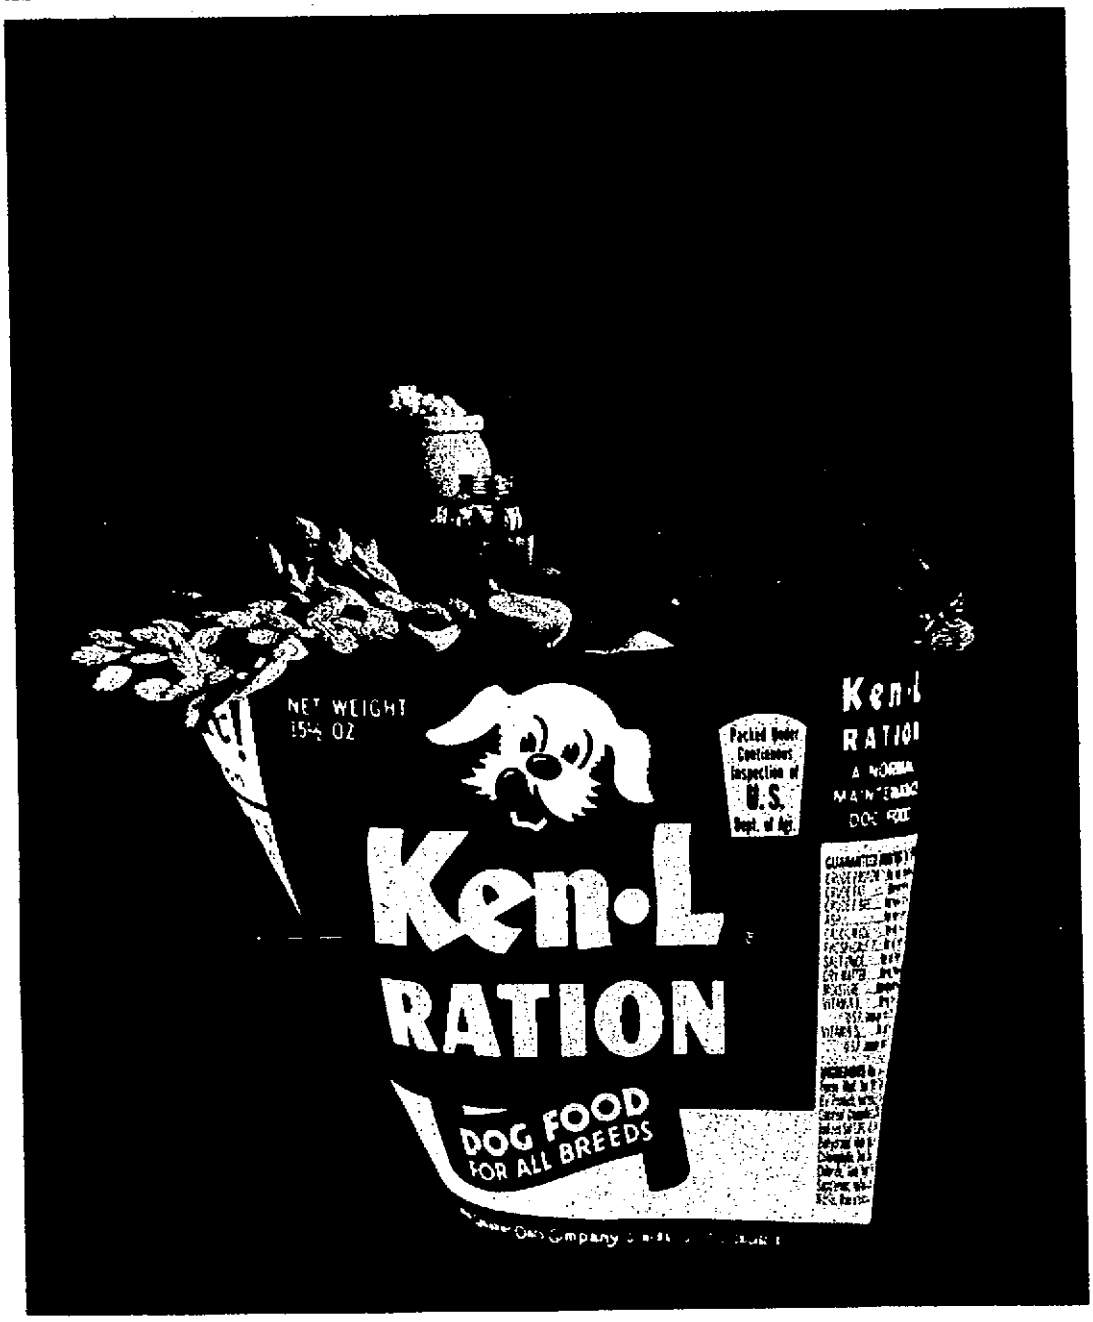

It's spring again, and those annoying days of colds that hang on and on have returned. It's time for every family to brush up on the fundamentals of home nursing care.

Do you know what to do if influenza or any one of a whole group of illnesses strikes in your home? The following quiz is based on standard nursing techniques. Write TRUE or FALSE after each statement. Then score yourself according to the answers below. A score of 8-10 means you know your way around a sickroom. If you rate 7 or below, you'd better brush up on home nursing care.

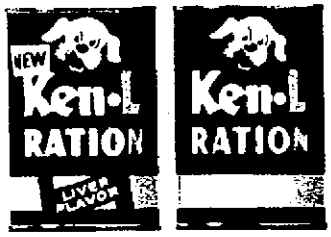

1. Always take a sick person's pulse with your thumb against the inside of his wrist. _____
2. A sickroom should be as warm as possible; temperatures should be 76°-80°. _____
3. Normal body temperature is 98.6°. Any variation is a sure sign of illness. _____
4. If a member of the family has a severe pain in the abdomen, apply a hot water bag or heating pad, then call a doctor. _____
5. During hot weather it's all right to use an electric fan in the sickroom, provided it isn't turned directly on the patient. _____
6. You can judge the severity of the illness by the amount of fever. _____
7. If a doctor says "Use dry heat," he means something like a hot water bag. _____
8. If a foreign body is lodged in someone's nose, tell him to hold one nostril shut and blow hard to get rid of it. _____
9. Respiration, or breathing rate, is a good indicator of illness. If you note that an adult, while at rest, breathes more than 30 times a minute, it may be a sign of illness. _____
10. That old saw, "Starve a fever," is no longer an accepted medical technique. _____

ANSWERS

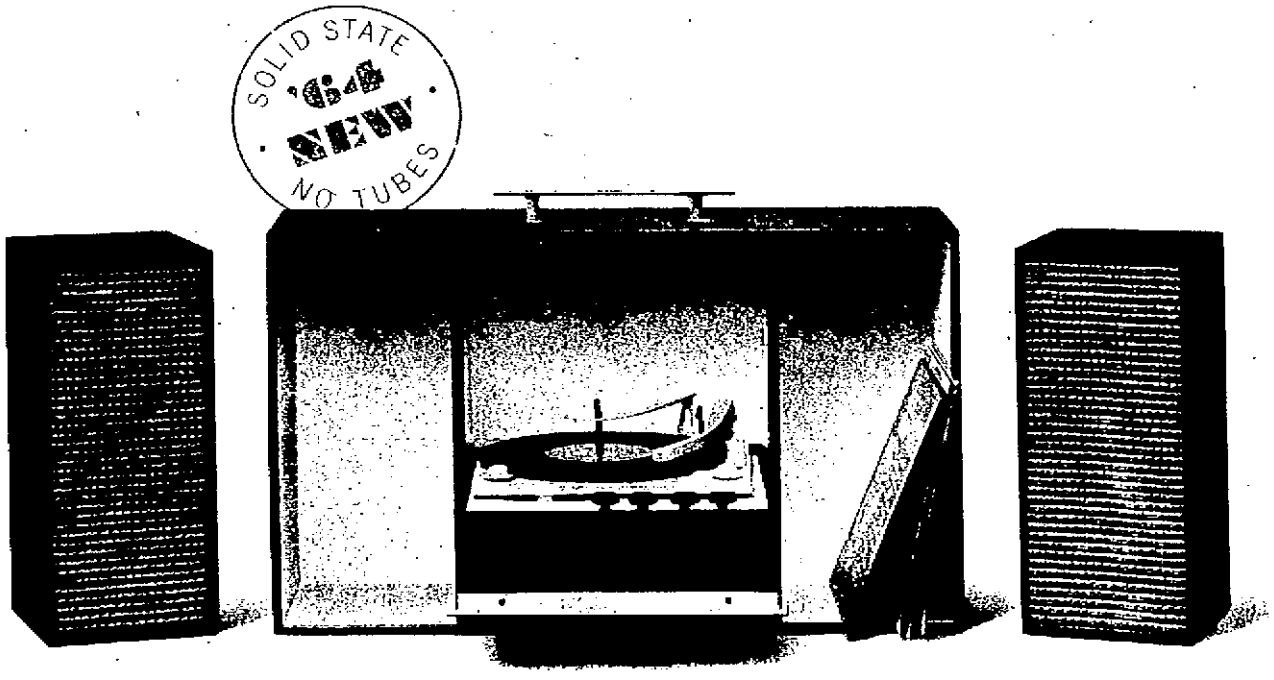

1. FALSE. Never use your thumb, because you have a strong pulse there, which may confuse the count.
2. FALSE. A sickroom should be 68°-70°, and even this may be too warm for people used to cooler temperatures.
3. FALSE. Even a healthy person's temperature may dip in the morning to 97° and rise in the evening to 99° or slightly higher.
4. FALSE. Pain may be from an inflamed appendix, for which heat is dangerous.
5. TRUE. A sick person can be quite uncomfortable in hot weather, and a fan can help circulate the air.
6. FALSE. Don't let the thermometer influence your judgment. Some mild illnesses will produce high fevers and some of the more serious ones comparatively low fevers.
7. TRUE, even though there's water in the bag. Hot applications are either dry or moist. Baths or hot compresses provide moist heat.
8. FALSE. Have a doctor remove the object.
9. TRUE. Normal breathing rate for an adult is 16-20 inspirations per minute; for children, 20-25 per minute; and for infants, 30-35. The rate tends to increase with illness.
10. TRUE. The body uses vast amounts of protein during episodes of high fever, and this protein should have rapid replacement.

THE BOOTLES & THE BEATLES

by LLOYD SHEARER

The Bootles: Quartet of lovelies does girlie version of the Beatles.

HOLLYWOOD.

Behind many a young show business idol who shows a spark of talent there usually stalks a mastermind who fans the flame, schedules and exploits the performer.

Twenty-five years ago a razor-sharp press agent, George Evans, took under his wing a skinny, anemic-looking singer named Frank Sinatra. When the crooner was working the Paramount Theatre in New York, Evans had him dress in a suit, loosely stitched on purpose at the seams.

A small army of shrieking girls descended on Sinatra, and when the howling pack clutched at his sleeves, the sleeves came off. They grabbed at his trousers, and the trousers came apart.

The crooner had to be rescued by police, but not before Evans had phoned the press photographers. The resultant photos of Sinatra, down to his shorts, made the front pages of newspapers pretty nearly everywhere.

In the past half-dozen years we've seen Elvis Presley masterminded by Colonel Tom Parker, a former carnival pitchman and acknowledged expert in act exploitation. We've witnessed the rise and fall of two teenage favorites, Frankie Avalon and Fabian, supposedly singers, "manufactured" by Bob Marcucci, a Philadelphia recording manager. But none of these promotions compares with the publicity and exploitation job recently performed in this country for the Beatles.

No act in recent show business history has been so shrewdly paced and promoted. The man most responsible for the accomplishment is Brian Epstein, manager of the Beatles.

Epstein, whose family runs a record shop in Liverpool, England, caught the long-maned rock 'n' roll quartet playing in a local cellar called the Liverpool Cavern. "I thought they had something," he says, "so I signed on as their manager." He then proceeded to build the four boys into the most popular show biz act on both sides of the Atlantic.

Today, at 29, Brian Epstein controls seven recording groups of artists: the Beatles, Gerry and the Pacemakers, The Fourmost, Cilla Black, Billy J. Kramer, Tommy Quickly and Sounds Incorporated.

Other than the Beatles, chances are you've heard none of these. But don't worry. Epstein is currently masterminding an invasion of America by his entertainers.

In the past 10 months at least one Epstein artist has hit the top spot on the British Hit Parade, and the little Napoleon of British show business sees no reason why some of them can't do the same over here.

FROM FAINTS TO FILMS

Epstein knows all the angles—how to hire a battery of press agents, girls who scream and faint, lawyers who handle the merchandise tie-ups, publishers who print the song sheets, manufacturers who produce the records, bookers who sign the acts, film executives who make the motion pictures.

At the moment he's signed to book pop concerts every Sunday night in London's Prince of Wales Theatre. He's sending his acts out on road tours. He's supervising the Beatles in their first motion picture and expects that the Beatles alone will gross at least $10,000,000 on all their activities before 1964 ends.

The phenomenal success of the Beatles has given rise to hopeful copyists.

A few weeks ago Chet De Milo, 24, a London-born Australian bandleader who has been in Hollywood for a year and who has studiously followed the course of the Beatles, decided to try what is known in show business as the sex-switch. He formed a quartet of four attractive girls who can sing. He and his partner, Mark Royal, wrote two songs for them, "I'll Let You Hold My Hand" and "Never Till Now." He then dressed the girls in black tops, stretch pants and boots, named them the Bootles.

He took the package to Gene Norman, head of Crescendo Records, and said, "Why don't we cut a couple of sides and give these girls a publicity build-up? They're all cute kids. One of them plays a guitar. Maybe they'll catch on, and we'll have an American version of the Beatles."

Norman agreed. The records were cut and distributed to disc jockeys throughout the country. Publicity agents have been hired to plug the girls and their high-heeled boots, and a plan is under way to book the quartet in conjunction with the Beatles under the title: the Beatles and the Bootles.

Brian Epstein, of course, will have nothing to do with the idea. Insofar as he's concerned, the Bootles will have to make it on their own.

Unfortunately for the girls, most rock 'n' roll records are purchased by 11- to 16-year-old females. Somehow, girls don't cotton to other girls. They go wild about fellas, especially those who appear slightly on the feminine side by growing long manes of hair which they toss from side to side as they strum their guitars.

Teenagers being as unfathomable as they are, the Bootles might have a better chance if they'd shave their heads.

The Beatles: Wild manes of hair, unbridled spontaneity and a mastermind promoter add up to hair-shaking box-office success.

LESLIE BLANCHARD WITH INGER STEVENS, STAR OF "THE FARMER'S DAUGHTER," CLAIROL'S NEW WEDNESDAY-EVENING SERIES ON ABC-TV

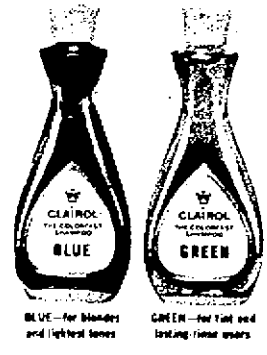

A famous haircoloring artist tells why you should use a special colorfast shampoo if you color or lighten your hair

"The more beautiful your haircoloring, the more important it is to keep it beautiful," says Leslie Blanchard of New York, Color Director for Antoine Salon, Saks Fifth Avenue, and originator of many exciting haircoloring effects. "We use color to achieve the utmost in flattery for a woman —to play up her best features, and add life and elegance to the simplest styling.

"With haircoloring so important, naturally I like it to stay the way I designed it, clear and fresh looking. I don't want to see it turn cloudy or change after a shampoo or two."

When asked how he handles this important shampoo problem, Mr. Blanchard explained, "Now we have a very special answer in new Clairol Shampoo. It's special because it's colorfast—that is, it won't change hair color."

Very different from other leading shampoos, new colorfast shampoo by Clairol was specifically created for women who color or lighten their hair. In two unique formulas: Clairol Blue for all light delicate blonde shades of lightened and toned hair. Clairol Green for all red, brown and black shades of tints and lasting rinses. So you see, however you color your hair, one of these two is exactly right for you! Used by leading beauty salons everywhere. Now available at fine cosmetic counters.

YOU'LL LOVE THIS VEAL STEAK

by BETH MERRIMAN Parade food editor

Veal steak is a deliciously tender cut when properly cooked. Our recipe has an additional attraction—exquisite flavor in the sauce. The olive rice cones make a perfect accompaniment. Serve with sliced carrots and a tossed green salad.

VEAL STEAK SAUTERNE

¼ cup flour
1 tablespoon paprika
1 teaspoon salt
1 veal steak, cut 1½ in. thick (1½ to 2 lb.)
1 Bermuda onion
3 tablespoons vegetable oil
¾ cup water
¼ cup sauterne
¼ teaspoon oregano
1 cup dairy sour cream

Combine flour, paprika and salt; dredge veal thoroughly with this mixture. Slice onion thin; cook in vegetable oil until soft and golden brown; remove onions from pan. Brown veal steak slowly on both sides in oil remaining in pan. Place onions on veal. Add any remaining flour mixture to pan. Add water; cover; simmer until veal is tender (about 1 hour). Remove veal and onions to platter; keep warm. Add wine, oregano and sour cream to pan; blend well; heat slowly. Pour over steak. Serves 6.

OLIVE RICE CONES

2⅔ cups water
½ teaspoon salt
4 tablespoons butter or margarine, divided
2⅔ cups precooked rice
¼ cup chopped stuffed olives
4 tablespoons minced parsley
½ cup mayonnaise

Combine water, salt and 2 tablespoons butter in large saucepan; bring to boil; stir in rice. Cover; remove from heat. Let stand 5 minutes. Fluff with fork. Melt remaining butter; add with olives, parsley and mayonnaise. Reheat to serving temperature. Pack into well-buttered small funnel or cone-shaped ice cream scoop; invert on platter. Continue until rice mixture is all used. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

Recipe prepared in Parade kitchens. Photo by Bacon.

Brown Sugar! On Quaker Oatmeal! Children like it!

BROWN SUGAR on oatmeal? Yes indeed! Children call it "butterscotch oatmeal" and like it fine. Many new ideas for oatmeal toppings are catching on good, too . . . like raisins, jam or preserves, fresh fruits, syrup.

Try them all.

And you know how nutritious Quaker Oats is. Take protein for example. Whole grain oats are richer in protein than any other leading cereal . . . even though oatmeal is the most economical cereal in the store.

And that hot, substantial oatmeal lights up a nice warm glow inside . . . makes the day look brighter . . . in a minute.

Cooks in just one minute... costs less than 2 cents a serving!

PARADE'S EIGHTH ANNUAL

ALL-AMERICA HIGH SCHOOL

■ PARADE's 1964 All-America High School Basketball Team is the highest scoring and tallest in its 8-year history. Chosen by vote of hundreds of high school and college coaches, it represents the top 25 scholastic players in the country, divided into 5 squads. Among them are 1 giant of 7'1", 5 men 6'8" or better. The starting lineup averages 6'7".

Many of these stars are certain to gain greater fame in college and pro ranks, as have such former PARADE All-Americas as Tom Meschery (St. Mary's-San Francisco Warriors), Jerry Lucas (Ohio State-Cincinnati Royals), Bill McGill (Utah-New York Knicks). Here is this year's crop.

FIRST SQUAD

WESTLEY UNSELD (6'8") Seneca H.S., Louisville, Ky. Player scouts of the University of Kentucky, which regularly produces top teams, call rangy, rugged Unseld "the best high school player in the country."

MIKE LEWIS (6'8") Missoula, Mont., H.S. Lewis has set all scoring and rebounding records of his team, which holds the state championship. Every Big Ten university has offered him an athletic scholarship.

LOU ALCINDOR (7'1") Power Memorial Academy, New York, N.Y. Still only a junior, this amazing youth is a PARADE All-America for the second successive year. High-scoring Alcindor has paced his team to a new New York City consecutive game victory mark.

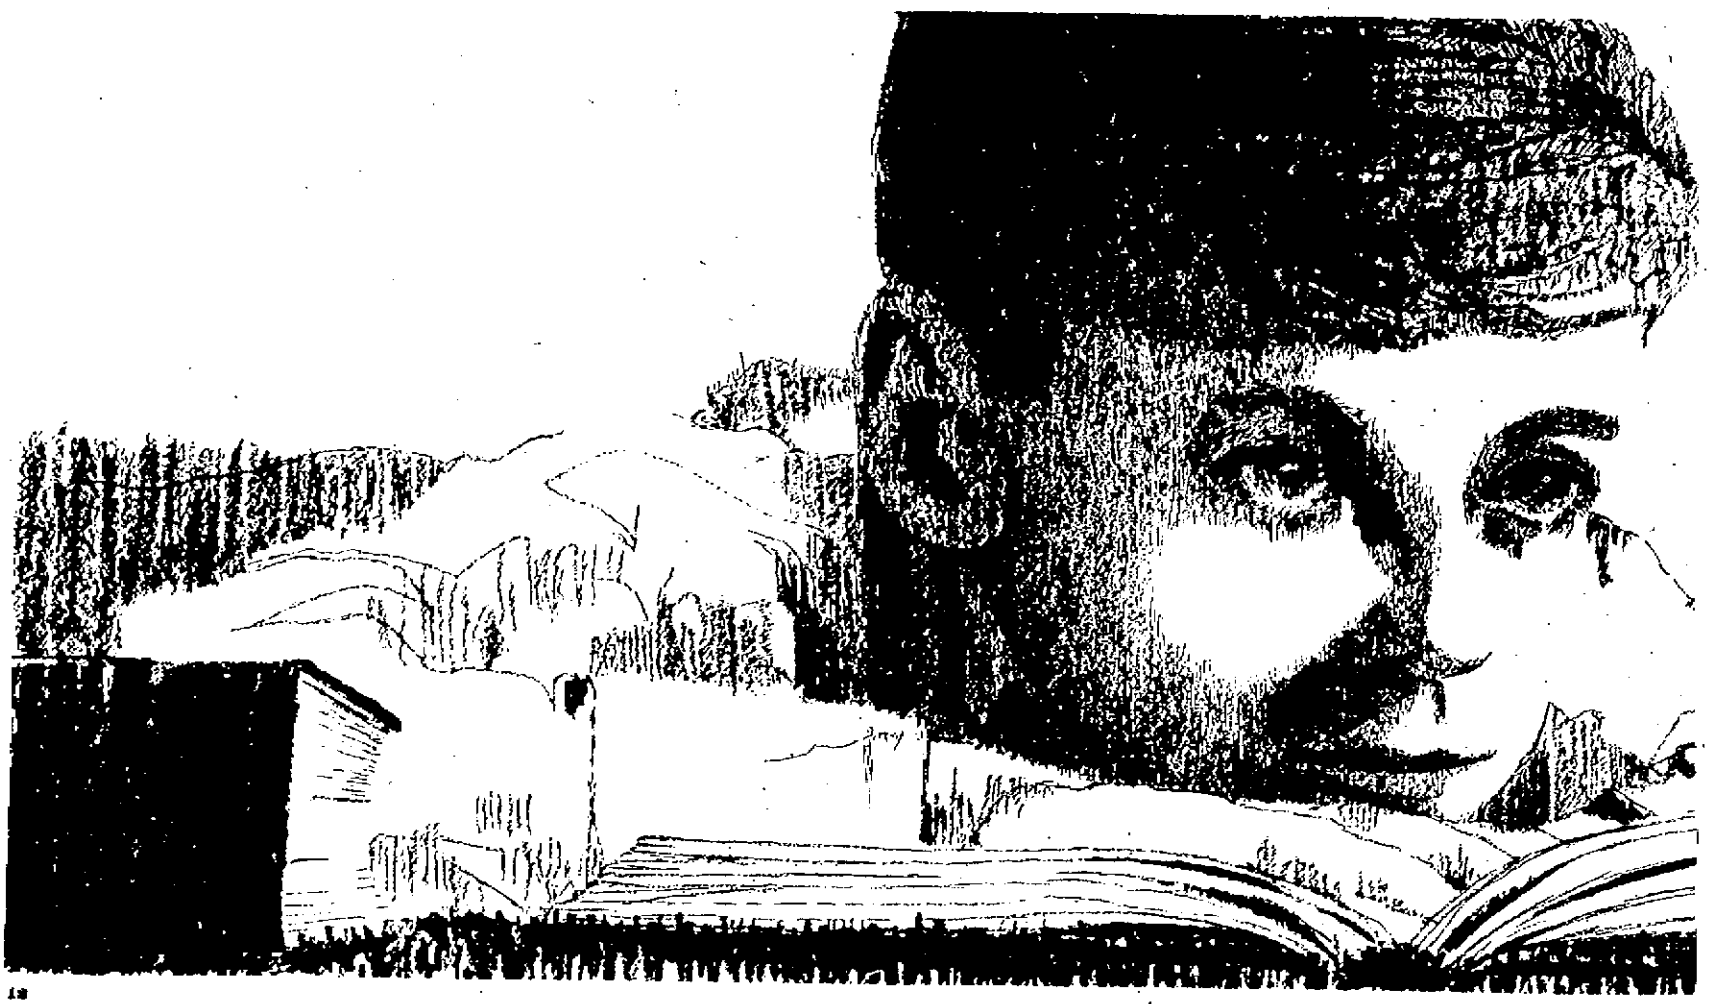

LARRY MILLER (6'4") Catasauqua, Pa., H.S. Temple University coach Harry Litwack says Miller is the nation's "most complete" player in his age group. Miller has offers from more than 100 colleges.

JERRY SHARMAN (6'3") Charter Oak, Calif., H.S. This boy has a good start toward duplicating the career of his father, former All-America and pro great Bill Sharman. In one stretch he hit 20 of 21 foul shots.

SECOND SQUAD

RICHARD JONES (6'7") Lester H.S., Memphis, Tenn. A high point and rebound man, Jones is considered the best all-around high school player in his state.

ROGER BOHNENSTIEHL (6'6") Collinsville, Ill., H.S. His

shooting accuracy rate is a remarkable 60-plus per cent. An All-State selection last year.

HAROLD BOOKER (6'9") Darby-Colwyn H.S., Pa. Leading rebounder in Pennsylvania. Member of Class B state champion five which defeated many Class A teams.

RON WILLIAMS (6'3") Weirton, W. Va., H.S. To his coach, Jim Carey, Williams is "the greatest I've ever coached, or seen, for that matter."

JACK BETTRIDGE (6'2") Power Memorial Academy, New York, N.Y. He and first squad selection Alcindor helped make theirs nation's No. 1 high school team.

THIRD SQUAD

GLINDOR TORAIN (6'5") Central H.S., Muncie, Ind. Leading rebounder in Indiana. Selected member of the All-State five last year, played abbreviated schedule 63-64. DON CHANEY (6'4") McKinley H.S., Baton Rouge, La. George Ireland, coach of NCAA champion Loyola of Chicago, rates him "right at the top of the '64 talent." DAVE NEWMARK (6'11") Lincoln H.S., Brooklyn, N.Y. He's the best rebounder in the New York City public high school system and has a 90 grade average, too!

BRENDAN McCARTHY (6'2") De Matha Catholic H.S., Hyattsville, Md. Successor to John Austin, who was an earlier PARADE All-America from De Matha.

BOB TALLENT (6'1") Maytown, Ky., H.S. Led the state of Kentucky in scoring last year and averaged 40 points a game this year for an undistinguished team.

Phillips' Milk of Magnesia is the Balanced Laxative!

Brings more complete relief than any single-purpose laxative

Phillips' Milk of Magnesia is both a laxative and an antacid. That's why it's called the balanced laxative. And that's why it brings you more complete relief than any single-purpose laxative.

As a laxative, Phillips' works thoroughly but gently, for truly comfortable relief. As an antacid, Phillips' relieves heartburn and queasiness and other acid discomforts that often accompany irregularity. No single-purpose laxative can give such complete yet gentle relief.

So, the next time you need a laxative, take Phillips' Milk of Magnesia—in regular or mint-flavored form. For more complete relief, get Phillips', the balanced laxative.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Irene Ryan, who plays "Granny" on The Beverly Hillbillies, has enjoyed a notable 40-year career as a headliner in vaudeville, radio, motion pictures, night clubs and television. Born in El Paso, Tex., Miss Ryan moved to San Francisco at an early age and as a teenager became a chorus girl in a stock company show. From vaudeville she stepped into radio, making her debut in 1932. The Tim and Irene Show, one of the most popular programs in the early days of radio, served as a springboard to her motion picture career. During World War II, Miss Ryan co-starred with Bob Hope on his tours of military installations. In recent years she has confined her talents to television and personal appearances. Irene lives in Santa Monica and is renowned for her deadpan expression, her implausible voice and a delightful sense of humor, which gives birth to such jokes as these.

O'Reilly had been experiencing a run of bad luck at the track and was down to his last few bills when he sighted a priest anointing one of the horses before a race. So he placed all his money on the horse's nose to win, but the nag finished last.

A few days later O'Reilly bumped into the priest on the street and grumbled: "It's been lettin' me down, ye've done, that's what. I bet on a horse the other day because ye stopped to bless it and it finished last!"

"But, O'Reilly, me good man," answered the priest, "you don't understand. I wasn't blessing that horse—I was giving him last rites."

At the end of her first day on the job, a new secretary inquired of the bookkeeper, "Doesn't that sourpuss boss of ours ever laugh out loud?"

"Only," sighed the bookkeeper, "when we ask him for a raise."

A friend of mine was told by her doctor that she needed a costly operation. "And you needn't worry about the cost," soothed her doctor. "Just pay me $200 down and $50 a month for the next 3 years."

Slightly aghast, my friend exclaimed: "Sounds like buying a car!"

"You're right," replied the doctor. "I am."

A distinguished portrait painter stared fixedly at a lady during a Beverly Hills cocktail party, then strode to her side and confessed: "I don't recall your name, but your features certainly are familiar to me."

"They ought to be," she stated coolly. "I paid you $5,000 last year to paint them!"

A couple of marriage-conscious gals were discussing their future careers.

"It's the life of an airline hostess for me," said one. "That's the way to meet a well-heeled man of the world."

"But there must be a less wearing way of meeting men," pondered the other.

"Could be," said the first, "but you'll never find a better opportunity for looking them over than when they're strapped down!"

Definition of a reckless driver: A man who lets his wife take the wheel.

And speaking of reckless drivers, I asked a friend of mine why it is that she consistently ignores red lights.

"Why not?" she asked. "When you've seen one, you've seen them all."

I think that people in Hollywood are more weight-conscious than any place else in the world. An actress who lives across the street from me lost 190 pounds of repulsive, flabby fat in just 60 days —she divorced him!

PARADE'S SPECIAL

INTELLIGENCE REPORT

WHIPLASH. Many insurance adjusters claim that whiplash, an acceleration injury of the neck, is frequently a phony complaint of dishonest claimees trying to get a larger settlement. Dr. Ian Macnab of the University of Toronto, who recently completed an extensive study of whiplash, says this isn't so. Of 256 patients who received insurance settlements for their injuries, he saw 145, two years or more after their litigation was settled, and 121 still complained of pain.

BIRTH RATE DROP. The birth rate in the U.S. is slowly declining. Last year the 4,137,000 births represented a rate of 21.8 per 1,000, down from the postwar 1947 peak of 26.5 per 1,000. There are now 190,810,000 people in this country.

2 SINGLES. Last year only 2 single records sold 1,000,000 or more copies: "Hey Paula," by Paul & Paula, and "Sugar Shack," by Jim Gilmer & The Fireballs. An estimated 90% of all singles are purchased by girls aged 11 to 16.

UNEMPLOYMENT SOLUTION. To help solve the nation's unemployment problem, Labor Secretary Willard Wirtz has come up with the following recommendation: add 2 years to the free education system, making education compulsory to age 18. "This move would eliminate about 2 million of the 3.5 million teenagers (14-19) currently in the working force," Wirtz declares. "I do not think most of those 3.5 million ought to be there."

TV TRAINING GROUND. There was a time, years ago, when all major film studios signed young players and cast them in a series of B pictures. Today B pix and the training ground they provided are both gone. Television is the current breeding ground for beginning actors and actresses. Revue Productions, largest producers of TV films, has more than 100 young players under contract.

THE BRITISH ARE COMING. In the last 3 years there has been a 35% increase in the number of British students coming to this country. Major reasons for the increase: (1) Shortage of higher education facilities in Great Britain; (2) Snob appeal of American universities. Prince William of Gloucester, first cousin of Queen Elizabeth, is doing graduate work in economics at Stanford. Recently the Prince took a 2-hour British civil service exam at the British consulate in San Francisco to qualify him for a British Commonwealth relations job. The Prince failed the exam for the second time, eliminating himself from any further job consideration in that service.

46 MORE QUAKES, TIDAL WAVE FURY ADD TO ALASKA'S GRIEF

By United Press International

Sickening aftershocks and killer tidal waves, backlash of possibly the strongest earthquake ever recorded, dealt additional casualties and grief Saturday to Alaskans counting their dead by the scores and homeless by the thousands.

Quake-caused fires, snow and bitter cold added to the misery in the areas blacked out and isolated by cut communications lines. Damage was estimated at $250 million. Casualties also occurred in California and Oregon.

As many as 85 persons were reported dead and at least 100 missing. Hundreds more were injured in the Good Friday quake that wrenched an 800-mile arc of the 49th state from Sitka west to Kodiak.

But the governor's office downgraded its original estimate of as many as 600 dead.

At least six were known dead in Anchorage.

By 7 p.m. Alaska time, 46 aftershocks were reported, at least six of them intense enough to be classed as severe in themselves.

Gov. William A. Egan's staff worked through the night funneling supplies, food and water to stricken regions. Lack of electricity hampered the search of wreckage for victims in the 30-degree temperature.

Gov. Brown declared wave-battered Crescent City, Calif., a disaster area.

"Another quake . . . bad . . . bad . . . bad . . . God, why can't they stop this business?" an amateur radio operator tapped out from shattered Anchorage, until late Friday a bustling, modern city of 100,000 in all its environs.

President Johnson declared Alaska a disaster area and a major federal relief and mercy air mission was mounted.

Snow that fell earlier stopped as fires crackled from shattered gasoline storage tanks.

Downtown Anchorage looked like London in the blitz. The area was ordered evacuated at 4 p.m.

Anchorage Civil Defense officials reported looting in the devastated downtown and residential areas. Eskimo scouts of the Alaska National Guard, armed with bayonet-tipped rifles, patrolled the cordoned-off 72-block downtown area.

The five-story J. C. Penny store collapsed inwardly. It was feared there were victims inside.

A six-story apartment house was flattened. A two-block section of the main street sank out of sight in the fissured earth. A car perched on a 30-foot pile of dirt.

"The room started going from left to right, up and down," a survivor moaned. "I ran outside and the building fell down."

Houses were tipped and tilted. Some were smashed to the ground as by a giant hammer.

10 DIE, 15 MISSING

4 Waves Demolish Calif. City

By JACK SCHREIBMAN

CRESCENT CITY (AP)—This wrecked Northern California logging and fishing seaport counted at least 10 dead and 15 missing Saturday, victims of four tidal waves flung inland by the violent earthquake in Alaska.

More than 60 were injured.

The waves struck from 10 p.m. Friday until just after midnight, devastating 29 blocks of stores and houses in this town 340 miles north of San Francisco.

More than 300 buildings were flattened or knocked askew. Property damage was estimated in millions, perhaps in excess of $30 million.

The town's 3,000 residents fled—but belatedly. Although two radio stations broadcast warnings, residents were deceived by the first two light waves.

Then two mammoth waves struck. Some witnesses said they were up to 15 feet high. Powerful backwash as great masses of water receded did the big damage.

* * * *

SHORT - CIRCUITED wires set Texaco and Union Oil gasoline storage tanks ablaze near the waterfront. One went up with a roar. Towering flames shot into the night sky. They still burned long after daylight.

Along Front Street bordering the harbor, stores crumbled and bits of their wreckage floated out to sea.

Tidal waves washed masses of mud and rock four blocks inland.

* * * *

HOUSES WERE washed completely off their foundations. Trees were uprooted. Asphalt topping on streets was sheared off.

Streets and U.S. Highway 101 were clogged with flotsam, bushes and tree limbs.

Fear gripped the fleeing populace. One man, Oren Magruder, died of a heart attack.

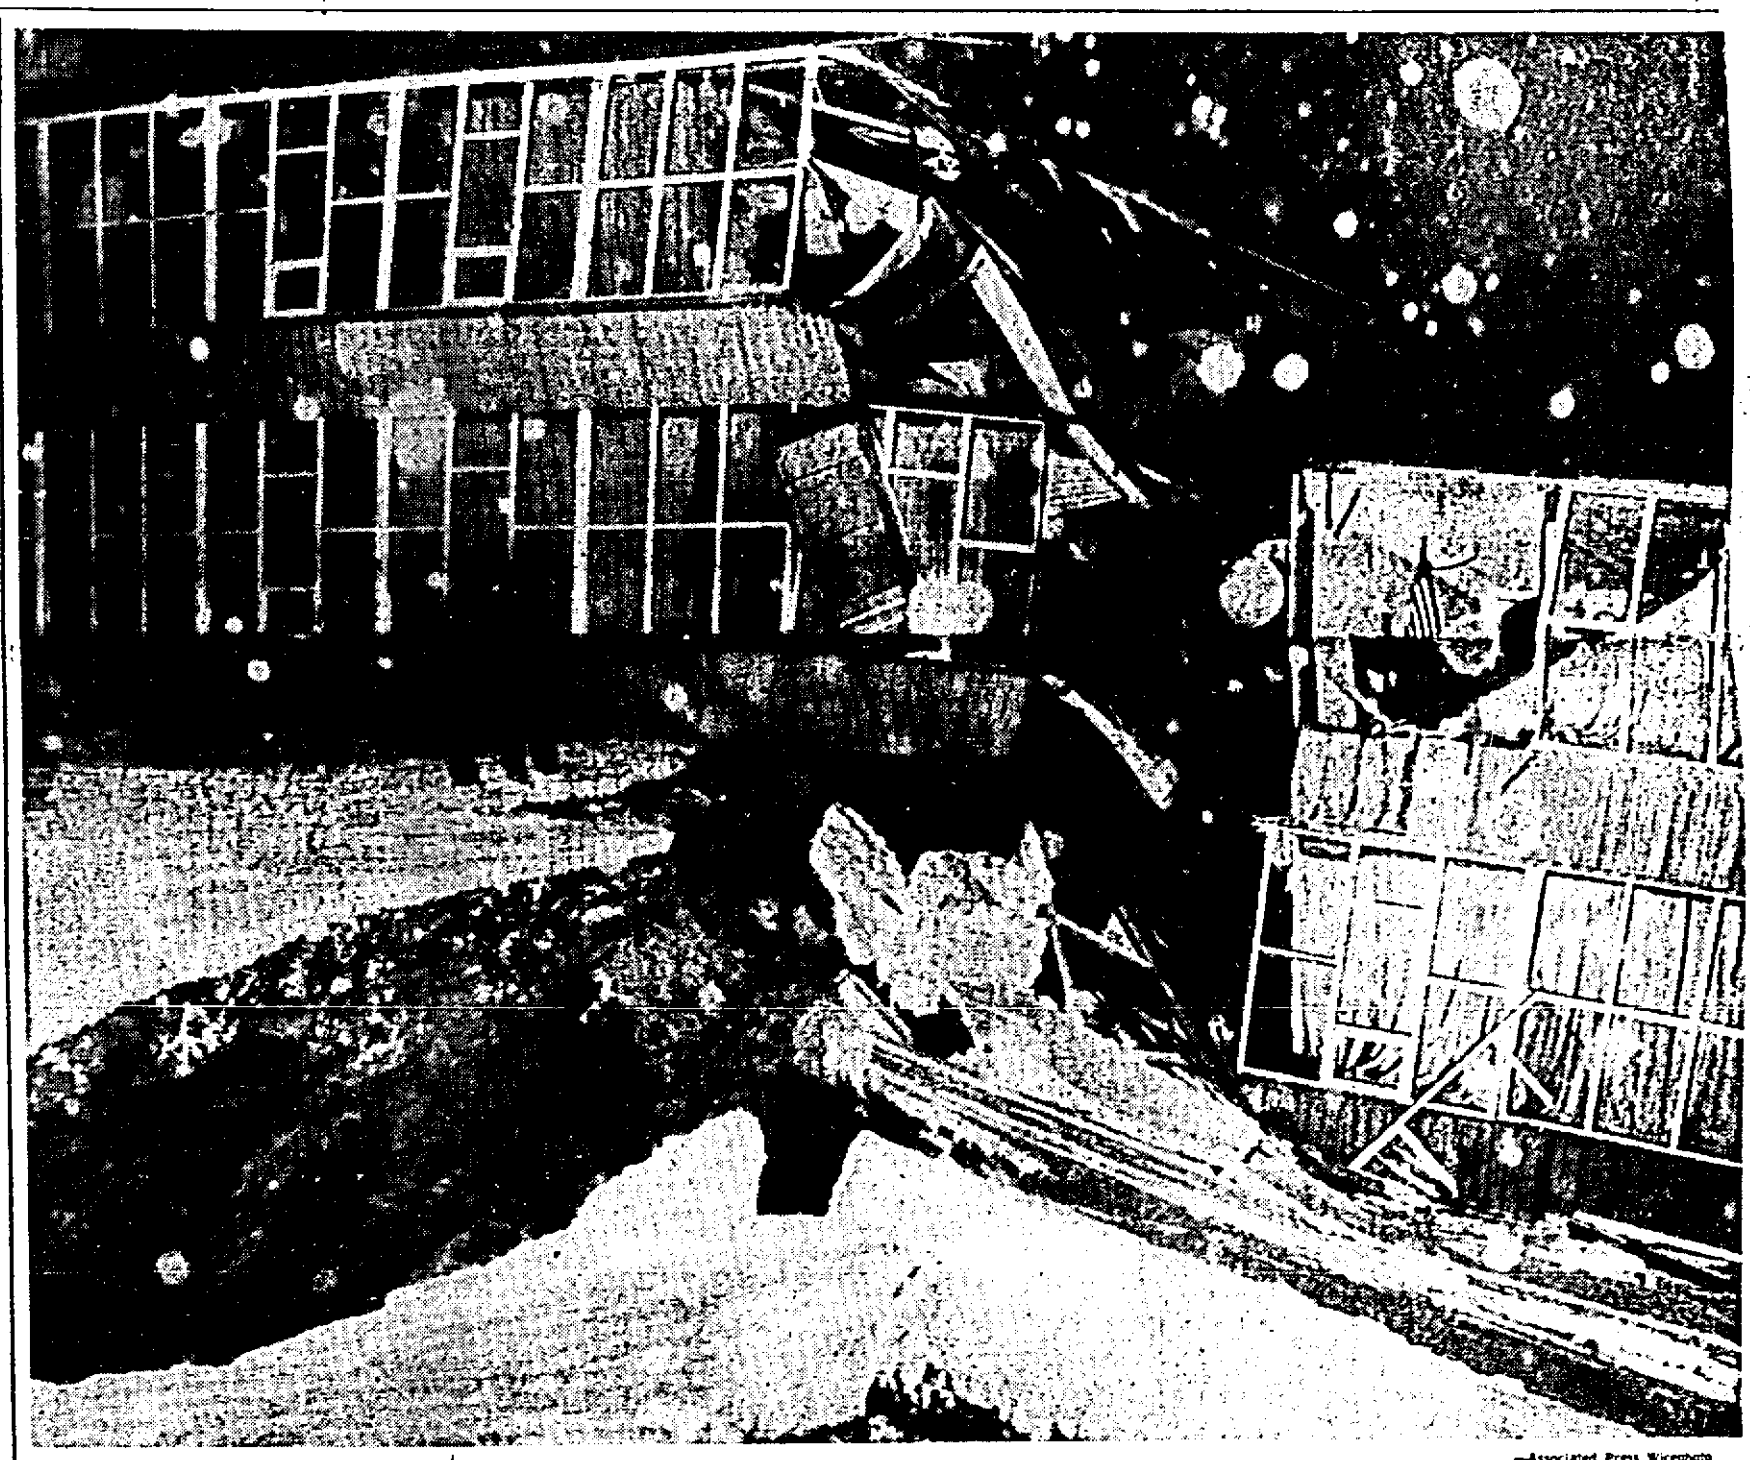

There were reports of at least three cases of premature births at Seaside Hospital.

* * * *

TWO MARRIED couples were among the identified dead. They were Mr. and Mrs. Earl Edwards and Mr. and Mrs. William Clawson.

Another victim was identified only as "Frenchie." Bodies recovered included

UPROAR IN ZOO IS WARNING

TACOMA, Wash. (AP) — Birds and animals in the Point Defiance Park zoo here signaled the great Alaska earthquake Friday night 1,500 miles away with a deafening din.

"I was on our porch overlooking the zoo around 7:30 when suddenly there was a tremendous uproar in the zoo," said J. H. McMenamin.

"First it was the ducks and geese. Then the lions, coyotes and all the rest joined in. The noise was deafening.

"Only once before was there such an all-out hullabaloo — when we had a big earthquake here in April, 1949."

Johnson Aide Views Damage

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) President Johnson's disaster relief chief arrived here by plane Saturday night and met immediately with state, local and military leaders to organize the recovery efforts for quake-stricken Alaska.

Edward A. McDermott, director of the Office of Emergency Planning, left the presidential plane after a 3700-mile flight from Washington, and went at once to the meetings at Elmendorf Air Force Base.

Vesuvius Plane Crash Kills 45

NAPLES, Italy, Sunday (AP)—An Italian airliner crashed on Mt. Vesuvius in a driving rainstorm Saturday night, killing 45 persons including 7 Americans.

Officials of Alitalia airline said today there were victims from five countries in the Easter Eve tragedy.

They listed them as 18 from France, 8 from Italy, 6 from Switzerland and an Englishwoman as well as the Americans. The five crew members were Italians.

The plane, a four-engine turbo-prop Viscount, was coming in for a landing at Naples' Capodichino Airport 90 minutes before midnight when it rammed into the side of the famous volcano and burst into flames.

The passenger manifest listed among the Americans aboard a Maj. Lawrence Mancini of Brooklyn, his wife, Fay, and two children, Jill, a girl, and Steven, a boy.

The other Americans were listed as a Lt. Robert I. Adkison and a Mr. J. H. McFadden, both of New York, and Thomas Vendur of Norfolk, Va. There were no addresses.

The plane was on the last leg of a flight that originated in Turin in north Italy when it crashed.

Officials said the wreckage was sighted early today on the northwestern side of the still-active volcano, which rises 4,013 feet above the picturesque Bay of Naples.

Several squads of firemen reached the wreckage first and radioed that there were no survivors. They

GAS ENDS HOUR'S SEIGE

L.B. Youth Barricades Self, Holds Police Off

By GEORGE ROBESON

A 19-year-old boy, angered at his parents for refusing to give him a pain pill, barricaded himself in his bedroom at 247 Prospect Ave. with two rifles and held a dozen police at bay for more than an hour Saturday night.

The youth, Henry Baker Turley, was captured after police filled his bedroom with tear gas. He was not booked but was taken into protective custody.

* * * *

LT. WYNN HAYNES said young Turley had three teeth pulled last week and was in pain, according to his parents. The youth asked for a pain pill Saturday night, but his parents felt he had taken enough.

In a rage, Turley locked himself in his second-floor bedroom wih his two rifles and threatened to kill anyone—including his parents—who came near him, officers said.

Patrolmen and motorcycle officers surrounded the Turleys' home. Other officers stationed themselves on the roof of the house next door.

* * * *

ONE OF THEM, Officer Dick Johansen, fired three tear-gas shells through Turley's bedroom window. The youth hastily threw up a mattress against the window, deflecting a fourth shell.

Finally, he announced he was leaving the room to go to the bathroom. Officers Ray Woolhether and Joe Malcolm rushed upstairs and grabbed Turley when he stepped into the hall.

Officers later found Turley had not loaded either of the rifles.

L.A.C. Says:

Capitalists Should Stick Together

According to the Communists—and some of our left-wing legislators—capitalism is a dirty word. These people would destroy it on the theory that everything should be equally divided among all the people. It is evident that the capitalists must stick together in fighting this philosophy if they are not to be destroyed. It is therefore important that we take a look to see just who are these "capitalists."

One definition in the dictionary is "one who has capital." On that basis, a large percentage of the American people qualify. Compared with Russia, Red China and many other countries, all our people are capitalists because all but a few of them own many things of which ownership is denied to the people in Socialistic or Communist societies. Our people have something to protect and should recognize the fact that they have a battle on to protect it.

The family with life insurance is a capitalist because it owns an interest in the company that guarantees to repay it with the investment money paid into the company. The company, in turn, reinvests a large part of that money in automobile, chemical and other industries. Including all individuals, there are about 118 million policyholders in life insurance companies. The safety of their investments is dependent upon the free enterprise system under which these companies operate.

Every individual with savings in a bank or saving and loan association is a capitalist. Their savings are used to finance new homes and office buildings, as well as automobile purchases and many other segments of our economy. When government goes into the financing business it is in competition with these investments. Some of our people encourage the complete domination of such financing—making all borrowers dependent upon government agencies. An estimated 125 million people are capitalists in that they have their savings in their free enterprise system.

Then there are over 20 million workers who are members of company pension or profit-sharing plans. An estimated $65 billion are involved in these private plans. There are over 17 million individual shareowners in our private corporations. Owners of individual business enterprises number around 10 million people. All these are capitalists in that they have accumulated some money and invested it in private enterprises.

Every automobile owner is a capitalist. He has his money invested and must pay taxes for its ownership plus taxes on gasoline, tires, batteries and other appliances. More than 30 million people own their homes and should be concerned over the increasing trend toward government competition. None of these ownerships is permitted in the anti-capitalistic countries that insist they will "bury all capitalistic nations."

No other people in the world have so large a percentage of their people who own these things. It would seem time that we all take a closer look at our blessings and realize that as capitalists we enjoy the greatest prosperity and comfort ever known in history. They should realize that the rights of freedom of enterprise and capitalism are constantly being attacked. This is true as concerns Communists. But it is also true as concerns the attitude of many of our public officials who constantly seek ways of usurping the rights of individual capitalism.—L.A.C.

Nab Wave Gawkers

HONOLULU (UPI)—Many of the tourists that flock to this city wanted to see a tidal wave so much that police finally had to arrest them for their own protection.

The tidal wave alert siren sounded about 9 p.m. HST Friday, but police said that brought as many down to the beach here as walked away from it.

Guests at the plush Waikiki Beach hotels simply moved up a few stories and had a ringside seat for any tidal wave that might come.

Police drove through streets near Honolulu's beaches, ordering rubbernecks on their way. A few of the troublesome ones were put in the paddy wagon for their own safety. Finally, police got a school bus somewhere and forced pedestrians too near the beach to ride to safety.

But when the wave came, it turned out to be pretty harmless after all. It looked more like a high tide than any tidal wave, but police still had no regrets for their efforts.

"It happens just about this way every time we have a tidal wave alert around here," one veteran officer sighed.

2 Southland Women Slain Near Vegas

LAS VEGAS (UPI) — Two women from San Gabriel, Calif., were found shot to death early Saturday on the desert outskirts of this city and a man who left their blood-soaked car at a downtown parking garage was booked for investigation of homicide.

Police identified him as Roy Warman Osborne, 36, of Portland, Ore.

The fully-clothes bodies of Mrs. Inez Mulloy, about 50, and her daughter, Mrs. Norma Widick, 22, were found lying face down on the desert in a remote area 10 miles southwest of here, near a little-used road leading onto Interstate 15, the main Los Angeles-Las Vegas highway.

* * * *

BOTH HAD been shot in the head and the contents of their purses—minus money—had been dumped out about 100 yards away. One also had been run over by the car used by the slayer to flee the scene, authorities reported.

The women had arrived in Las Vegas Friday to get a truck abandoned there by Mrs. Widick's estranged husband Gaynard Dean, who had been reported missing Thursday in San Gabriel.

Police said the women registered at a downtown hotel Friday night but failed to use their room. Early Saturday their 1957 Chevrolet sedan was left at a parking garage.

* * * *

AN ATTENDANT summoned police when he found the interior of the car soaked with blood and a 38-caliber revolver on the seat.

Police staked out the car and arrested Osborne when he returned. Detectives said his fingertips were found on the gun and the car. He denied any knowledge of the then-missing women.

Following discovering of the bodies, Osborne was booked on the homicide charge. The case and Osborne subsequently were turned over to the Clark County Sheriff's office.

* * * *

SHERIFF'S DEPUTIES said Osborne would make no statement following discovery of the bodies.

Sheriff's detectives said both women apparently had been shot inside the car and their bodies dumped onto the desert. The slayer was believed to have taken the women's car, driven up the road, made a U-turn and run over the body of the younger woman on the way back to the main highway.

The bodies were spotted by two Las Vegas men flying in a private plane.

Southland Safe in Coastal Niche From Big Waves

By JIM MELTON

Three factors protected the Southern California coast from tidal waves triggered by the Alaskan earthquake, a California State College at Long Beach physics professor said Saturday.

Giant waves caused by the quake lashed cities on the Gulf of Alaska and rolled across the ocean to Japan and Hawaii. On the U.S. Northwest coast, a 17-foot crest hit British Columbia and a 12-foot crest brought disaster to Crescent City, Calif.

In Long Beach harbor, the water rose five feet and there were powerful surges, but it was only a sample of what happened elsewhere.

* * * *

DR. GEORGE Appleton explained the three things which cut down the waves before they reached here:

1. There is a broad continental shelf off the Southland coast. As the waves rolled over the relatively shallow water they began to dissipate. (There is some deep water close to the coast—the Catalina Trench, for example, but this is a minor valley in the ocean floor and doesn't change the overall pattern.)

2. From a global viewpoint, the Southern California coast lies in the shadow of Northern California. The bulge weakened the waves, but first they had a direct shot over open water at Crescent City.

3. There is a general attenuation of a wave as it travels, although a more distant point might get higher crests because of the other two factors.

Another Cal State scientist, Dr. Bert L. Conrey, professor of geology, pointed out that at Crescent City the "continental borderline" (the term "continental shelf" is the subject of a legal debate and scientists and using "borderline") is much narrower than the 90- to 120-mile border of relatively shallow water off Long Beach.

* * * *

APPLETON AND Conrey said the term tidal wave is a misnomer—the big waves have nothing to do with tidal action. Scientists call them seismic sea waves or use the Japanese name, tsunamis.

Dr. Appleton said a tsunamis is nothing more than a colossal version of what happens when you drop a pebble into a pond. Ripples spread out from the source of the disturbance.

What moves isn't the water, but the disturbance. The reaction can be explained, also, in terms of sound waves rippling through the air. It's the disturbance, not the air, that moves.

* * * *

THE EARTHQUAKE sent out two kinds of shock waves. One, transmitted by the earth, moved very fast because of the solid medium. The second was transmitted much more slowly through the water.

Conrey said seismic sea waves travel at an average of 450 miles an hour. The speed varies with depth of the water, decreasing in shallows. Using depth tables, scientists were able to calculate the approximate time of the waves' arrival here.

Smaller quakes which followed the main tremor are sending out their own waves, but they shouldn't be dangerous here. Size of a wave depends on intensity of the tremor causing it.

Mongolia Hard-Hit

Air Crash on Vesuvius Fatal to 45

said the Viscount burned when it crashed and that they had to extinguish the flames when they reached the site more than four hours later.

The twisted and charred metal was found 500 yards from a volcano observatory located 1,995 feet up the side of Vesuvius. Not far away is a hotel.

Police said the wreckage was on the Carda Peak of Mount Somma, across a small divide from the main crater of the volcano. Although Vesuvius has not erupted since 1944, it still smokes and experts say new eruptions can be expected at any time.

Tidal Wave Havoc in Crescent City

HOUSE IN DOWNTOWN CRESCENT CITY, CALIF., WAS PUSHED OFF FOUNDATION BY TIDAL WAVE

GASOLINE STORAGE TANKS at Crescent City were ignited by broken power lines falling as a result of the tidal wave damage caused by quake.

SCHOOL BUS, AUTOS WERE TOSSED ABOUT BY TIDAL WAVE WATERS RESULTING FROM ALASKA QUAKE

Canada's Pearson Offers Quake Aid

OTTAWA (AP)—Prime Minister Lester B. Pearson assured President Johnson Saturday that Canada was ready to do anything it could for the earthquake victims.

Wave Panic Hits Mexicans

MAZATLAN, Mexico (AP)— Over 80,000 residents and tourists fled this Pacific Coast city Saturday and took to the hills in fear of a tidal wave. Rumors had swept the city that back-up waves from the Alaska quake would hit here, 900 miles south of Los Angeles.

The port captain later announced there was no danger and by nightfall just about everyone had returned.

AN AUTO WAS TOSSED hundreds of feet, building and bridge ripped from foundations as the tidal wave tore inland at Port Alberni, B.C.

Governor Sees Crescent City Havoc as 'Really a Tragedy'

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Gov. Edmund G. Brown arrived in Sacramento Saturday with muddy shoes, a wrinkled shirt, a torn beltloop on his trousers and reports of death and destruction in Crescent City.

Brown's plane, the Grizzly II, touched down at 3:40 p.m. PST after a flight from the stricken northern California community. He toured the town for three hours Saturday morning.

• • • •

"IT'S REALLY a tragedy," the governor said. He added that water in the Crescent City harbor was continuing to surge and recede even as he walked around buildings torn from their foundations and heavy trucks overturned.

"I was a little frightened because I didn't know how far the waves were going to come in," Brown told newsmen at the Sacramento Airport.

Brown said that he spoke to a 9-year-old boy who had been staying in a shorefront motel with his parents when the tidal wave struck.

"There was just a little water in their room on the first wave," the governor said. "Then it receded and they went back to bed."

• • • •

THE GOVERNOR said the boy told him he awakened about two hours later, looked out the window and saw three feet of water swirling around the wall. Brown said the boy shouted to awaken his parents and all three moved up to the second floor.

While awaiting rescue, the family saw an elderly man and his wife walking in water outside the motel.

"The wife fell down and the man tried to pick her up," Brown said the boy told him. "Just then a car with nobody in it came along and hit them."

The boy told Brown he never saw them again.

those of two children, Bonita and William Wright.

Henry Newman, a Civil Defense official, lost his television repair shop. His wife lost a dress shop and health food store.

The force of the water was awesome. Houses were tossed out onto highways.

• • • •

CARS WERE flipped about like straws. Some were piled on each other. Others were hurled into and under buildings.

Harley Forkner, Del Norte County road commissioner, said it will take at least four days to clear the roads.

National Guardsmen patrolled the wrecked area with carbines and arrested one man for looting.

At 5 p.m., as fog rolled in and shrouded the scene of tragedy, a curfew was clamped. All persons were barred from the wrecked blocks.

• • • •

THE RETURNED homeless huddled at a hall set up by the Red Cross. Dazed adults sought missing relatives. Sad-eyed children clutched their pets.

Along U.S. 101, some of the buildings had the appearance of having been wrecked by explosions.

William Parker, city and county director of Civil Defense, said some of the victims were trapped in waterfront restaurants and bars.

• • • •

SEVEN OTHERS were reported flung into the bay from an overturned boat. Two bodies floated ashore and searchers gappled with hooks for others.

One man hung on to his home and watched the waters carry his wife away.

Several bodies were seen floating along swollen Elk Creek.

Red Cross Handling Inquiries

The Long Beach office of the American Red Cross and the Paramount Civil Defense office are operating on a 7-day-week schedule to handle inquiries from Southland residents about relatives in earthquake-torn Alaska.

The Red Cross office received more than 800 inquiries Saturday. Many of them were from relatives of servicemen stationed in the Anchorage area, according to manager Roland R. Bach, and these were handled quickly—there have been no casualties among military personnel in Alaska, he said.

• • • •

BUT 426 inquiries were sent by teleprinter to the Red Cross in Anchorage, via Seattle. Bach said 28 disaster workers in Anchorage are supervising hundreds of volunteer Red Cross workers whose job it is to track down persons for whom inquiries have been made.

"This may take several days in many cases," he said. "Many people up there have been displaced from their homes."

The Red Cross telephone number, manned around the clock, is HE 7-2941.

• • • •

INQUIRIES about Alaskan relatives may be made also by calling the Paramount Civil Defense office at Paramount City Hall, 634-2123. Requests received there are sent to Alaska by amateur radio operators who have volunteered their services to the CD office.

Meanwhile, the Port Hueneme Naval Construction Battalion asked all members of Mobile Construction Battalion No. 9 to report to the battalion center at Port Hueneme for airlift to the Alaska disaster area.

VAST HOLE OPENED IN ANCHORAGE STREET

Force of the earthquake that walloped Anchorage, Alaska, Friday is graphically depicted in this photo of downtown Fourth Avenue, the main street, as stunned citizens gape down into the yawning hole.

More Quakes Wrench Alaska

The tidal wave spawned by the shock rolled across the Pacific at 500 miles an hour. Shocks sent round the world threw six-foot waves against Texas and Louisiana shores on the Gulf of Mexico.

This was the situation in the more heavily-populated areas:

ANCHORAGE — The heart of the city torn to pieces. The new high school smashed beyond repair. Homes wrecked. Possibility of victims in the debris.

KODIAK — Downtown area smashed by quake and 17-foot tidal wave. Casualties heavy.

VALDEZ—As many as 28 dead; almost 30 missing.

JUNEAU — No damage to the state capital. Gov. Egan holding emergency meetings.

SEWARD—Waves as high as 15 feet reported. Damage heavy. Casualties.

SITKA — Little damage, a dock collapsed.

OLD HARBOR — Damage extensive to this oldest white settlement in Alaska.

CORDOBA — Badly damaged and burning. One airman killed at nearby St. Elias.

VANCOUVER ISLAND, British Columbia — 17-foot wave ripped 50 homes from foundations; hundreds more damaged. No deaths reported.

DEPOE BAY, Oregon — Tidal wave swept across family of six sleeping on beach; one child drowned, three others missing.

Oddly, Hope, a town across Cook Inlet from Anchorage, was reported to have suffered little or no damage.

Sewers were smashed. Telephone service was nonexistent and much information was being relayed by amateur radio operators. Electricity was out in some areas.

• • • •

A LOYOLA University seismograph expert in Chicago, the Rev. Donald Roll, S.J., said the Good Friday tremor may have been "the biggest earthquake of all time."

The quake registered 8.6 on the Richter scale, more powerful than the 1906 quake that leveled San Francisco and the 1960 quake that killed more than 5,000 in Chile.

Waves tossed yachts and small pleasure craft like matchsticks in ports up and down the Pacific Coast. A 10-foot wave rolled into Santa Catalina Island off Long Beach, Calif.

• • • •

THE WORST aftershock Saturday, shortly before 11 a.m., registred 5 on the Richter scale.

Scores of injured were being airlifted to bases in Washington and California.

The Army rolled water-wagons into Anchorage to provide safe drinking water.

Massive quantities of food, medicines, other supplies and medical personnel were flying into the not-badly-damaged military installations in the state.

• • • •

OF THE 31,000 servicemen stationed in Alaska, only one fatality was reported. The Defense Department listed the victim as an airman stationed at St. Elias, near Cordova, which was near the center of Friday night's quake.

The U.S. Coast and Geodetic Survey reported the earthquake released 10 million times more energy than the atomic bomb that destroyed Hiroshima.

The Pentagon reported that U.S. early warning systems against surprise attack, spread over the northern part of the continent, were undamaged. The system was operating at "full capacity," according to a spokesman at Elmendorf Air Force Base just four miles from Anchorage.

• • • •

"MOST PEOPLE in Anchorage who were in the stores and business buildings had time to get out before the big shock came," said Anchorage police officer Robert Clemens. "Everything is rubble downtown. I couldn't even estimate the damage."

There were cracks two feet wide in downtown streets.

A ship in the area radioed that the entire waterfront of the town of Seward was ablaze.

Gen. Alfred Gruenther, president of the American Red Cross, sent a telegram to Gov. Egan pledging the agency's full resources.

• • • •

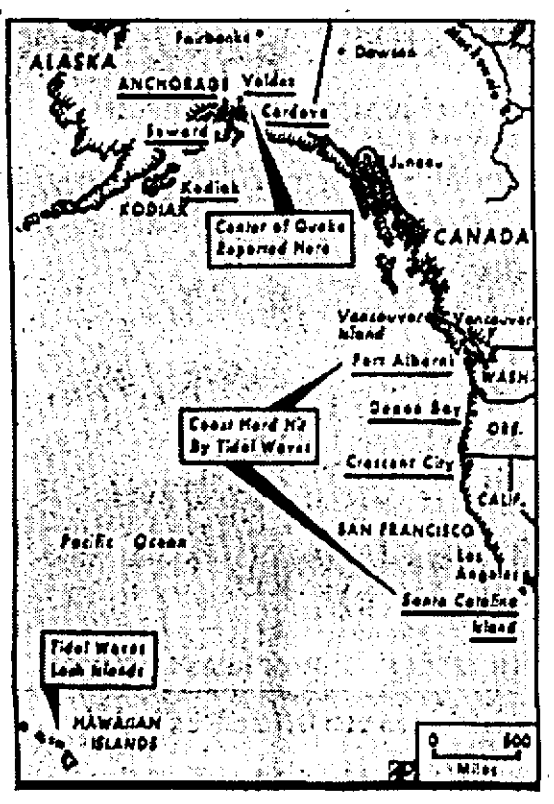

THERE WAS this breakdown of federal aid being sent to the stricken areas:

—Tactical Air Command planes flew 162 doctors, nurses and other medical personnel from bases in North and South Carolina. They brought with them portable hospital facilities.

—All federal stocks of food in Alaska were turned over to Gov. Egan. The Air Force also prepared to airlift food from the states of Washington, Oregon and other West Coast areas.

—Twenty-seven Red Cross disaster relief workers were being flown to Alaska from various sections of the United States. The organization also shipped 2,000 family emergency kits containing necessities of everyday life.

University of California seismologist Michael Clackford said the quake "was equal in magnitude to the most powerful quake ever recorded in North America."

WHERE DISASTER STRUCK

Map locates cities in Alaska, including Anchorage, which were hit by earthquake. It spawned tidal waves that spread death and destruction down the North American coast.

2,500 Leave Homes Around Golden Gate

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — More than 2,500 persons were evacuated from coastal towns north and south of the Golden Gate about Friday midnight as a precaution against a tidal wave stirred up by the Alaskan earthquake.

Tides caused little damage in the area outside the gate but did wreck boats inside the bay and wrenched loose piles supporting a 500-foot pier in San Rafael's Loch Lomond area.

• • • •

DEPUTIES went door to door to evacuate coastal dwellers at Stinson Beach, Bolinas and nearby communities north of the gate and at Pacifica to the south.

Yachts broke loose at St. Francis Yacht Club here.

At Sausalito the 66-year-old ferry Berkeley — now a market place — snapped its moorings but escaped serious damage.

The pier where the ferry is tied up was damaged.

The little harbor at Fisherman's wharf dropped its level four feet suddenly and as suddenly went up four feet. Boats bobbed crazily.

• • • •

THE COAST Guard said flotsam filled the Oakland Estuary where several small boats were set adrift.

More than 300 boats either were damaged or sunk at San Rafael's Loch Lomond yatcht harbor. Estimates of damage there to boats and piers ranged in excess of a half million dollars.

2 STRANDED IN BOAT

Wave Damage Here Primarily on the Nerves

By ANDY PARK

The tidal aftermath of Alaska's earthquake swept through the Pacific basin early Saturday after several hours of confused and conflicting reports threatened to cause panic in some areas of Southern California.

Continuing surges in the wake of the first wave from the quake caused minor damage throughout the Southland Saturday and left two men adrift most of the day in a 16-foot runabout in the wave-tossed channel between Santa Catalina Island and Long Beach.

John Reid, 26, of 7852 Santa Catalina Ave., Stanton; and Richard Gonzalez, 32, of 12649 Maryviane St., El Monte, tried to return from Avalon to Pacific Landing Saturday in their twin-engined boat but four-foot waves almost capsized them.

• • • •

THE BOAT, owned by Reid, was hit by a large wave 30 minutes out of Avalon and both engines were flooded.

"Water just began to pour over the side," Reid said. "There was nothing we could do."

From 10 a.m. until nearly 5 p.m., they drifted midway in the channel.

"We didn't see a single ship or plane all day," Gonzalez said. "We just kept trying to start the engines manually until I thought my arm would break."

• • • •

SHORTLY BEFORE 5, the Italian freighter Italmare, enroute to Long Beach from the Panama Canal, spotted the men waving an oar.

"They circled us once," Reid said, "then they pulled alongside, lifted us aboard with a harness and picked up our boat. Boy, was I glad to see them! That sea was really rough."

The Italmare was three hours late in docking at Berth 24 due to the delay in picking up the men and difficulties in navigating the harbor channel.

• • • •

A JAPANESE ship, the Brooklyn Maru, proceeding to the berth immediately in front of the Italmare, almost went on breakwater rocks when heavy outgoing tide threatened to overwhelm a tug towing the ship.

Earlier Saturday, frantic reports from Southland radio stations based on a Coast Guard report of 10-foot waves headed toward Long Beach and the Palos Verdes Peninsula caused homeowners to begin evacuating to higher ground.

One report urged those below 30 feet above sealevel on the peninsula to flee immediately to higher ground. Callers began flooding newspaper and police switchboards.

AT 12:30 A.M. the Coast Guard search and rescue unit in Long Beach announced that previous reports of 10-foot crests at Catalina Island were "erroneous" and that reports of 12-foot waves at Monterey heading toward the Southland were "based on faulty information."

Doug Bombard, harbormaster at the isthmus on Santa Catalina, told The I. P-T Saturday that the only surge felt there was "a four-foot variation in tide about 1 a.m."

The Monterey police department told The I. P-T at 12:45 a.m. that "a four-foot surge in tide has passed here without damage."

• • • •

HOWEVER, the Long Beach police department kept extra officers on duty until the surge had passed. Police departments in Seal Beach and along the Orange County coastline kept people off the beaches as a precautionary measure.

Father Tells How Waves Took 4 Tots

TACOMA, Wash. (AP)—Mr. and Mrs. Monte G. McKenzie lost the oldest of their five children in a fire eight months ago. Friday night, tidal waves from an Alaska earthquake left them childless.

The McKenzies were sleeping on the beach in a state park near Newport, Ore., when the giant waves hit.

In a telephone call to his pastor here, McKenzie said the first wave swept over the children and they began screaming. Then a second wave hit.

• • • •

"THERE was only a foot of air at the top of the lean-to we were in and we had to struggle to get to it," McKenzie said. "Logs were thrown at us like matchsticks."

When the wave receded, the McKenzies found their four children had been swept to sea. The body of Ricky, 6, was recovered. Still missing are Louie, 8, Bobby, 7, and Tammy, 3.

Their oldest, Susan, 9, died of burns last August when her clothing caught fire as she was trying to start a bonfire.

WORLD NEWS BRIEFS

Ditched Plane's SOS Pinpointed

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—The U.S. Coast Guard said Saturday search ships picked up a "weak SOS signal" in the Pacific Ocean where a DC4 business plane, carrying nine persons, crashed some 10 hours earlier on a Honolulu-to-Los Angeles flight.

The signal, apparently from a life raft, spurred hopes that the call was sent by survivors. The Coast Guard said it had a bearing and that ships and planes were rushing to the position.

It was the first message picked up since the aircraft sent a distress call at 6 a.m. PST saying it was 1,000 miles southwest of here and "there's a bad fire in the Number Two engine . . . We might have to ditch."

"We don't know officially, but there doesn't appear to be any doubt that the plane went down into the sea," a Coast Guard spokesman said. "As far as we're concerned, it ditched, in cloudy weather and rough seas."

Pilot of the plane was identified as Harry Baker, 60, of Fallon, Nev., pilot for Facilities Management Corp. headquartered in Hawthorne, Calif.

Mrs. Kennedy Advances in Ski School

STOWE, Vt. (AP)—Mrs. John F. Kennedy, widow of the President, advanced to a more difficult intermediate trail Saturday in her second day on skis and Caroline was joined by 3-year-old John Jr. on a beginners' slope.

MRS. KENNEDY

"It was perfectly wonderful," the former First Lady said, her face rosy from the crisp weather, as she left the steeper slope at Spruce Peak.

Mrs. Kennedy had received her first ski lesson Friday.

Caroline, 6, and "John John," as his father, the late President was fond of calling him, spent Saturday on a beginners' slope nearby.

The former First Family is spending several days here in northern Vermont. Also here with their children are Atty. Gen. and Mrs. Robert F. Kennedy, Sen. and Mrs. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., and Mrs. Eunice Shriver, wife of Peace Corps director Sargent Shriver.

LBJ Names 4 Women to High Posts

JOHNSON CITY, Tex. (AP)—President Johnson Saturday named four more women to top government posts paying up to $22,500 and announced he expects to name many more.

For the first time, a woman was placed on the Atomic Energy Commission and on the Export-Import Bank. Mrs. Mary Ingraham Bunting, 53, president of Radcliffe College got the $22,500 post on the AEC.

Miss Marguerite Jay Tibbets, about 45, a State Department Foreign Service officer, will be ambassador to a country not yet disclosed.

The Republican vacancy on the Export-Import Bank, a $20,000-a-year post went to Mrs. Elizabeth S. May, 56, dean of Wheaton College in Norton, Mass.

Mrs. Lee Walsh, longtime Washington newspaper reporter and woman's editor of the Washington Evening Star, has been named deputy assistant secretary of state for evaluations.

Johnson also put a woman on a new commission to study Puerto Rican statehood, commonwealth and independence. She is Mrs. Patricia R. Harris, 45, assistant professor of law at Howard University in Washington. She will receive $100 a day when on the job. A Negro, she is also a member of the President's commission on the status of women.

65 Pennsylvania 'Sitters' Jailed

CHESTER, Pa. (AP)—About 65 civil-rights demonstrators who resisted police trying to break up a sitdown in the heart of the city's business district were hauled off to jail Saturday. At least six were injured and treated at hospitals. One policeman was hurt.

The demonstrations—there were three Saturday—were parts of a series promised throughout the Easter weekend by the Chester Committee for Freedom Now, protesting alleged defacto segregation in Chester schools.

Tear Gas Halts NAACP Disorder

WARRENTON, N.C. (UPI)—Police used tear gas Saturday to break up a crowd of singing, yelling demonstrators here. Seventy were arrested.

Robert Blow, state assistant youth adviser for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People said demonstrations would continue and that a mass meeting would be held today.

27 Integrators Arrested in Florida

ST. AUGUSTINE, Fla. (AP)—Police arrested 27 integration demonstrators, many of them college students from New England, at three downtown lunch counters Saturday as the focus on racial problems in Florida moved south.

However, in Jacksonville, the biracial committee formed in the midst of the violence earlier in the week issued its first report, giving priority to seeking the voluntary integration of "all establishments serving the public."

German Measles Called Epidemic

ATLANTA (AP)—An outbreak of German measles, hazardous to the offspring of women who contract it during pregnancy, apparently has reached epidemic proportions in the United States.

The Communicable Disease Center of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare says the disease, known as Rubella, has begun spreading into the South and West.

Drug Firms Hiding Tester Fee Details

WASHINGTON (AP)—Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, D-Minn., said Saturday more than 15 drug manufacturing firms are concealing from the government all details of payments to doctors who test the companies' products.

Humphrey said disclosure of the size of the fees and the basis of paymenis could shed important light on whether the tests are objective.

The senator cited testimony in his investigation of the drug industry that some tests of drugs for safety and effectiveness have been fraudulent. But he emphasized that the testimony showed "the overwhelming mass of testers are absolutely honest."

Witnesses before the Senate government operations subcommittee also have told of some drugs inadequately tested before release on the market and found later to have dangerous side-effects fatal in some instances, crippling in others.

Humphrey's remarks were in a statement which accompanied the release of 1,000 pages of testimony and exhibits received in a continuing inquiry into drug industry practices.

Humphrey said the Food and Drug Administration apparently is powerless to compel disclosure of any information about testers' fees.

THE WORD IS HANDED DOWN TO THE YOUNG
The hands of 93-year-old Daisy Hihn, 544 Cedar Ave., mark the words in the Bible for 4-year-old Rene Omo. Both are members of the First Baptist Church, 1000 Pine Ave. Rene clasps her listening hands at the words in John: "Jesus said to her, 'Woman why are you weeping? Whom do you seek?'"

Joy Reigns as Christ Is Risen

land W. Faulk, 11th Naval District chief chaplain, deliver the message. Special music was to be provided by the Long Beach Municipal Band and Salvation Army Songsters.

Elsewhere in Long Beach, 14 Masonic Lodges are cooperating in a joint Easter Sunrise service in Monte Vista Temple, Orange Avenue and Market Street, at 6. Breakfast following the service will be served by the Lakewood DeMolay chapter.

Across the world in Vatican City, the bells of the Eternal City burst into joyous song at the stroke of midnight.

A gentle rain fell as tens of thousands of Romans and pilgrims gathered for Easter vigil services in which the church marks the end of the Lenten period of mourning and the Resurrection of Christ.

• • • •

FIRES WERE kindled in the churches, candles and flowers were placed on altars stripped bare of adornments since Good Friday, and as priests recited the "Gloria in Excelsis" (Glory in the Highest) at midnight, bells sounded to end three days of silence.

Pope Paul VI did not take part in any public Easter vigil service. Sources said he passed the first moments of Easter Sunday in prayer and meditation within the Apostolic Palace.

The pontiff spent Holy Saturday praying and preparing for his Easter message of peace and Christian unity. He was expected to appeal for an end to persecution of the church behind the iron curtain.

• • • • •

FRIDAY NIGHT the Pope, who carried a wooden cross in a Good Friday ceremony among the ruins of ancient Rome, blessed a torchlight procession of taxi drivers in St. Peter's Square.

An estimated 500 cabbies, who drove across Rome in procession to the Vatican, greeted the pontiff with a blast of their horns when he appeared in the window of his study. The Pope thanked them for "the music" of their horns and said he would pray for their safety.

Within the ancient walled city of Jerusalem, church bells pealed triumphantly as Jews and Christians celebrated a weekend of Holy Land joy and thanksgiving.

• • • •

BELLS SILENT since Holy Thursday rang first from the Church of the Holy Sepulchre — believed the place of Christ's entombment — when clocks struck midnight in the chilly Easter morning.

Jews celebrated the anniversary of their deliverance from the bondage of Egyptian slavemasters. In a rare coincidence of the calendar, the Easter and Passover seasons occur simultaneously this year.

An estimated 5,000 pilgrims filled the hotels and most convents of the Jordanian side of the divided city, many drawn by Pope Paul's historic visit to the Holy Land last January.

• • • •

ORTHODOX JEWS marked the beginning of Passover with traditional seder ceremonies, recounting the Old Testament exodus from Egypt to the Promised Land led by Moses.

For thousands of Christians who flocked to the places where Christianity was born almost 2,000 years ago, Holy Saturday dawned bright and clear. Hundreds of the faithful prepared for the Easter celebration by attending services at the Church of the Holy Sepulchre.

The services began with the blessing of the fire at the Stone of Unction and concluded with a Pontifical High Mass before the marble alabaster chapel marking Christ's tomb in the rotunda of the basilica.

Oil-Field Unitizing Program Continues

By GEORGE WEEKS

Regardless of tideland-fund controversies, the city of Long Beach will go ahead this week with a long-planned expansion of unitization in the harbor waterfront district and adjacent uplands.

After repeated delays, the State Lands Commission has approved the Unit V unitization agreement. Participating interests — the city and numerous private oil producers —are expected to sign this week, completing the formalities.

The new unit is the last in a series launched in 1961 when agreements were executed for Units II and III and for Unit IV. It will bring repressuring, through water injections, to all remaining oil-developed tidelands areas not yet given the antisinkage treatment.

• • • •

IT ALSO IS estimated to increase the city-state share of tideland-oil income by $15 millions and to add $4 million to upland oil revenue available for bond redemption and interest. The current rate of 32,000 barrels of water injected daily will be increased ultimately to 124,000 barrels.

Encompassed in the unit is a 1,500 acre subsurface area extending from the most southerly offshore production to as far north as Pacific Coast Highway and from the Los Angeles Flood Control Channel to Santa Fe Avenue.

Only the Ranger Zone — most productive of the seven oil-bearing strata in the Wilmington Field—is included in the new agreement. However, the city already controls the five lower zones and it will be able to inject also in the Tar Zone as a result of consent agreements obtained from minor producers.

New wells are to be drilled in connection with the unit operation from a city-owned site north of Anaheim Street and west of the channel. In some of the northerly reaches of the unit area, this will be the first water-flooding.

• • • •

THE LANDS Commission accepted the agreement after the city inserted a clause specifying that nothing in the pact would affect either the city or state rights in the eventual determination of the tideland-upland boundary.

Producers in the area number more than 50. The larger private producers include Socony Mobil, Standard, Superior, Humble and Richfield. The city will operate the unit for the tidelands and Socony Mobil for the uplands.

City Atty. Leonard Putnam and Deputy City Atty. Harold Lingle won the commission's consent to the program.

Jerrie Hops to Morocco, Joan Balked

CASABLANCA, Morocco (AP)—Mrs. Jerrie Mock, 38-year-old flier from Columbus, Ohio, arrived Saturday aboard her single-engine plane, in which she hopes to travel around the world. This leg brought her from Santa Maria in the Azores.

She landed after a six-hour flight and was met at Casablanca Airport by U.S. Consul General James F. Green and other officials.

Another woman hoping to fly around the world was stalled in Paramaribo, Surinam, by plane trouble. Experts there expressed doubt Mrs. Joan Merriam of Long Beach, Calif., would be able to get away in her twin-engine Piper Apache for Natal, Brazil, before Tuesday.

Legislators Try Again on Monday

SACRAMENTO (AP)—With 27 days of meetings behind it, the 1964 legislature resumes Monday with none of its major issues resolved.

Failure to agree on the biggest bill of them all—Gov. Brown's $3.67-billion budget measure — forced the lawmakers to end their 30-day budget session without a budget Thursday, three days before mandatory adjournment at midnight Easter Sunday.

The governor summoned them back in special session for another try at enacting the big spending program. At the same time, the legislature will try to settle these questions:

School Finance—A host of school financing measures are awaiting action, but there's no indication of what the legislature will decide.

Assemby Speaker Jesse M. Unruh's bill to pump another $75 million in state aid into the public school system—while attempting to reduce districts from 1,583 to 360—has been approved by the Assembly Education Committee. But it is awaiting Assembly Ways and Means Committee approval.

Tidelands — A compromise to settle the dispute between the state and the City of Long Beach over tidelands oil revenue still is before the Assembly Ways and Means Committee.

Bonds — This is the issue that has stymied the legislature.

Brown wants all of his November ballot to insure a $770 million in bond issues on the fall vote on the anti-Rumford Housing act initiative and an initiative setting up a private lottery. Brown opposes both initiatives and wants time to campaign against them.

Assembly Republicans insist that $620 million in state school construction and state building bonds go on the June primary ballot. Unless the school bonds are voted on in the spring, they say, construction funds will run out. Their refusal to vote for the budget until they get their way has stopped the Democrats.

Pole Airmen Dynamite Ice

CHRISTENING the "Long Beach Jr.," second model of the atomic cruiser Long Beach, is Sue Siefarth, Miss Seattle Boat Show of 1964 with Cdr. J. R. Korein, officer in charge of the Navy Recruiting Station at Seattle, standing by. The model is at Seattle.

'LONG BEACH JR.'

Second Model of A-Cruiser Built

A second model of the USS Long Beach—this one christened Long Beach Jr.—has been placed on active duty at the Navy Recruiting Station in Seattle.

The 21-foot-long model will be used throughout the Northwest "to acquaint our civilian friends with the Navy's role in the defense of our country," Cmdr. J. R. Korbein, officer in charge, told Long Beach Mayor Edwin W. Wade.

MANUFACTURED by personnel attached to the recruiting station, the model has such mechanized details as operating screws, rudders, radar antenna, sector-searching forward Terrier missiles, running lights and a firing Talos missile.

The Talos is propelled 40 feet up a wire by a compressed air charge.

• • • •

CMDR. KORBEIN said that the decision to build the model was influence by the fact that the USS Long Beach is one of the most advanced ships in the U.S. Navy.

The original model of the atomic cruiser, produced by the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Co., is on display in the Long Beach Arena.

Jr. Concert Band Annual Banquet April 11

Memebers of Marvin Marker's Long Beach Junior Concert Band will be honored at the annual "Banquet of Champions," April 11 in the Lafayette Hotel.

Don G. Gill, executive director of the All-Western Band Review, will be master of ceremonies for the group's 12th anniversary celebration. Mayor Edwin Wade will present the trophy for outstanding service and various other awards will be presented to members of the 176 musician-band.

CSLB Variety Show April 4, 5 Features Foreign Student Acts

The second annual International Variety Show, sponsored by the International Club of California State, Long Beach, will be presented next month in the college's Little Theater.

Performances will be given at 8 p.m. Saturday, and at 2 p.m. April 5.

About 20 countries will be represented in the show's acts presented by foreign students. Television and motion picture personality Keith Andes will serve as master of ceremonies for the second year.

• • • •

PROCEEDS will be used to supply library materials for a Latin America university, according to Dr. Paul Opstad, foreign students adviser to the college. The World University Service, international student-to-student aid organization, will administer the funds.

Proceeds from last year's production were given to WUS and to Ira Gwin, returning Peace Corps member, for a scholarship to continue his studies at CSLB.

Sergeant Shriver, Peace Corps director, personally commended the International Club, describing the scholarship as the first of its type from a student group.

• • • •

STUDENTS from International clubs at Orange Coast College and UCLA also will perform.

Among the nations represented will be Japan, Cambodia, the Philppines, various Latin American countries and Mexico.

10,000 at Hawkeye Picnic Here Told Old Home State's Growth

Ten thousand expatriate Iowans heard Saturday their native state is doing its best to keep today's younger generation from following them westward.

Predicting a bright future for the Hawkeye State was U. S. Sen. Jack R. Miller of Sioux City. He was keynote speaker at the Iowa Association of Southern California's 64th annual midwinter picnic, held this year in Recreation Park.

Distinguished Iowan awards were presented to Joseph Crail, president of Coast Federal Savings and Loan Assn., and William Larrabee III, vice president of the Northrop Corp. They were honored for "contributions to the welfare and advancement of their native and adopted states."

* * * *

REPUBLICAN Miller said he disagrees with Iowa's predicted nine-percent population growth between now and 1975. He figures it will be closer to the national average —25 percent.

"Iowa farm and business leaders, educators, industrialists and government officials are joined together . . . to see to it that our state shares fairly in America's economic growth so that greater job opportunities will be available for our high school and college graduates," the senator said.

"We are bending every effort to encourage sound expansion of existing businesses and the establishment of new business in Iowa so that more of our young people can look forward to building their future in Iowa instead of in the Southwest and Far West."

Iowa's "wholesome, open living conditions" will become an increasingly decisive factor in the state's growth as people "grow tired of the traffic and crowded conditions in other parts of the country," Miller said.

He told the ex-Hawkeyes of Iowa's agricultural and industrial gains, of new plants and products.

"But most important," he added, "is the inherent strength of the people of Iowa, with their dedication to sound economic and moral principles."

* * * *

HE DIDN'T find fault with the folks who have moved to California, though. In the senator's view, that was due to their sturdy Iowa principles.

"Iowans do not believe in something for nothing. If jobs are hard to come by, they don't just sit and wait for relief, as too often is the case in some other states. They move elsewhere to find jobs."

As a result, Iowa's unemployment rate last year was two percent, Miller said, far below the national average.

Sen. Miller sees a bright future for Iowa. He hopes it's bright enough to halt the migration to California.

MacArthur's Illness Serious but He's Better

WASHINGTON (AP) — Gen. Douglas MacArthur continues to make satisfactory progress from major surgery, Walter Reed Army Hospital said Saturday.

The only bulletin issued during the day said the five-star general rested well during the night and that:

"The pneumonitis of the right lung continues to subside. His general progress continues satisfactory, although he remains in a serious condition."

Pneumonitis is an inflammation of the lung. It developed in midweek. MacArthur was operated on Monday for internal bleeding which developed after an earlier gallbladder operation.

Martell to Direct Anti-Sub Warfare

JOHNSON CITY, Tex. (AP) —President Johnson Saturday assigned Vice Adm. Charles B. Martell to a newly-created post as director of the nation's anti-submarine warfare programs.

The 54-year-old admiral, now commander of the 2nd Fleet, will supervise and coordinate all anti-submarine warfare planning.

COLLEGE THINKS IT'S FUN

H (for Hamburgers) Hour Comes Monday

The much-ballyhooed Hamburger Rebellion on the campus of California State College at Long Beach will come off as scheduled Monday morning, leaders of the revolt said Saturday.

To many of the hundreds of students expected to picket the cafeteria in protest of food prices and quality, the picketing is campus fun with a serious and good cause behind it. To the college administration, the picketing is campus fun. Period.

Jerry Tubbs, manager of the Forty-Niner Shops (the campus book store and the embattled cafeteria) passed the word that the store will sell "picket kits" with which to protest the colleege eatery. The kits, at $4 each, will contain 12 blank placards and felt pens in various colors. He expects a brisk sale.

BUT THE PICKETERS, called the Committee to Sack Saga (the cafeteria food service is supplied by Saga Food Service, Inc.) object to treatment of their cause as a big farce. Ruben Lopez, chairman of the Sack Saga group, said: "Behind what might appear to the college to be 'Cute Campus Capers' is a serious problem."

And the committee doesn't need to buy the book store's picket kits, either. It has already made its own signs, that say things like "We Ate Here—Color Us Sick," and "Eat at Bob's" (or Hody's or Hoff's, nearby restaurants.)

Only one small victory has been won by the committee so far, when the cafeteria dropped a charge of 2 cents for little cuplets of ketchup. But ketchup is not the whole answer, no matter how freely it flows, and the Hamburger Rebellion is under way.

AMONG SNOWY PINES, A GREEN-AND-WHITE PLANE

Nature's Beauty Shrouds 3 Violent Deaths

The sky, even more than the sea,
Is terribly unforgiving of the Slightest mistake.
—Old Air Force saying.

By GEORGE ROBESON

When you saw it, you understood why it took a week to find it, why it was a hopeless search until the snow melted.

The wreckage of the green-and-white plane had been hidden in rugged green-and-white terrain all that time. Civil Air Patrol search planes had criss-crossed a 2,600-mile area looking for this light Navion that vanished March 21 with three Long Beach area men aboard.

The wreckage was sighted Friday by Jim Hanson, 51, of 3162 Cedar Ave., who had joined the CAP search the day before. Near it were the bodies of Jim Lantz, 20, of 5827 Gossamer St.; L. Dean Book, 43, of 5809 Gossamer St.; and Albert F. Schlenz, 46, of 4733 Pixie St., Lakewood, the pilot.

Saturday morning I circled over the wild Agua Tibea mountain country north of Cleveland National Forest with two pilots of Long Beach CAP Group 7—Major D. G. Ruggs, of 3593 Mulford Ave., Lynwood, and Capt. Al Solding, of 1901 Josie Ave.

Beneath us, at the scene, the dead plane lay like a crumpled, discarded tin can in a mountainside cut, all but obscured by tall evergeens at the 4,100-foot level. Until Friday, the slope had been patched with snow, creating total camouflage for a green-and-white plane.

Dipping past the top of the ridge, 200 feet above the wrecked fuselage, we knew something of the last moments of the plane and its three occupants. A twisted wing lay at the ridge-top. The plane, for a reason that may never be known, had lost altitude crossing the high, up-and-down country, dipped a wing and tore it off. Then the crumpled plane had tumbled crazily down a heavily-wooded slope.

Then there was quiet. The three men were dead. Snow began to fall from a gloomy overcast. It would be six days before that snow would melt to show a search pilot a glimpse of foreign white in the green trees.

Our single-engine Cessna bobbed now and then in the mountain air currents.

"You have to know what you're doing when you're this close to the trees," said Maj. Ruggs. "A downdraft can kill you. With experience, you learn to judge the winds."

THE WEEK IN REVIEW

LBJ Seeks Wage-Price Stability, Rights

By HARRY SHARPE
By United Press International

President Johnson made urgent pleas last week for wage-price stability, civil rights for all, and Social Security-type medical care for the aged.

All are election-year issues.

* * * *

HIS FIRST appeal was addressed to the United Auto Workers (UAW) convention at Atlantic City, N.J. The AFL-CIO union opens contract talks July 1 with General Motors, Ford and Chrysler, and will demand a big wage hike.

The President said he hoped responsibility would prevail on both sides of the bargaining table to avert an inflamatory wage-price spiral that could choke off vital economic expansion.

In Detroit, Walter W. Heller, chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers, was simultaneously urging the industry not to "sideswipe the promise of the economy" with a wage-price fight.

Union President Walter P. Reuther has declared the big three are enjoying record profits and hence can afford pay increases without raising their prices.

AFL-CIO Preident George Meany backed Reuther with a challenge of Johnson's wage-price guidelines which tie wage raises to increased production.

The President directed his civil rights appeal to Southern Baptist leaders in a speech assailing "preachers and teachers," who are sowing "dissention and distrust."

* * * *

"THE MOST critical challenge we face today," he said, "is the struggle to free men—free them from the bondage of discrimination and prejudice."

Even as he spoke the Senate geared for a prolonged Southern filibuster starting Monday against the House-passed racial rights bill. Negro leader Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., warned that Negroes nationwide would "take direct action" if the filibuster jeopardizes the measure.

Jacksonville, Fla. was the scene of bloody racial violence which subsided only after a bi-racial committee was named to settle differences.

The President pledged to another AFL-CIO meeting that he would press for a passage of medical care for the aged this year. He said his war against poverty would be fought on many fields "and one of these is medical aid for the elderly." He added: "We are not going to let older folks fight high medical expenses in their late years, or alone. We are going to help them."

* * * *

A MAJOR earthquake hit a wide area of Alaska late Friday. The heaviest damage and loss of life was in Anchorage. Valdez, Seward and other small communities also were hit. A tidal wave swept into Kodiak. Tidal waves—caused by the earthquake—also hit various areas along the Pacific Coast.

The Soviet Union finally bowed to White House pressure and released the last two of three American fliers shot down 18 days ago over Red East Germany after straying off their course. The third flier, badly injured, was freed earlier.

Secretary of State Dean Rusk had warned Moscow that friendly Russo-American relations were at stake. The State Department sharply denied Russian charges that the fliers were on an espionage mission.

* * * *

THE RUSSIANS also released from an East German prison Miss Gabriele Hammerstein, 40-year-old New York singer who was jailed two years ago on still undisclosed charges. The red-haired Wagnerian soprano had been sentenced to six years. Her family had appealed for clemency.

Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara revealed that South Viet Nam's strategic air and ground forces are being expanded in a stepped-up war against North Viet Nam Communist guerillas.

He foresaw a long and costly struggle and did not rule out the possiblity that the conflict would be carried to Red strongholds. South Viet Nam is Red China's coveted gateway to rich Malaysia.

Sen. J. William Fulbright, D-Ark., chairman of the powerful Senate Foreign Relations Committee, jolted the administration with demands for "a candid re-evaluation" of U.S. policy toward the Communist world, especially Fidel Castro's Cuba. He also called for re-negotiation of the Panama Canal treaty which has split the U.S. and Panama.

Republicans charged him with appeasement and also suggested he was floating trial balloons for the President. Fulbright countered that if the GOP wants to make foreign policy a campaign issue "let's talk about it and try to get some accurate assessments."

The White House said Fulbright "spoke for himself."

* * * *

SECRETARY of State Rusk took direct issue with Fulbright on Cuba. He said bluntly that "Castro is a threat to this hemisphere" and will remain so as long as he is under military obligation to Russia and pursues a policy of hostility to his neighbors. But he said he "fully agreed" with a number of other things Fulbright said and conceded that "we are in a period of change."

Among other things, the senator suggested the U.S. should "abandon the myth that trade with Communist countries is a pact with the devil . . . our allies trade with them whether we like it or not."

On other news fronts, the President and Mrs. Johnson flew to their Texas ranch to spend Easter. Their daughters stayed in Washington.

Defense Secretary McNamara warned Congress that Johnson's $1 billion request for foreign military aid was $400 million short of the safety margin, but that the President didn't ask for more because he felt that Congress wouldn't vote a larger sum.

French President Charles de Gaulle, whose relations with Washington continue strained, was reported in line for another invitation from Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev to visit Moscow.

FOREIGN PRESS VIEW

U.S. Foreign Policy Criticized

By United Press International

European newspaper editions last week criticized U.S. foreign policy, the administration and new outbreaks of violence on the racial front. But the Supreme Court came in for praise.

"No one can say the Supreme Court of the United States lacks courage," the Manchester, England, Guardian said.

The Guardian praised the court's decision that a Cuban decree nationalizing American sugar interests was the act of a sovereign state and could not be challenged in the American courts.

"The proper forum for a decision on the legality of such seizures is the international court at The Hague," the Guardian said. "The Supreme Court has made a contribution to the improvement of relations between the two countries."

In Vienna the Socialist Arbeiter-Zeitung said, "It must be feared the spirit and dynamism of the Kennedy era will be gradually lost under the present administration. The most alarming symptom of such is that the best assistants in the White House are quitting one after another."

In Paris the newspaper Combat said the racial riots in Jacksonville "are full of gloomy perspectives at a time when the . . . Senate is getting ready to debate the bill to strengthen the civil rights of the Negroes."

The East Berlin Communist newspaper Berliner Zeitung said: "In Jacksonville the policy was carried out that the Republican (Sen. Barry) Goldwater, the political leader of all Fascist forces in the U.S.A., would like to extend to the whole nation. He also would like to extend the policy to Cuba, the other Socialist states and to all states that do not dance to the American tune."

In West Germany, the Hamburg newspaper Die Welt said: "It would be wrong to assert that the Americans are showing no more distrust toward the Germans . . . the contrary is the case. Very often those who are talking in enthusiastic words about Germany are raising the question 'May one trust the Germans and Germany?'"

Around the world in Asia, the Korea Republic commented on the White House statement of American policy in Viet Nam. It said American policy is to maintain the status quo with calls on the South Vietnamese people for more efficiency in fighting Viet Cong with stronger American support.

"We welcome the indications by (President) Johnson that the U.S. is opposed to both neutralization and running the risk of expanding the war," the newspaper said. "The present strategy is, after all, not completely hopeless."

In Hong Kong, the New Life Evening Post said that it was high time for the United States to make a thorough review of its foreign aid program.

The independent Chinese-language paper said in an editorial that the United States has spent more than $10 billion in the past 20 years on foreign aid in about 100 countries.

However, American aid in the Far East and Southeast Asia brought only "catastrophe" to the countries that received it, except Japan, the editorial said.

"What is the reason for the failure in the foreign aid field then?" the newspaper asked. "It is high time for the United States to make a thorough review."

The Seoul Shimoon newspaper said that South Korea cannot get by without some sort of foreign aid.

"Our view is that the Korean economy still depends largely upon U.S. aid and even if Korea-Japan economic ties are strengthened, it is hardly expected that economic ties will bring as much help to Korea as the U.S. aid has," the newspaper said.

Writer Dies

OAKLAND (AP) — Robert Ormond Case, once a prolific writer of fiction and articles on national affairs, died here Friday.

His widow, three daughters and a son survive.

Farrell Sets High California Standard

One thing you'll notice about Standard life underwriters—they manage to keep busy. Joe Farrell of Long Beach helped organize and for the past five years has been director of the St. Joseph "Gay 90's Review," an annual event that has earned thousands of dollars for church youth activities.

Joe serves his friends and neighbors in another way, as a life underwriter for the Standard Insurance Long Beach Agency. The enthusiasm and energy he puts into that job has just earned him the rating of top man of the month among all of Standard's California representatives.

Although Joe Farrell is a mighty busy insurance man, you may be sure he'll do his part to make the next "Gay 90's Review" another success. He'll find time to bring you a higher Standard of insurance, too. Call Joe, any time.

Beach Combing

With Malcolm Epley

In accordance with an old custom, Easter Morning's Beach Combing becomes the Easter story, as told by St. Matthew. Nothing more can be said here, except to wish all readers a Happy Easter and an inspirational dividend from contemplation of the significance of the day.

FROM ST. MATTHEW 28

IN THE end of the sabbath, as it began to dawn toward the first day of the week, came Mary Magdalene and the other Mary to see the sepulchre. And behold, there was a great earthquake; for the angel of the Lord descended from heaven, and came in and rolled back the stone from the door, and sat upon it.

His countenance was like lightning, and his raiment white as snow; And for fear of him the keepers did shake, and became as dead men.

* * * *

AND the angel answered and said unto the women, Fear not ye: for I know that ye seek Jesus, which was crucified.

He is not here: for He is risen, as He said. Come see the place where the Lord lay. And go quickly, and tell His disciples that He is risen from the dead; and behold, He goeth before you into Galilee; there shall ye see Him: Lo, I have told you. And they departed quickly from the sepulchre with fear and great joy; and did run to bring his disciples word.

And as they went to tell his disciples, behold, Jesus met them, saying, All hail. And they came and held Him by the feet, and worshipped Him. Then said Jesus unto them, Be not afraid: go tell my brethren that they go into Galilee, and there shall they see me.

* * * *

NOW when they were going, behold, some of the watch came into the city, and shewed unto the chief priests all the things that were done.

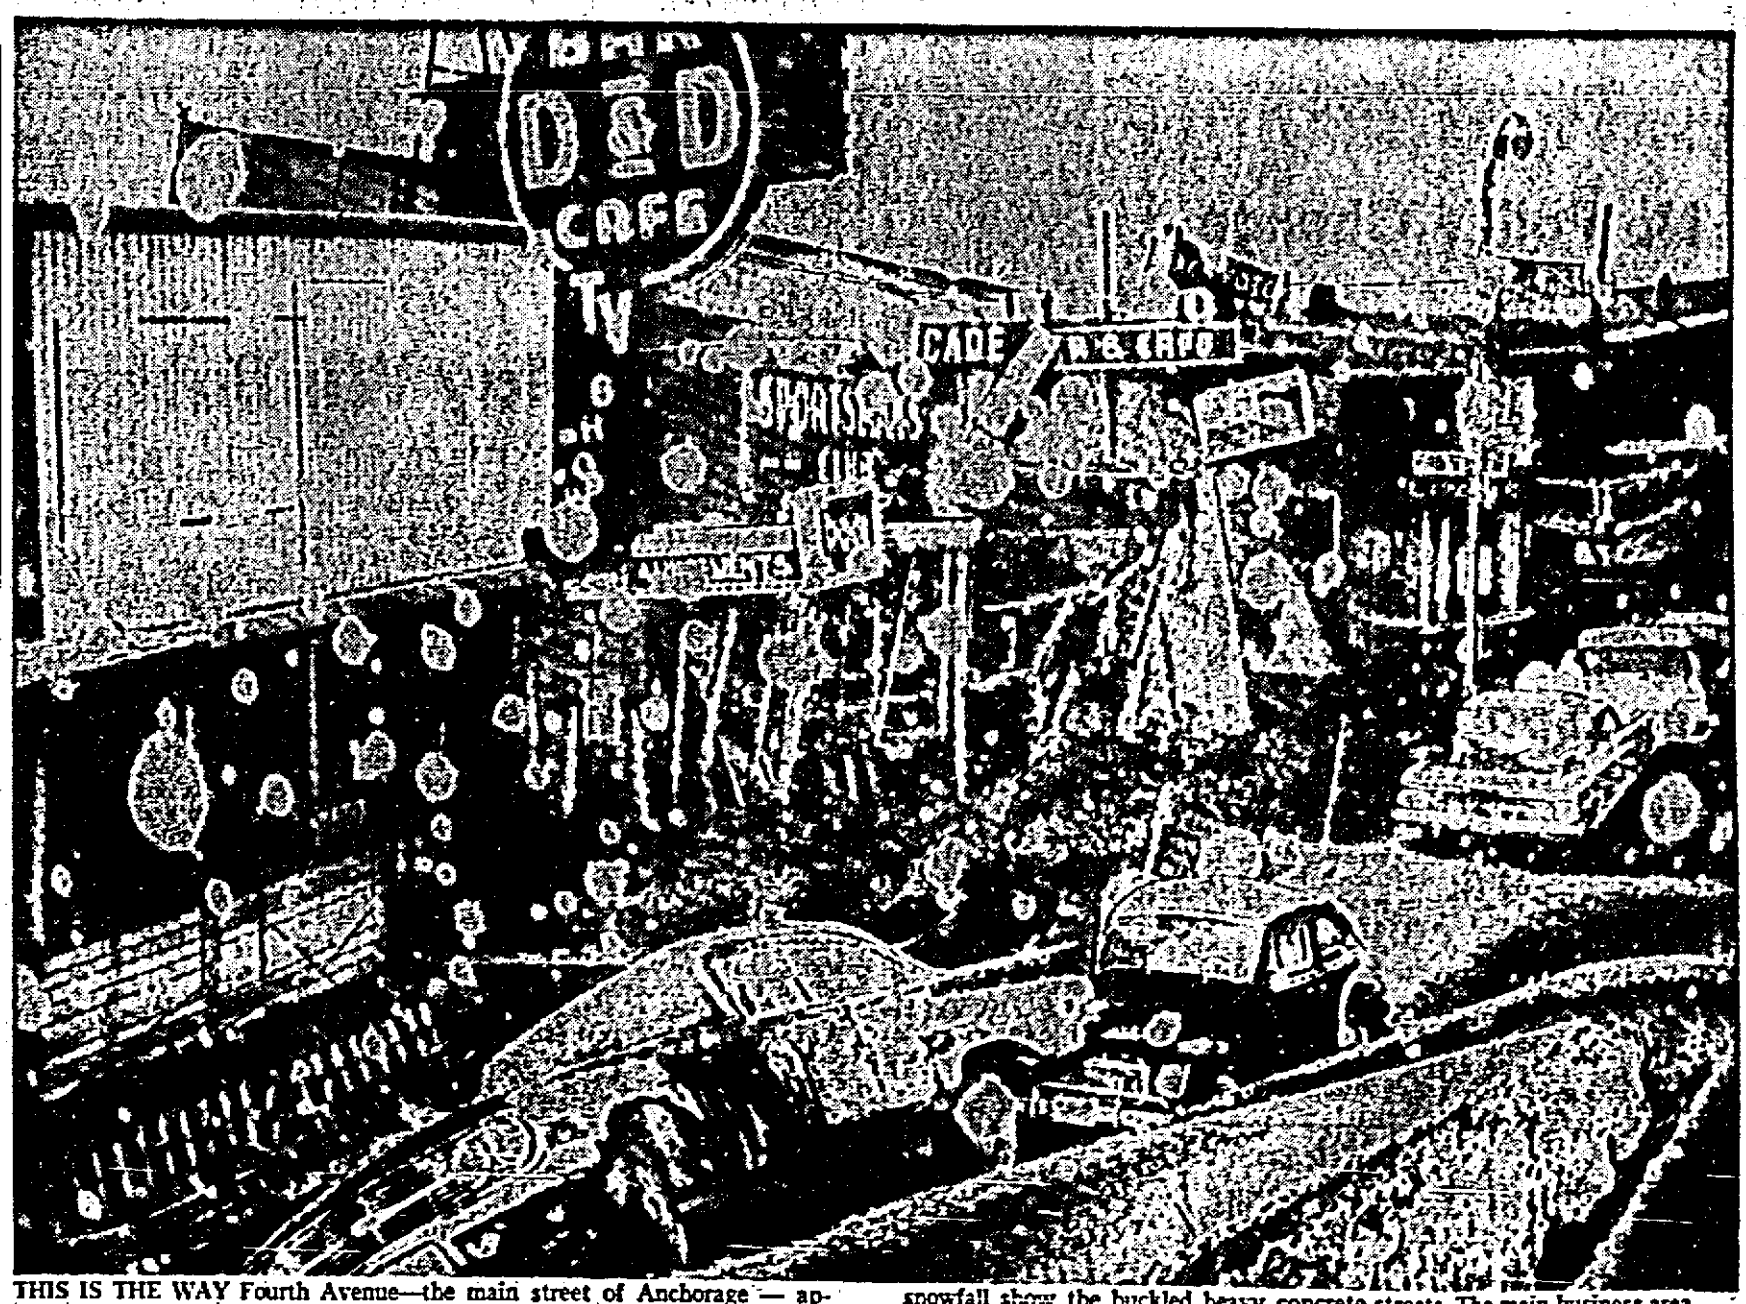

And when they were assembled with the elders, and had taken counsel, they gave large money unto the soldiers. Saying, Say ye, His disciples came by night, and stole Him away while we slept. And if this come to the governor's ears, we will persuade him, and secure you. So they took the money, and did as they were taught: and this saying is commonly reported among the Jews until this day.

* * * *

THEN the eleven disciples went away into Galilee, into a mountain where Jesus had appointed them. And when they saw Him, they worshipped Him, but some doubted. And Jesus came and spake unto them, saying, All Power is given unto Me in heaven and in earth.

Go, ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost;

Teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you; and lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world. Amen."

THIS IS THE WAY Fourth Avenue—the main street of Anchorage — appeared shortly after a major earthquake struck Friday. Films taken during snowfall show the buckled heavy concrete streets. The main business area was closed off and troops patrolled district to prevent looting.

Civil Rights Act

BECAUSE THEY HAD the courage to support the U.S. Constitution and give their approval to the Civil Rights Act, Congressman Craig Hosmer and other members of the House of Representatives are receiving a barrage of hate mail from racial extremists.

To illustrate how far the extremists have gone off the deep end in their fanaticism, some of the letters accuse Hosmer, a moderate Republican, of being un-American and pro-Communist! Yet, all he did was cast his ballot in favor of time-honored American principles which are perpetual planks in the platforms of both the Republican and the Democratic parties.

The Civil Rights Act is not a perfect document, and some amendments may be justified. It is not a cure-all, and in some of its details it seems to infringe on one man's freedom in order to preserve another man's rights. Time and usage will expose weaknesses and indicate necessary changes. By and large, however, the measure is a step forward in the campaign to protect and promote the rights of a group of citizens who have suffered from discrimination.

In some sections of this country, Negroes seeking to register to vote have been given difficult tests —tests not given to white applicants—designed to disqualify them. The Civil Rights Act aims at restoring to these Negro citizens the right to vote, which is a foundational stone of the Constitution and of the democratic process.

Similarly, the bill is designed to guarantee citizens of all races, colors, and religions equal access to public accommodations, and to assure a Negro youngster equal opportunity when he goes looking for a job.

True, these rights are covered in one place or another in the U.S. Constitution, but it has become clear that federal legislation is necessary to implement constitutional provisions in some of the backward areas of our society.

This is the mission of the Civil Rights Act. Congressmen who support that Act deserve the praise, not the censure, of constituents who believe in the Constitution and equal rights.

Pontoon Bridge

ONE OF THE WEAKEST points in the highway network of this area is the unwieldy pontoon bridge which spans the entrance channel in the harbor.

Having sharp dips, it is a traffic hazard. Raising periodically to allow ships to pass through, it causes nightmarish traffic jams.

Motorists who must use this route to Terminal Island will be happy to learn that their plight is not ignored. If anticipated financing remains available, construction could start next October.

This bridge will offer a better connection across the harbor area with the new Terminal Island-San Pedro Bridge. But this is not the only, and not even the major, reason for replacing the pontoon bridge.

The Terminal Island-San Pedro Bridge is crossed by an average of 8,500 cars a day, but the pontoon bridge is used by 16,000 to 18,000 vehiclees—most of them traveling to and from the naval facilities on Terminal Island.

Thus the construction, as soon as possible, of a span to replace the pontoon bridge is vital to national security as well as to general transportation in the area.

With these two factors in mind, city, harbor, and road officials must continue to press for the earliest possible erection of the new bridge.

No Policy Change

WHEN SEN. FULBRIGHT said early this week that Castro is a nuisance but not a threat to the nations of this hemisphere, speculation was heard that he might be setting the stage for a softer U.S. policy toward Communist Cuba.

Friday, however, Secretary of State Dean Rusk took sharp exception of Fulbright's statement. He said Cuba is a definite threat to other Latin American countries, and he added that the U.S. will continue its no-trade policy toward Cuba.

The speech by Fulbright must have been Fulbright's own idea; or if it was a straw in the wind, the administration discovered immediately the direction of American opinion on this subject.

British Socialist Says FDR Killed Socialism in America

WASHINGTON — The only man I know with eyebrows heavier than those of John L. Lewis is Albert Carthy, whom I met the other day in the airport in Trinidad, British West Indies. Mr. Carthy is secretary of the Socialist International, and his eyebrows stand out at least three inches as compared with only one inch for the former head of the United Mine Workers.

PEARSON

I met Mr. Carthy thanks to an institution which the Socialists theoretically believe in—namely the British government-owned BOAC airline which, while taking him and me to the inauguration of President Raul Leoni in Venezuela, ran off the runway in Trinidad.

The BOAC pilot turned too abruptly on the runway and one wheel went over the side. British government employes fussed and fumed, finally decided it would take them 12 hours to get the wheel back on the runway. Actually it took them 24 hours to get the plane in the air again.

I was convinced that free-enterprise American mechanics could have put a jack under the plane and slid it back on the runway within a couple of hours. However, since government operation didn't work that rapidily, since the President of Venezuela was to be inaugurated next morning, and since I was flying especially to Venezuela for that occasion, I chartered a special plane from Capt. "Reds" Cooper, the trip to Caracas and during subsequent inauguration festivities, I found him to be a very human, kindly gentleman despite his formidable eyebrows and formidable title.

• • • •

CARTHY has behind him 11 million dues-paying members and a total of 70 million membership, which consists of such men as Willy Brandt, the Mayor of Berlin and head of the Social Democratic party in West Germany; Giuseppe Saragat, Foreign Minister of Italy and head of the Social Democrats in that country; and Prime Minister Tage Erlanger of Sweden, who has led that country's elected government longer than any man in history.

Mr. Carthy is British and was formerly secretary to Lord Attlee, the Labor Prime Minister of England after the war. He is also close to Harold Wilson, who may well be the next Prime Minister of England; also represents the French Socialists, one of whom, Gaston Deferre, Mayor of Marseilles, was recently received by President Johnson and will run against President De Gaulle.

These Socialists, once considered the mortal enemies of Wall Street and of British big business, are now probably the most vigorous battlers against both European and Chinese communism. They are in power in the three Scandinavian countries, close to power in West Germany and England, and are part of the coalition government of Italy.

Mr. Carthy pointed out that three American cities had been under Socialist mayors for some years — Milwaukee, Reading, Pa., and Bridgeport, Conn. Roosevelt's New Deal killed the Socialist party in America, he observed, and added that the Eisenhower administration had not killed any of Roosevelt's so-called "socialistic" reforms.

He claimed that India "which you criticize for being socialistic" actually is no more socialistic than the United States. "You have just as many subsidies for business," Carthy said.

I disputed this. But when I got back to Washington, I looked up the official U. S. budget figures on subsidies and found that direct business subsidies for 1964 totaled $1,864,000,000, while the 1965 budget listed direct subsidies of $1,664,000,000. These take the form of payments to U. S. airlines, shipping lines; do not include indirect subsidies such as defense contracts which total around one billion annually for General Dynamics, Boeing, Lockheed, General Electric, and North American Aviation.

"In 1929, when I was secretary to Clement Attlee, I had occasion to help draft a platform of the British Labor party," said Carthy. "If at that time I had written the same platform which the Tory government accepted in 1959, I would have been thrown out as an extremist.

"Yet, in 1959, the British conservative government accepted nationalization of the railroads, socialized medicine, nationalization of the steel industry."

Mr. Carthy agreed with me, however, that British government operation of the BOAC airline was not efficient. He felt as I did that 12 hours to get a wheel back on the runway was too long.

• • • •

WHEN YOU look behind the scenes at that draft-Bob Kennedy movement in Wisconsin, you will find some interesting actors.

Leading man was Spiros Kallas, who organized the draft-Bobby movement and became its secretary. It so happens that Kallas is one of the founders of the Mortgage Guarantee Insurance Co., otherwise known as MAGIC—the same insurance company that figured prominently in the Bobby Baker case.

Survey in 'Typical' District Shows Anti-Rights Answers

TWO POLLS in a mid-Los Angeles County congressional district have given a fair tipoff on why proponents of the Rumford Act against discrimination in housing would rather see the matter decided in the November general election than in the June 2 primary in California.

At issue is the initiative, sponsored chiefly by the California Real Estate Association, which would kill the act.

HOUSER

Friends of the Rumford law have grave doubts about its survival chances. They feel its defeat would be a virtual certainty if the initiative comes on the June primary ballot when the voter turnout is much less than for the November general.

June favors the initiative in other ways. State Republican Chairman Caspar Weinberger tacitly acknowledged several months ago that the GOP would carry the main burden of an anti-Rumford vote. Since most of the zing of this year's primary resides in GOP decision making on its presidential candidate, the Republican vote stands to be bigger by far than the Democratic vote in June.

Rumford people also fear that antidiscrimination is now getting a lot of lip service that will dissolve into prejudice in the privacy of the voting booth.

CONGRESSMAN Del Clawson, the Republican who succeeded the late Democrat Clyde Doyle in the 23rd District, voted against the Civil Rights Bill in the House of Representatives. He read congressional colleagues results of an extensive poll in the 23rd which hardly left him any other course.

The poll also concurred with findings made by Democrat H. O. Van Petten, one of the candidates fighting for Clawson's seat this election.

Clawson told the House his 23rd is a multi-racial district in the center of Los Angeles County about equidistant from Los Angeles and Long Beach; its registration goes 65 to 35 per cent in favor of Democrats and its people "are a cross section of industrial America living in 13 incorporated cities ranging in size from a few hundred population in Vernon to about 50,000 in Downey."

More than 26,000 replied to questionnaires mailed to 102,000.

Clawson claimed his seven questionnaire questions were not worded to solicit predetermined replies. However, question No. 7 might not have been as innocent as he represents: "Should the government, state or national, regulate the sale of your home or personal property?" His response was 96.8 per cent saying No.

THE SURVEY showed 84.3 per cent opposed creation of a federal agency to supervise solution of racial disputes in local communities.

It was 84 per cent against any federal FEPC to outlaw job discrimination in private business.

And 76.6 per cent said the U.S. Attorney General should not have authority to file suit to desegregate local public schools and colleges.

On public accommodations, 74.4 per cent said public establishments should not be compelled to serve all persons regardless of race, color, religion or national origin.

In the 23rd District, 61.3 per cent opposed changes in laws to increase job opportunities for Negroes and to provide better education and job skills.

THE RESPONSE was even on the question of whether discrimination should be unlawful in any program or activity receiving federal funds.

Congressman Clawson's reading of the results was not one of any prejudice in his district. In Clawson's view, the survey showed merely a vigorous protest against "centralization of governmental power in Washington. In this proposed bill (Civil Rights) the right of local government to resolve local problems is placed in jeopardy."

If the 23rd does represent any kind of California crosssection, friends of the Rumford legislation would seem to be in for an overwhelming defeat.

Spanairds Killed Most Indians

EDITOR:

Regarding the editorial about the Indians: I think your writer should have done some research on the conquest of Mexico and Peru. He would find that more Indians were slaughtered and murdered in Mexico and Peru by the Spaniards than were killed in all of the years in the U.S. Also, that they destroyed a culture in Peru which has been the wonder of educators ever since. They killed the Incas for the gold and riches they could steal and only left the Indians of the jungle alone because there was nothing there for them to steal.

Your writer should learn that there was a difference between the Incas of the highlands of Peru with their highly developed culture and the Indians east of the Andes in the jungle. The wonderful stone work of the Incas, done hundreds of years ago without the aid of metal tools or mortar, has never been duplicated.

I would suggest that your writer get a book on the Incas of Peru or take a trip down there and see present day conditions as left by his wonderful dons.

'Mr. Ominous' Speaks Again

EDITOR:

Mr. Ominous has spoken again. Sen. Fulbright now says the economic blockade of Cuba is a failure and that we should resume diplomatic and trade relations with Castro.

What makes Sen. Fulbright's latest statement so ominous? It's because the views he expressed in the past always preceded a radical change in our government's policy to coincide with his views. We remember his famous memorandum that instituted the purge of anti-communism from the military. We remember his startling attack upon the Constitution of the United States when he said it was old and obsolete and should be abolished or reinterpreted to give the President and the government more power.

We remember Fulbright's attack upon President Kennedy because of his ill-fated attempt to liberate Cuba from Castro's communism. His attack on the venture was not because it was too little or because it had failed. He said the liberation of Cuba from Castro should never have been attempted. Sen. Fulbright said our economic blockade of Cuba has failed. It has failed because Fulbright's powerful-like thinking in the State Department wanted it to fail.

President Kennedy, while in Florida shortly before his assassination, said that Cuba would be liberated and that Castro had to go. It seems Castro had other ideas?

Courage, Not Winning, Counts

EDITOR:

Usually I glance over Hal Boyle's column and read a paragraph or two. His nostalgic records mean nothing to me because we all have our own nostalgic memories and what may be a pleasant recollection to one person may mean a lot of empty words to another.

But all that is over now. For Mr. Boyle has written a column that should make literary history. I refer to his rendition of what it takes to enjoy life as recorded in his column of Tuesday, March 24. His philosophy of what dreams are made of gives an item to character that all other words don't even suggest. He made much of one characteristic without which all other traits are as nothing. He wrote all those words in those three columns which add up to . . . courage. Yes, sir. That's what dreams are made of. Courage. If you say it often enough and if you let it become a part of your dream that make up your life, you will believe that you have it. It doesn't matter if you win or lose, it only matters if you have courage to begin, to endure and to see it through. Courage is what counts. Not anticipation, not winning, and surely not losing, but courage.

Brown May Win Battle, Lose War

L. P-T Sacramento Bureau

SACRAMENTO — A mid-April deadline for the June ballot is likely to break the legislative impasse over when bond propositions and the fair-housing initiative repealer go before voters.

The Republican minority and a bloc of Democrats have been holding out for a June decision of the electorate.

M'CAULEY

However, Gov. Brown figures that a large turnout of voters would be favorable to defeating the fair-housing repealer. So he wants the propositions on the November ballot.

Assembly Republicans have served notice they well refuse to approve the governor's budget unless the Brown administration agrees to a June-decision date.

As Republicans are outnumbered only 50 to 28 in the Assembly and it takes a two-thirds vote of 54 assemblymen to approve the governor's budget, the GOP has the power to block Brown's budget.

However, time is on the side of the governor.

The secretary of state's office must arrange to print the June ballot in April. Mid-April is the final date that there can be any legislative action on June-ballot propositions. And any decision later than April 4 would cause printing complications, according to the secretary of state's staff. That means a bond decision must come soon.

Gov. Brown once asserted that he was giving his No. 1 priority to education. Republicans are taunting him over this because proposed educational bond issues are caught in the backwash of the ruckus over the fair-housing amendment. All propositions must appear on the same ballot.

Some $770 million in educational bonds are being delayed because the governor wants the fair-housing proposition on the November ballot.

The delay has occurred even though the State Allocation Board is virtually out of money for school construction projects. It recently sidetracked a $4 million school-building program in Orange County, and has a $115 million backlog of applications statewide.

Assembly Republicans at least hope to place the $260 million state school construction bond issue on the primary ballot. That also would result in a June test on the fair-housing initiative.

Assemblyman Robert Monagan, R-Tracy, set the tenure of the GOP position thusly:

"We may be subjecting 247,000 students to the possibility of double sessions. The $115 million in requests from over 230 school districts represents funds needed to construct as many as 8,240 additional classrooms in 44 of the 58 counties."

This is one issue where Brown is likely to win the battle but lose the war. If the Brown administration cracks the whip, the bond impasse probably will continue long enough to assure that bond and fair-housing propositions cannot possibly go on the June ballot.

However, the GOP will have a new issue: the governor relagating educational issues to a secondary status due to Brown's interest in the fair-housing proposition.

• • • •

GOV. BROWN belatedly is trying to court Long Beach interests after his controversial special-call on the Long Beach tidelands. Privately, he now hints that maybe it would be a good thing for the California World's Fair to open in Long Beach in 1967-68. Previously, the governor's office has been throwing roadblocks in the way of the fair.

• • • •

THE BILL to abolish Metropolitan Transit Agency still faces an uphill fight. Another round of amendments is expected to try to water down the bill by Sen. Thomas Rees, D-Los Angeles County.

• • • •

ASSEMBLYMAN C. George Deukmejian, R-Long Beach, theorizes there is one factor that heavily influences Gov. Brown's strong stand for keeping the fair-housing initiative on the November rather than the June ballot. If the initiative to nullify the Rumford Fair Housing Act were approved by voters on June 2, it would deliver a stinging blow to Gov. Brown's prestige —and with it his chances for a vice presidential nomination.

Wage-Price Trends Unaffected by Pleas

WASHINGTON—President Johnson has done what his predecessors did—make speeches to labor unions urging them not to bring on any "wage-price spirals." But insofar as enforcing this viewpoint is concerned, every time a chief executive addresses a big labor union the government subsequently presents the image of a helpless bystander.

LAWRENCE

President Johnson in his address on Monday to the convention at Atlantic City of the United Automobile Workers of America said that avoiding the wage-price spiral is "the responsibility of business and it is also the responsibility of labor." He added: "the international position of the dollar . . . demands that our prices and our costs not rise."

But the UAW, in a statement just a few days ago, pointed out that the union doesn't think the pay-benefit gains which it seeks would necessarily increase prices because, it continued, the auto corporation had record profits and rising productivity.

• • • •

WHILE MR. JOHNSON urged that "restraint" be exercised by both sides at the bargaining table next July and declared that the public interest requires stability of costs and prices, there is no law by which the government at present can insure that its viewpoint will be respected.

The Kennedy administration, of course, intervened to prevent a price increase in steel and claimed to have previously influenced the labor side. But the management of the steel companies had to pay wage increases just the same.

The advisers of the late President Kennedy thought they had introduced a new appoach when it was announced that certain "guidelines" would be set to restrain both sides. Wage increases would be granted on the basis of certain gains in productivity. But the labor unions, after a brief acquiescence in the idea, soon discarded it as impracticable, primarily because it interfered with their own freedom of action in demanding wage benefits.

For all practical purposes, government intervention is confined at present to exhortations - begging both sides to be careful and restrained. But when a labor union is as influential politically as the United Auto Workers — which indirectly plays a big part in political campaigns — it isn't likely that President Johnson, or any other Democratic president, will disagree with their policy in collective bargaining negotiations. Mr. Johnson, at the Atlantic City labor meeting, voiced a sentiment often expressed but practiced when he said:

"I am here to tell you that we are going to do those things which need to be done, not because they are politically correct, but because they are right."

Mr. Johnson's speech to the auto workers union dealt only to a small extent with labor-union matters. He talked about the legislation pending before Congress, "the war on poverty," the federal budget, economic conditions, medical care and other issues of general importance. He dealt with the labor-union matters briefly, and disavowed any intention of interfering in labor disputes. He said:

"This administration has not undertaken, and will not undertake, to fix prices and wages in this economy. We have no intention of intervening in every labor dispute. We are neither able or willing to substitute our judgment for the judgment of those who sit at the local bargaining tables across the country. We can suggest guidelines for the economy, but we cannot fix a single pattern for every plant and every industry. We can and we must, under the responsibilities given to us by the constitution and by statute, and by necessity, point out the national interest, and, where applicable, we can and we must, and we will, enforce the law on restraints of trade and national emergencies.

"The words I have just read are the words of John Fitzgerald Kennedy, spoken to this same great convention on May 8, 1962. It was the policy of this government then; it is the policy of this government today."

• • • •

THE SPEECH referred to was delivered a month after Mr. Kennedy had intervened to compel the steel companies to rescind their price increase. What it all amounts to is a refusal on the part of national administrations to intervene in the far-reaching process of fixing the wage costs which inevitably affect prices.

Speeches by presidents will be heard again and again calling on both sides to be "restrained" and to consider the "public interest," but as long as there is no law on the subject, it is unlikely that the American economic system will ever be kept from indulging in wide swings, bringing a series of recessions and recoveries as labor and management fight it out in full sight of the government, but without any supervision in regard to the economic welfare of the entire country.

Congressional Mail Runs Against Civil Rights Bill

SEN. DIRKSEN (R, Ill), Senate Minority Leader, is receiving from 1,500 to 2,000 letters daily on the pending Civil Rights Bill. The letters are 9 to 1 against the bill.

He answered this reporter's question on his mail at his press conference in the Senate Press Gallery. He sat on the table, quoted the Bible and Shakespeare. But this was only the "warm-up" period. He discussed the Civil Rights Bill and displayed an encyclopedic knowledge of the legislation. He has a remarkable memory and has had wide experience in legislation during his 31 years in Congress.

• • • •

HE BELIEVES in full and even lengthy debate in the Senate. He agrees with Sen. Morse that the Civil Rights legislation should have gone in an orderly fashion to committee so that hearings could have been held.

Sen. Dirksen went carefully over each title of the Civil Rights Bill and explained to reporters where the language should be clarified, and where—in his opinion—the provisions are improper and infringe the rights of all citizens.

He said bluntly that Rep. William M. McCulloch (R-Ohio), active in the Civil Rights debate in the House, had termed it a "pail of garbage." Sen. Dirksen is a firm advocate of civil rights for all people but he believes the bill must be carefully worked out to insure passage and to be Constitutional.

He disapproved of a provision which would permit employers to ask job hunters if they are atheists. An atheist could be refused work without the employer being charged with discrimination.

• • • •

SEN. DIRKSEN said that to deny continued federal assistance in housing (where contracts are already in existence) would violate the sanctity of contracts — a basic tenet of law. He told this reporter, that if the United States violates its own contracts within its boundaries, it will inflame some foreign countries who have already or are seeking to break contracts with the United States or with United States citizens.

He made it clear that he takes seriously the mail he receives.

The mail of Sen. Engle (D, Calif.) is running about 85% against the bill.

Sen. Kuchel (R, Calif.), Minority Whip, is receiving much mail which is 4 to 1 against the bill. Two weeks ago Sen. Keating (R, N.Y.) said his mail was running 10 to 7 against the bill. He charged the mail was organized by Mississippi civil rights groups. In Washington, on March 24, he said his mail is now running predominantly for the bill. This mail is not organized, his assistants claim. A spokesman for him said Sen. Keating had declined the offers of Harlem leaders to organize mail campaigns.

• • • •

THE MAIL of the Chairman of the Republican Policy Committee, Sen. Hickenlooper, Iowa, is running 10 to 1 against the Civil Rights Bill.

Sen. Hubert Humphrey is receiving about 1,000 letters a day. The mail from Minnesota citizens favor the bill. His out-of-state mail is predominantly against the bill.

Sen. Mansfield (D, Mont.), Senate Majority Leader, is receiving a lot of mail. His assistant declined to say how the mail is running.

Inconclusive End to Baker Investigation Disgraceful

WASHINGTON—Any decent American citizen interested in good government must weep when he thinks of the desultory, inconclusive and disgraceful end to the so-called investigation of the Bobby Baker case. What happened was a travesty on the congressional investigative process and an affront disregard of public responsibility.

RIDDER

Had the committee never started the investigation in the first place, that would have been understandable. Had the committee pursued the investigation to whatever end it might have reached, that too would be understandable.

But what is not understandable is why the committee started on the chase and then quit before it had nailed the quarry—if any.

• • • •

I DONT know whether Bobby Baker was or was not guilty of any wrong-doing or breach of propriety. No one else knows either, which is precisely the point. The committee, heavily weighted in favor of the Democrats, simply aroused more suspicions than it allayed and cut off the inquiry without questioning those whose testimony might have shed more light on what can only be described as a most peculiar case.

How deeply—if at all—was President Johnson implicated in the multifarious affairs of his one-time friend whom he now treats as a vague figure whom he might have known in the past? The committee in rather closing the investigation did nothing more than to incite further rumors in an already rumor-filled affair. In its actions it did President Johnson no favor for it gave the impression of acting hastily in order to cover-up for a situation which might make for political embarrassment.

Almost everyone in Washington realizes that the Bobby Baker case was of infinitely more interest in the nation's capital than elsewhere in the country. This is too bad because in essence the Bobby Baker affair was not a local issue. It was a national one. It dealt with the behavior of people who are entrusted with some responsibility in a democratic society.

• • • •

The heart of the matter was not that a bunch of small fry were clinging like leeches to the bodies of the great and near-great, but that the great and near-great were or were suspected to have been involved with the fast buck guys. The investigating committee did nothing to eradicate those suspicions. Indeed, it served its own purpose ill by raising more questions than it answered, by increasing rather than putting at end the uneasy doubts in the minds of too many people.

The sordid story of the Bobby Baker investigation will no doubt over the course of time be forgotten. So will those who took part in it. But the whole affair will to some extent weaken the fabric of democratic government for it has shown that on occasion democratic government cannot or will not police itself and that on the whole the people of the United States don't really care what is or is not being done by those who represent them.

GREGORY PECK, state Cancer Crusade chairman, meets with Mrs. George Wills, Lakewood housewife and John Wells (right) who head the Harbor District fund drive opening Wednesday.

Cancer Drive Starts April 1

The annual anti-cancer crusade opens Wednesday throughout the Harbor area with Long Beach headquarters directing the month-long solicitation which is expected to raise $100,000 for the battle against cancer. Last year's drive netted $92,455.

More than 5,000 volunteer workers are expected to take part in the drive in Long Beach, San Pedro, Wilmington, Signal Hill, Compton, Artesia, Bellflower, Lakewood and Avalon.

General Campaign Chairman is John Wells, Long Beach securities executive. Mrs. George Wills, Lakewood housewife, heads the residential division.

Central headquarters are at 936 Pine Ave.

• • • •

THE HARBOR District branch has been active for the past 10 years in the battle against cancer, with emphasis on the educational phases of the crusade recognized as an important force in its year-around program.

To reach every home with important information about cancer is one of the objectives of the drive, said Wells.

Tim Oltman is chairman of the Harbor District Council, the directing body of the local crusade. Betty Seaman is district executive.

LAKE ELSINORE

Officially to Open Saturday

Lake Elsinore officially reopens as a refilled lake Saturday.

The ceremonies, marking the restoration of the three-mile lake as a public boating and recreation area, will begin at 10 a.m. and will include a parade, boat races, a boat parade depicting the history of the lake, a water sports show featuring skiing events and a street dance. Civic, social and service organizations have set up booths to provide food and entertainment.

The lake will be open to boaters immediately after the water show—approximately at noon. The lake will be zoned for high speed boats.

• • • •

BOATS WILL BE launched only from two ramps which can handle 15 boats simultaneously. Both ramps are operated by a concessioner and charge similar fees. The lake-use fee is $3 and parking and launching is $2.

The lake-use fee is to provide for repayment of $750,000 loaned to the state's Division of Beaches and Parks by the State's Division of Small Craft Harbors to enable purchase of the water and provide a fund for replenishment of water due to seepage and evaporation.

The lake now is more than 12 feet deep, where in past years it was only a baked mudflat. Except for an 18-month period in 1958-59, the lake has been dry since 1950.

L.B. Faces Higher Budget

By GEORGE WEEKS

Long Beach city budget-making will reach the stage of administrative hearings this week with indications that the 1964-65 appropriations will come out "moderately higher" than the current year's $33,693,412.

Unavoidable increases such as automatic salary raises, higher costs for materials and supplies and the necessity of maintaining new parks will account for much of the added outlay, City Manager John R. Mansell said.

But some departments, especially Police and Fire, may make out a good case for more personnel, he said.

• • • •

"WE EXPECT to maintain present levels of service in the face of rising population and a large increase in the number of housing units," Mansell declared.

The new tax rate remains uncertain at this stage, but he said he hopes revenues from other sources will make unnecessary any appreciable change in the rate of property taxes.

One example of current revenue gains is a Finance Department report listing sales tax receipts for 1963-64, through March of this year, at $4,200,218. The current budget estimate had anticipated only $3,932,750. For 1962-63 the corresponding figure was $3,871,992.

• • • •

BEGINNING late this week, Mansell will call in department heads for a series of hearings to review prospective needs for next year. Figures for major departments have already been analyzed by the Budget and Research Bureau under direction of Hal Martin.

The city manager's spending recommendations, accompanied by revenue estimates, will go to the City Council about June 15 for another month of wrapup budget sessions.

In the latter period city salary questions will be settled. Mansell said his staff has just begun a comprehensive salary survey.

According to the Budget and Research Bureau, 73.4 per cent of the budget increases from 1953-54 to 1963-64 must be attributed to pay and price raises. Higher prices reflected the general inflationary trend. The city's salary level has merely kept pace with the local labor market, the bureau said.

• • • •

THE REMAINING 26.6 per cent increase in operation budgets is traced to greater workload generated by added facilities.

In the same 10-year period Long Beach population has gained 38.56 per cent, from 262,600 to 363,600; cost of living 16.59 per cent; area wages 48.89 per cent; miles of streets 28.13 per cent, from 608 to 779; city-owned street lights 28.77 per cent, from 12,888 to 16,596; traffic signal installations 59.5 per cent, from 200 to 319; refuse collection 30.29 per cent, from 162,314 tons to 211,479 tons.

DANGEROUS PLAY

Car Set Afire by 2 Children

Engine Co. No. 5 responded to an automobile fire on Molino Avenue Saturday at 1:40 p.m., where they found a housewife with two neighbor children who said they had been playing with matches in the car.

Firemen extinguished the blaze which damaged the front seat, side panels and dashboard of the vehicle. The 41-year-old housewife, who told officers she lives at 1381 Molino Ave., refused to identify the children and said her name was Mrs. Margaret Sparks.

Church Council Offers Relief via Red Cross

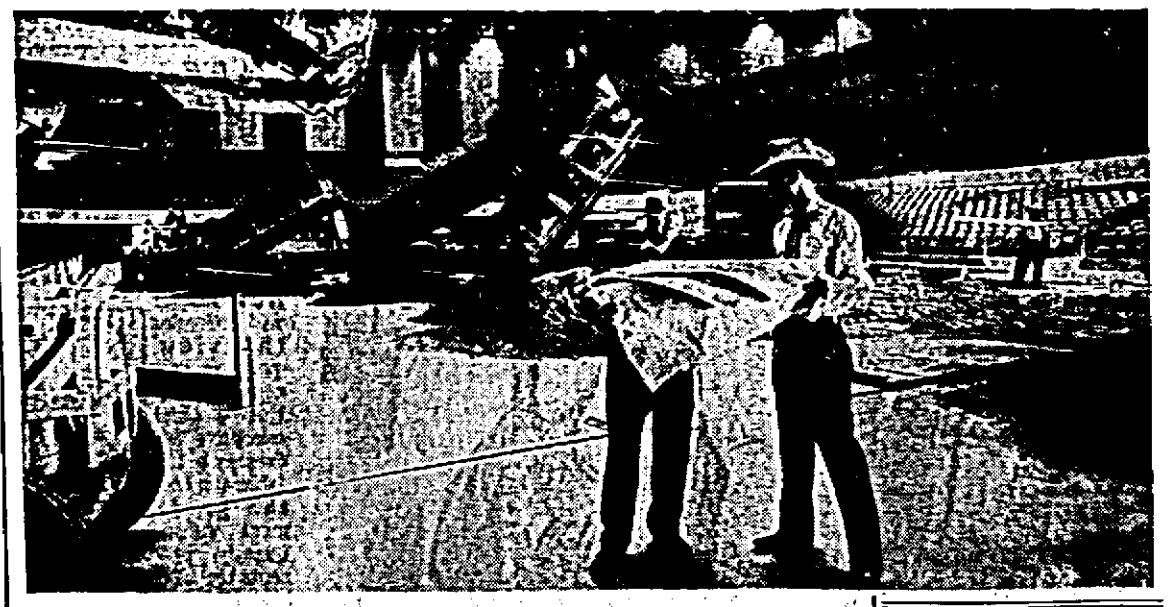

NEW YORK (AP)—The National Council of Churches offered its full resources Saturday for relief work in earthquake torn Alaska.

The offer was made to the Red Cross in Washington and promptly accepted "with gratitude."

A spokesman for the 31-denomination national council said the aid made available ranged from emergency airlifts of supplies to designation of Alaska churches as shelters and food-distribution centers.

Italy Sympathetic

ROME (AP)—Italian President Antonio Segni and Premier Aldo Moro Saturday sent U.S. President Johnson telegrams of sympathy on the Alaska earthquake disaster.

DIRT BY THE TON GETS ARENA READY FOR RODEO
The concrete floor of the Long Beach Arena is being transformed into a dirt corral for the Pacific Indoor Rodeo to be held Tuesday through Sunday. Tex Connelly (right), general manager of the rodeo, and James Myall, Arena building superintendent, supervise the dumping of more than 1,500 tons of dirt into the Arena. Heavy concrete wall will encircle the rodeo area.

Water Plant Going to 'Gitmo'

By LOU JOBST
Marine Editor

A 1,200-ton salt water conversion plant designed to make the U.S. naval base at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba self-sufficient will be loaded aboard the Los Angeles freighter SS President Grant at San Diego Wednesday.

The multimillion-dollar experimental plant, in operation at Point Loma for two years, has been dismatled and will be put aboard the President Grant, an American President Lines ship, in lifts ranging up to 65 tons each.

• • • •

LOADING OF THE dismantled plant will take about 12 hours, APL officials estimate.

The desalination plant, one of 10 "pilot plants" maintained by the Interior Department around the U.S., is capable of producing 1.4 million gallons of fresh water from salt water daily at a cost of $1 per 1,000 gallons.

The cargoliner, en route to New York from Los Angeles, will divert from its regular course for the special calls at San Diego and Guantanamo.

The President Grant was selected because it is capable of handling the large shipment and because its schedule enabled her to handle the operation.

The American Flag ship will leave San Diego Thursday morning and will take 10 days in transit, arriving at Guantanamo the morning of April 12.

• • • •

AN OFFSHORE CRANE, brought from San Juan, Puerto Rico, will unload the conversion plant at "Gitmo," the base's nickname.

Movement of the desalination plant from San Diego to Guantanamo was ordered by President Johnson several weeks ago when the regular water supply to the Navy base was cut off by Fidel Castro.

The reassembled plant will make the base independent of Cuban water, officials claim.

Welfare Fund 'Buys' Safety for Crew of USS Canberra

TO SAFEGUARD against traffic mishaps—and on occasion deaths—that have occurred in the press of jammed and rushing weekend highway traffic, men of the USS Canberra, guided missile heavy cruiser at the Navy Shipyard here for overhaul, are shuttling back and forth to their home base at San Diego by chartered bus to visit wives, families, friends and sweethearts. Under the program, the ship's Welfare and Recreation Fund pays a share of the expense. Buses avoid the peak traffic days and hours to make sure men travel in the highest degree of safety. The commuter program will remain in effect during the Canberra's four-and-one-half month facelifting. She is scheduled to depart in mid-July.

Marines 'Go Over Top' in 1-Day Red Cross Drive

"Leathernecks" of the Marine Barracks, Terminal Island—a small command of 135 men—turned in $161.50 the first day of the Red Cross Drive chalking up 100 per cent participation in the drive.

Overall goal of the local Red Cross this year is $300,000 and the drive has been extended to April 15.

Another military installation, the U.S. Naval Base, expects to reach a total of $30,000 in contributions, according to R. Leonal Gray, Red Cross field director at the base.

Long Beach Naval Shipyards will intensify its collections in a one-day drive Friday.

Ships afloat from the local Navy Base will report returns by mid-April.

James A. Willingham, chairman of the Long Beach campaign, said that extensive Red Cross services to the Navy personnel on the Naval Base and ships afloat from this base are financed by American Red Cross national funds.

"This returns to our area dollars far in excess of the $180,287 which we appropriate to the national fund for services to armed forces, disaster, national and international projects," he stated.

Field Director Gray said that professional services on the Base include those from his office open night and day, and those of Mary Walling, field director, and assistants on the hospital ship, Haven. Volunteers from the chapters supplement the cooperative services of counseling, financial assistance, and emergency problems. Emergency services numbered 7,445 the past year.

LT. BRUCE K. NESTANDE, supply officer, and L/CPL Duncan M. Carswell, of the Marine Barracks, Terminal Island, hang up the victory sign showing 100 percent participation of personnel in the Red Cross Fund Drive.

British Jobless Total Down

LONDON (AP) — The number of British unemployed in March dropped to 425,322. Ministry of Labor figures showed a fall of 38,750 from the February total. The number unemployed then was 2 per cent of the working population. The March percentage figure of 1.9 was the lowest since July 1962, when it was 1.8.

Library Asks Missing Mag, Directory Links

Missing issues of a magazine once published in Long Beach and copies of the city directory are needed by the Public Library to complete files.

Mrs. Frederica Whyte, librarian in charge of the material sought, said the missing issues of the magazine, "Worth While," published here between 1905 and 1928, are Vol. 8, no. 5; Vol. 9, no. 9; Vol. 10, no 1-10; Vol. 11, no. 1-10; Vol. 13, no. 11; Vol. 14, no. 3-8 and 10, 11; Vol. 15, no. 1 and 3-12.

City directories needed to round out the years between 1899 and the present are: 1901, 1903, 1908, 1910, 1934, 1946, 1947, 1949, 1950, 1956.

The magazine "Worth While," was originally published by the Shoreline Club. It was edited by D. M. Shreve. George Moyle, father of William Moyle who operates a print shop here, was printer-manager.

Persons wishing to present needed publicaions to library should call HE 7-0141.

Braces for Son Too High, AF Sergeant Makes Own

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE (AP) — Three years ago S. Sgt. Gordon E. Lenke looked at his infant son's feet and was startled to see that the toes didn't point straight ahead.

He was also surprised at the price — $30 to $50 — for braces used to correct pigeon-toed or slue-footed feet. And even if he could afford the price, the waiting list was long.

Lenke took scrap from a base metal shop and made a brace. And he kept at it until now he has made almost 300 braces for Air Force families free of charge.

"A young airman can't afford braces of this sort," the sergeant says. "That's almost half a month's pay."

His first son, Michael, now 3, is cured. It takes only about three months — thanks to the natural flexibility of young bones — of wearing the braces at night in bed to correct the malady.

Dallas Discusses Airport's Value

Nicholas Dallas, director of aeronautics for the City of Long Beach, will be the guest speaker at the meeting of the North Long Beach Real Estate Club at 8 a.m. Thursday at the Midnight Sun Restaurant, 5925 Cherry Ave.

He will speak on "The Economic Value of the Airport to the Long Beach Area."

'VOTESWAGON' TOUR BEGINS TUESDAY

It's a Bus, It's a Camper, It'll Carry a Crowd, but Now Has Other Duties

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Fairchild, of 5702 Belen St., bought one of those small family buses about a month ago.

It's one of those—that is—well, anyway it's of foreign manufacture and they expected lots of use from it because the makers claim, it's very versatile, like carrying a large crowd of passengers, hauling all kinds of stuff, camping and so forth.

However, this one the Fairchilds bought — it's known by quite a popular German name—has been put to a use hardly anybody would expect.

It's been turned into a unique kind of a vehicle—a "Voteswagon." That's because Mrs. Fairchild is a busy worker in the Long Beach League of Women Voters and she is lending the new buggy to the league's voter-registration drive for the next couple of weeks.

Bedecked in posters and pennants, the wagon will go on tour with registration teams to encourage as many citizens as possible to exercise their franchise in the June primary election. The schedule:

Tuesday, American Gold Star Homes, Santa Fe Avenue and Spring Street, 4-6 p.m.; Friday, Orange Avenue and 20th Street, 3-5 p.m., and Hody's Parking Lot, Lakewood Center, 7-9 p.m.; April 7, Safeway parking lot, Atlantic Avenue and Anaheim Street, 4-6 p.m., and Thursday, April 9, Church of God, 1455 W. Willow Street, 3-5 p.m.

April 9 is the registration deadline.

Fire Victim Listed as 'Very Critical'

An Artesia gas station attendant who suffered second- and third-degree burns early Saturday when the station burst into flames was reported in "very critical" condition Saturday night at Long Beach Community Hospital.

Benjamin Shinnall, 21, of 22123 Arline St., who was rescued by a passing woman motorist, is under 24-hour care by a three-member team of private nurses, hospital aides said.

Shinnall was mopping with a cleaning solvent around 5:30 a.m. when the fire broke out, according to Lakewood sheriff's deputies. He was taken to the hospital by Mrs. Sandra Long, 30, of 5001 Los Coyotes Diagonal, Long Beach.

Mrs. Long told deputies she was passing the station at Norwalk Boulevard and Carson Street when she saw the victim enveloped in flames.

She took a blanket from her auto, rushed to him and wrapped him in it. Then, she said, "I took him to the first hospital I could think of."

The fire was attributed by sheriff's arson investigators to an open-flame gas heater which touched off the solvent Shinnal was using. The station was destroyed.

Dirty Face With a Heart of Gold
$99 Pays All Cost

Nothing small about this jumbo-size 4 bdrm. home. This gem is located on a big thirsty lot. Paint thirst exterior & interior. IF THIS 4 BDRM. HOUSE COULD TALK, WE'D PROBABLY WASH IT'S MOUTH OUT WITH SOAP.

BUT BOY, WHAT A BUY!!

Big rambling kitchen must have once been a homemakers delight. There's loads of birch cabinets, double sinks & disposal. Plenty of family eating area, 4 big dirty bedrooms, loads of storage & closet space. Serviced by 2 baths. Wow! What a living room. Room for your Grand piano here, and look at this new wall to wall carpet & floor to ceiling picture window that look out to cabrs filled rear grounds. Basically this bumbo is in fine condition. Needs painting & decorating, old fashioned elbow grease. You do the work & the seller will pay your closing costs.

AT MAGNOLIA THEATER

Shakespier 6 Brawl Staged

By SAMUEL A. BOYEA

Magnolia Theater actors have a Pier 6 "brawl" (no Shakespearean pun intended) with "Taming of the Shrew"—the new production.

A brazen sop to male superiority, and replete with sub-plots, outrageous Shakespearean puns and sight gags, this low comedy caper demands broad playing to stand up today.

Pat Brown as director gives the play its due and in "the round" yet. The director also stars as Kate. With an Annie-Get-Your-Gun entry, the Tallulah-voiced star set the wild pace as the unreconstructed Kate who makes her seedy adventurer-suitor Petruchio (Robert Quarry) earn her love and full surrender the muscular way.

MRS. BROWN and Quarry have such a wild time "bulling" each other around that their brilliant interpretation might well be described as an Elizabethan prank of "brawn over broad" (oh! those infectious Shakespearean puns). Quarry may yet die of stage claustrophobia in the Magnolia's tiny quarters so broad and sweeping is his Petruchio style, but other than that one can't knock his truly professional performance. He appropriately accepts Kate's humiliating surrender with the silent eloquence and instant humility of the matinee idol who thanks his audience for making him the great star he undoubtedly is. Mrs. Brown made her speech on wifely duty sound lofty. Out of a less experienced reading it would be the dated nonsense we know it to be.

• • • •

A NUMBER of fine actors, sensitive to the Bard's better lines, back up Kate and Petruchio. That extraordinarily gifted young actor, Gil De Rush, makes a welcome return to the local boards as a handsome, eloquent Lucentio. Lewis Hammack as the "three-inch fool" could not be improved upon. Eric Lord (Baptista), Richard Moore (Vincentio), Nathan Adler (Gremio), Milt Kogan (Tranio) and Tom Lloyd (Biondello) also performed creditably.

As the servants, petite Karen Joyal and one Lana Biggs add much grace and charm to the show; as does Bianca, but we never got her name on our program.

Things Meshing for Dick Shawn

By EARL WILSON

NEW YORK — "I used to have very long hair," Dick Shawn said, pounding the table at the memory, "and they told me nobody would ever be a success with long hair.

"So a few months ago I got a crew cut. Now the crazy Beatles come along, so I got long hair again. The new thing has got to be something called 'the Crew Cut Quartet!'"

Dick Shawn is 34 and but for some bad breaks in the timing of his major efforts, should be in the world's Top 10 in talent. Suddenly everything is smashing and he may make it yet.

• • • •

WE WERE at 52nd and Broadway and the Dick Shawn name was very popular thereabouts. On the marquee at the Mark Hellinger, he was listed as the star of "A Funny Thing Happened to Me on the Way to the Forum," in the Colony Record Shop he was very large in the album displays, and at the Warner Theater you couldn't miss him in "It's a Mad, Mad, Mad, Mad World."

• • • •

SHAWN WAS in Las Vegas at the Thunderbird starring in two capsule versions of Broadway shows each night—"Anything Goes" and "High Button Shoes"—and occasionally doing his night club act on Saturday at the third show. This convinced him of his stamina, inasmuch as everybody'd told him it was an impossible assignment.

An offer came to take over Zero Mostel's part in "A Funny Thing."

THE BOX-OFFICE response has not been merely sensational but Producer Hal Prince has ticketed Dick to play the lead in a show "The Red Menace," which George Abbott talks of directing for next fall . . . all because he took the Zero role.

Lakers Stay Alive, Pull Even in Playoff, 97-88

By DON HARDIN

Jerry West scored 39 points and Elgin Baylor chipped in with a usual Tick Tock performance Saturday as the golden pair propelled the Lakers to a 97-88 victory over the St. Louis Hawks before 13,862 fans at the L.A. Sports Arena.

The victory enabled the Lakers to remain alive in the NBA playoffs. It tied them with the Hawks at 2-2 in the best-of-5 series and they will play that decider in St. Louis, where they have lost five games in a row, Monday night. The contest will be telecast over KHJ (9) at 6:30.

Following some spotty officiating and then shrugging off the muscle of the Hawks the first three quarters, the Lakers, with West and Elgin leading the way in scoring and with Rudy LaRusso applying his own muscle against high-scoring Bob Pettit, the Lakers won in a romp.

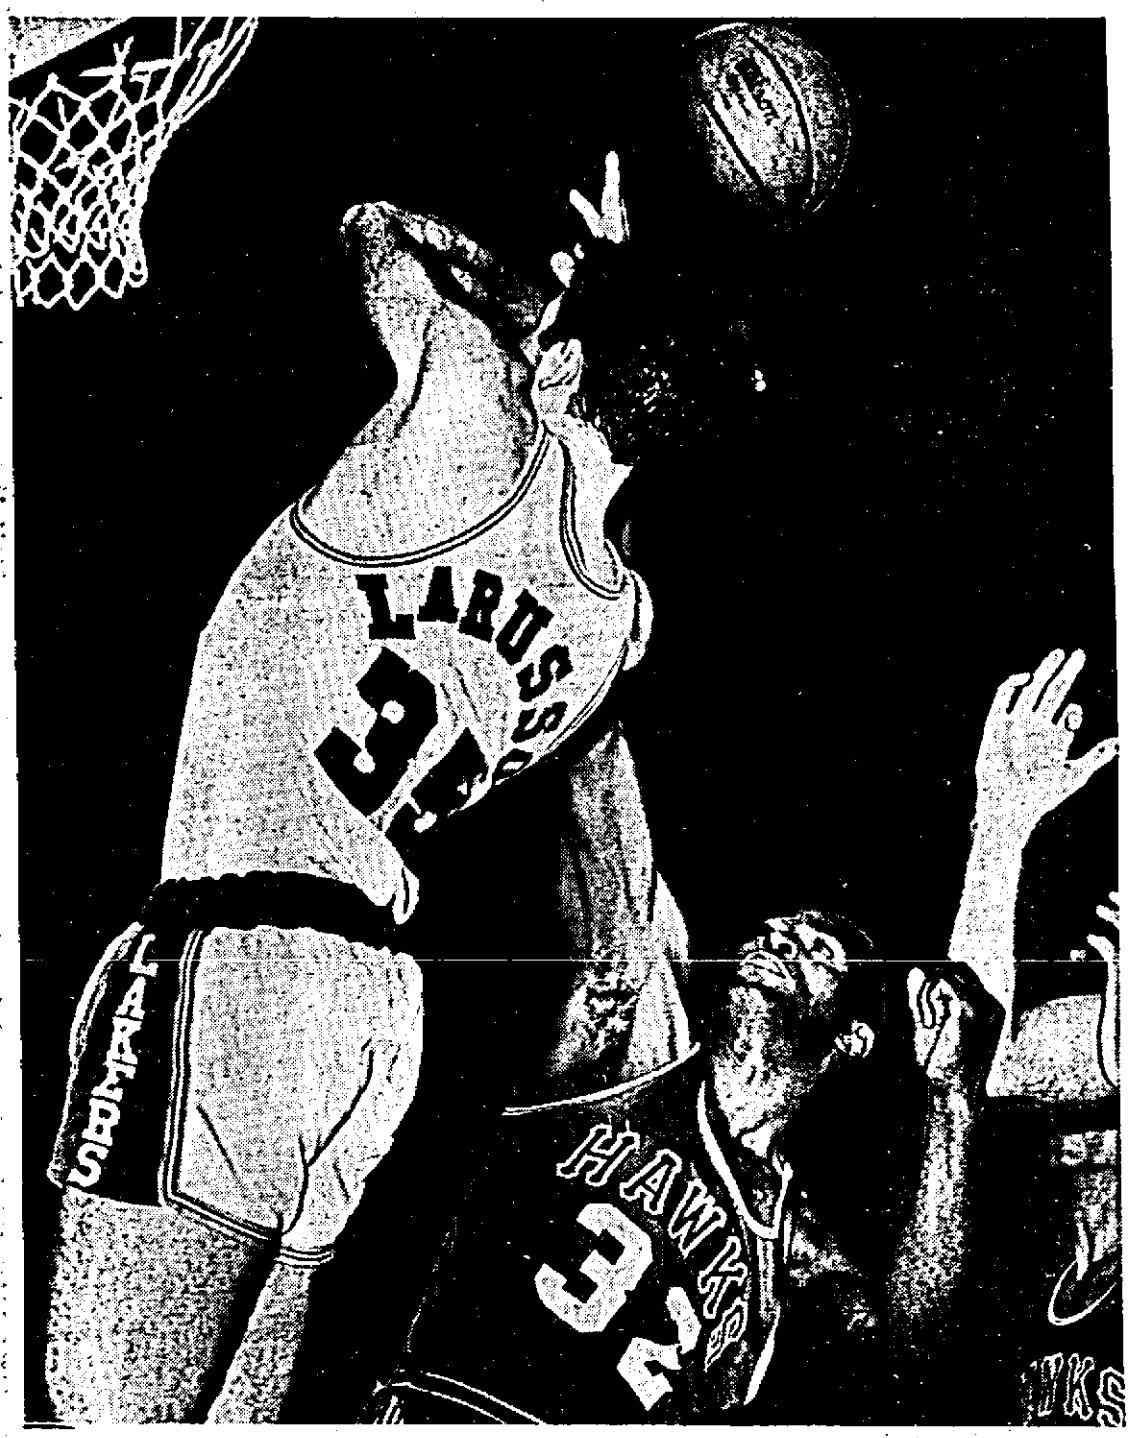

Baylor, held to two points the first half, came back with 18 in the final two periods and had 10 assists, more than any man on the court.

West was hurt in more ways than one throughout the game. He picked up four fouls early, got his fifth in the third quarter, and consequently played only 39 minutes. But he got a point for each of them.

West shot 13 good ones from the floor in 20 attempts and made 13 of 15 free throw tries. Elgin made 9 of 16 once he got untracked.

The game was extremely rough as had been the previous three playoff games between these teams. West was knocked down four times by big Bill Bridges and Pettit of the Hawks. But he didn't quit, nor did

EASTER SUNDAY PUNCH

Lakers' Rudy LaRusso (left) has no easy time going after rebound. St. Louis Hawks' Bill Bridges prefers to stay on floor and go after Rudy. No foul was called but LaRusso had last laugh. He got the ball.

'Tired' Bruins Lose, 76-59, to All-Stars

Hazzard Limited to Seven Points

EVANSVILLE, Ind. — Evansville's Jerry Sloan held UCLA's Walt Hazzard to seven points Saturday night as a collegiate Olympic tryout team trounced the Bruins, 76-59. The Uclans' all-America was hampered by a hip injury.

Manny Newsome of Western Michigan and Steve Thomas of Xavier led the way as the All-Stars began pulling ahead 54-52 with 9:46 to go.

UCLA reported understrength, particularly missing its leading rebounder, Keith Erickson, who didn't make the trip. Coach Johnny Wooden said his players were "just tired of basketball."

• • • •

WOODEN had only six of his own players to use, and he borrowed three Evansville College reserves for limited duty.

Thomas led the All-Stars with 14 points, while Sloan and Bill Cunningham of North Carolina each added 12.

DODGERS RELIEVED

Never Fear — Frank Is Here

VERO BEACH, Fla.—The real Frank Howard, pale and somewhat subdued, arrived in Dodgertown at 11:30 Saturday night and announced "I'm here to play."

Howard's first question as he emerged from a flight from Miami was, "Is there a midnight mass?" Howard planned to attend and said, "My preparation for baseball will start tomorrow."

Howard evaded the issue of his "personal problems" as much as possible. "I'll be honest with you gentlemen," he said. "This is no one's problem but my own. I would never intrude on another man's personal life."

• • • •

HOWARD'S reception committee included four reporters, a photographer, road secretary Lee Scott and trainer Wayne Anderson.

Anderson patted Howard's mid-section and exclaimed "Pretty good, Frank."

Howard said he is 15 pounds over his playing weight, but the same weight as last spring (255). "I haven't exercised since last October. In fact, I haven't given much thought to baseball. But I feel good and I'm here to play."

Howard said he has not discussed salary with general manager Buzzie Bavasi. Asked if he expects a raise from his $22,000 contract of last year, Howard said, "I think I deserve a raise."

Although the season opener is only 16 days away, Howard felt he would be ready. "Give me five days of batting practice and seven consecutive games, nine innings each, and I'll be ready for the season. If I'm not ready then, I never will be."

Howard still feels that he should play every day.

ANGELS DENY ANAHEIM DEAL

An Anaheim newspaper published a story Saturday saying the Angels baseball team will move to that Orange County city in 1966.

Gene Autry, chairman of the board for the baseball club, said there was "no truth to that report that Anaheim will get the Angels.

"We have negotiated with Long Beach and we've talked to Anaheim and other cities," Autry said. "True, we did meet with Anaheim officials last Saturday. They made proposals. However, we have not accepted."

The newspaper said a joint statement from local officials and the Angels' front office announcing completion of negotiations for the move, was expected momentarily. The newspaper said it learned from highly reliable local city officials that the board of directors of the American League team "unanimously and eagerly" approved the proposal at the Saturday meeting.

• • • •

ANOTHER ANGEL SPOKESMAN said the Angels were planning to move from Dodger Stadium after the 1964 and 65 seasons to "obtain our own personality," but said, "There's a possibility that we might go to any city that makes us a good offer."

The newspaper said "informed sources" in Anaheim said the city of Anaheim and Orange County were prepared to unveil plans to build a 50,000-seat stadium on a 135-acre site here.

It said the Angels would become known as the Southern California Angels.

LBSC Crew Shells 4 Foes in '64 Opener

6,000 Fans Watch as USC Distant 2nd

By DAVE TAYLOR

A precision Long Beach State College varsity rowing eight swept six giant boatlengths closer to its Olympic Games target before 6,000 at the Southern California crew season opener at Marine Stadium Saturday.

Like an aloof beetle, the golden LBSC shell got up on eight legs and walked away from its brethren of USC, Oregon State University, San Diego State and Loyola, leading the pack by six lengths to the boathouse in its 1964 debut outing.

The Long Beach oarsmen took the 2,000-meter trip in six minutes, 32.2 seconds, better than 23 seconds faster than second-place USC.

Taking a fast start, the 49ers kept up a machine-gun pace over the first two-thirds of the course to leave plenty of open water astern.

Then they smoothed things out and were content to hold their lead breezily until coxswain Jim Whalen called for a final 40-yard sprint that left all comers a healthy hitchhiking distance behind.

• • • •

THE ONLY race among the varsity eights was for second place with everyone but Long Beach in the running as the other four boats muzzled gunwales all the way. Only a last gasp five-yard sprint did the job to put USC over in the number two slot, a third of a boat length ahead of Oregon State.

The SC oarsmen covered the 2,000-meter course in 6:55.8, followed by Oregon State 6:56.3, San Diego 6:56.9 and Loyola 6:57.5.

Individual stars of the meet which pitted 300 crewmen from 17 rowing groups were 15-year-old Bruce May of Long Beach Rowing Assn. and Bill Jewell of the Olympic Games-bound California Kayak Club.

May took an early lead in the 150-pound singles and held it over the 2,000-meter course to score a half-length upset over the invincible 55-year-old "grand old man of rowing," Kearney Johnson from San Diego rowing club.

Jewell, national singles and doubles kayak rowing champion, racked up three consecutive victories as he did a 3:43 1,000-meter single sprint, a 1:24 500-meter single sprint, and teamed up with national No. 2 man Gert Grigoleit in a 5:14.4 1,000-meter doubles tilt.

• • • •

LONG BEACH State College's depth of top rowing talent became apparent in a regatta preliminary 2,000-meter tilt when the 49 varsity reserves shut down the USC reserves covering the course in 7:41.5, a little more than a minute worse than their first string did later in the day.

The 49ers' prospects looked even rosier when the freshmen eight took the 2,000 meters in 6:22.10, better than the varsity, to leave Loyola and San Diego second and third.

Winners in the 14 regatta events were:

1. Varsity Reserves—2,000 meters—
2. High School Heavyweights — 2,000 meters—Long Beach Rowing Assn.
3. Frosh Eights—2,000 meters — Long Beach, Loyola, San Diego.
4. K-1 Kayaks—1,000 meters—Bill Jewell, Bill Bixby.
5. Sea Scout Whale Boats—200 meters —Long Beach Venture, LW Complin, Newport Beach.
6. K-2 Kayaks—1,000 meters—Bill Jewell and Gert Grigoleit.
7. JV Eights—2,000 meters—San Diego State, Oregon State, Long Beach State.
8. Sr. Fours—2,000 meters—Long Beach RC II, LWRC I, Long Beach Rowing Assn.
9. Sr. Singles—2,000 meters — Don't RC, LWRC.
10. K-1 Kayaks—500 meters—Bill Jewell, Gert Grigoleit, Tom Yarno.
11. Navy Whaleboats—1,000 meters — USS Ise Royal, USS Bryce Canyon.
12. College Fours—2,000 meters—USC, Long Beach, Orange Coast.
13. 135 Pound Singles—2,000 meters — Bruce May, Kearney Johnson.
14. Varsity Eights—2,000 meters—Long Beach, USC, Oregon State.

HERE'S WHAT DODGERS DO!

What Do They Do on a Rainy Day in Vero?

By GEORGE LEDERER
L. P-T Staff Writer

VERO BEACH, Fla.—What do they do on a rainy day in Vero?

No one appears to be particularly upset when traveling secretary Lee Scott delays the Dodgers' flight to Bradenton, at least an hour. It's raining at the A's training base and threatening here.

At 9 a.m. Dodgertown's main lobby resembles a Gardena card room at 9 p.m. A half-dozen bridge games are in progress and the pool table is crowded.

Don Drysdale, Johnny Podres and Lee Walls barely beat the breakfast hall closing time for a second cup of coffee. Rookie Bill Singer and Al Ferrara aren't as lucky. They're shut out and start the day without breakfast.

"I've finally got it made," announces Drysdale. "No more trips for me. I'm pitching here in my next three turns."

Drysdale's happiness is short-lived.

"Game's off," announces Scott.

"You lucky so-and-sos," moans Drysdale. "No game for you, but I've still got to pitch to Willie Davis in the cage."

One of the writers brings more bad news. "It's threatening to clear up," he says.

A quick poll shows the luckiest of all are Vin Scully, Jerry Doggett and others in the radio crew. They have the day off and head for the golf course.

Manager Walter Alston still doesn't trust the weather report. It calls for rain, but Alston brings the first dampener by ordering all players to report for a 12:30 intrasquad game.

Larry Sherry and Bob Miller couldn't care less. They've already finished their work, opposing each other in a morning game among minor league clubs.

Sherry has reason to smile for the first time this spring. "CG (complete game)," he announces as he enters the clubhouse, forming a zero with the thumb and index finger of his right hand. "Three-hit shutout, no walks," he elaborates.

"You're lucky," replies Miller. "I hit a shot and it was caught."

It's lunch time and Willie Davis samples from the relish tray. "How come they say carrots are good for your eyes?" He asks.

Sandy Koufax, quick as his fast ball, has the answer. "You've never seen a rabbit wearing glasses, have you?"

Drysdale has completed his batting practice assignment and zippers himself into a portable steam bath. It's the first time Drysdale has let off steam in a year.

Next to Drysdale, reclining on Doc (Wayne) Anderson's rubbing table, is a portly, bespectacled man, perhaps 40. If this man is a pitcher, or even an old one, the Dodgers are in bad shape.

It turns out the man does his best pitching with a wedge. He's Bob Rosburg, the pro golfer, here to be massaged into shape for the Masters tournament. . . . Pete Richert steps on the scales and deducts four pounds for the lead weight strapped to his left wrist.

"What's the strap do?" asks fellow lefthander Jim Brewer. "It straightens my arm," says Richert.

The two compare arms. "Look, his is straight," says Richert in amazement. "That's because I don't have a curve ball," says Brewer.

Brewer had a little of everything, however, in the ensuing squad game. In four innings he allowed one run, two hits and struck out four.

Ron Perranoski started and pitched four scoreless innings for the Durochers. But the Reisers didn't score, either.

"That starting is for the birds," the ace reliever shouts as he heads for the clubhouse. "No runs."

Drysdale, seated in the stands, fails to show sympathy. "You wouldn't believe me, huh?"

After eight innings, when each side had one run and four hits, general manager Buzzie Bavasi left in disgust.

"I'm going over to watch St. Petersburg and Santa Barbara. They hit the ball better than we do."

Bavasi didn't get the chance. A downpour halted activity for the day.

And the lobby again took on the Gardena flavor.

AAU Empire Rocked . . . Again

AAU officials, often the targets of justified barbs by newsmen, went down for the count of 10 last week during the National AAU Basketball Tourney in Denver, considered one of the last strongholds of the amateur dictators.

A blasting article by Leonard Cahn of the Rocky Mountain News—forwarded here by Don Muchmore, sponsor of the participating L.B. Opinion Research quintet—labeled the AAU Tournament "a bush league event, staged to perpetuate the Phillips 66 trade mark and to enlist enough pickup teams to fill out the field."

HANK HOLLINGWORTH

Cahn wrote "that by staging the tournament the Big Domes (AAU officials) manage to retain their front row seats in the International Basketball Federation and to continue enjoying junkets to the Olympic Games.

"The Big Domes and their cheerleaders have offered a lot of noise, but no substansive evidence to the contrary. Eliminate all pickup teams or teams dominated by players from 1964 college competition who take out AAU cards solely to play in the tournament and what legitimate AAU teams would you have left? Phillips, Goodyear and two or three others."

Cahn's point gained added stature when Akron Goodyear later nudged Phillips for the title.

In agreeing with Cahn, Muchmore declared: "Among the legitimate AAU teams is Opinion Research because its only addition was one man added halfway through the season, which was completely according to the rules. The rest of our team, except John Barnicoat, played with us from the very beginning which, except for the three you can add during the regional playoffs, is the way the rules read. That is the way I intend to continue playing whether we win or lose."

Of particular frustration to Muchmore, and possibly the factor which prompted Cahn's bombardment, was that the hometown Denver entry was a team made up completely of top area collegians but, as a team, had no record whatsoever as it was composed because it had not played a single AAU game!

Thus, instead of being a legitimate tourney for amateur clubs which have played as complete units through an entire season, the Denver event now is virtually a college all-star grab bag.

"THE BIG Domes remain in hibernation until it's time to buy a dozen or two basketballs and then pop up for four days," continued Cahn. "The Big Domes are living in the dear, departed past when they go around taking bows for U.S. basketball successes in the Olympic Games. You would think that, but for them, Uncle Sam would have been an also ran in the 1960 Games at Rome."

A long look at the record proves otherwise. Stars of the championship U.S. team were Oscar Robertson, Jerry West, Jerry Lucas, Walt Bellamy and Terry Dischinger. All came directly from college competition and not one ever had an AAU card in his life.

Players on the 1960 team from AAU competition were Bob Boozer, Les Lane, Burdy Halderson and Al Kelley. Boozer and Lane did make some contributions, but Halderson and Kelley saw little action.

In '56, the biggest guns for the U.S. at Melbourne were USF's Bill Russell and K. C. Jones, neither AAU men.

CAHN ASKS AND answers a question: Other than the Olympics, how has U.S. basketball fared in international competition with the Big Domes in the driver's seat?

Well, in the World Tournament last year, the U.S. team finished fourth with a 3-3 record and losses to Russia, Yugoslavia and Brazil.

"The Big Domes must take full responsibility for this humiliation," snorts Cahn. "They stutter and try to come up with alibis, but, nevertheless, are redfaced about the whole deal.

"Another indictment I make is that when AAU basketball became bare bones, the Big Domes changed the rules. This enabled AAU card bearers to switch teams for the National.

"This, in itself, was an admission from the Big Domes that the tournament had gone to pot."

AAU officials must have been shaken-up severely. They have been rapped in many quarters, but never before in their home basketball port of Denver!

THE BIG DOMES received a blast on the local scene, too. Writes Sam P., 2516 Del Amo, Lakewood:

"Congratulations to you. I thought for a moment that horrible excuse for a mile relay in the Indoor Games here was going unnoticed until I read your column and was overjoyed.

"I was at the meet and do you know that no apology was made to the crowd for the mistake those blundering idiots (AAU officials) made? Don't worry, though. I have a 4-year-old cousin who will be willing to count the laps next year."

Obviously, AAU officials are in a losing streak. Come to think of it, though, I can't recall when they've been on a winning binge.

AMALFITANO TO JOIN CUBS

As McBride Goes, So Do Sox

By ROSS NEWHAN
L. P-T Sports Writer

PALM SPRINGS—Which team has the Tony?

Unfortunately, the Red Sox had a pair of them Saturday and their bats took the curl out of two Art Fowler curves as Boston rallied for 11 runs in the final two innings for a 12-10 victory over the Angels.

Tony Conigliaro's three-run homer highlighted an eight-run eighth inning and Tony Horton's two-run homer in the ninth capped the Boston rally which first found the light of day with the Red Sox trailing, 10-1.

However, the Boston massacre could not dim another bright performance by Ken McBride, who will be littering D.C. Stadium in Washington with his "junk" when the curtain rises on the 1964 season April 13.

McBride coasted seven innings, his longest stint of the spring, and allowed only four hits and one unearned run. McBride's Cactus League earned run average is a distinguished 0.69 based on 25 innings during which he's yielded only two legit tallies.

"I could have gone nine innings today but why put a strain on my arm?" asked McBride.

From the very start, Saturday was an eventful day. General manager Fred Haney called a pre-game press conference and revealed that the contract of San Pedro's Joey Amalfitano was being returned to Tacoma and the Giants, in turn, were selling the 30-year-old infielder to the Chicago Cubs.

Haney also revealed that the contracts of catcher Jackie Moore and pitcher Leo Marentette were being transferred to Syracuse. Both were conditional purchases over the winter.

"We felt with Joe Koppe, Tom Satriano and Bobby Sadowski we have enough infield protection," explained Haney. "With the Cubs, Amalfitano will have an opportunity to win Ken Hubbs' second base position and play regularly."

For the first seven innings of Saturday's contest the Red Sox must have wondered if the Yankees hadn't exchanged their pin stripes for halos and were vacationing in the West. Ace Bill Monbouquette was bombed for 13 hits and 10 runs in five innings.

★ ★ ★ ★

JIM FREGOSI, who lost his glove prior to the game, fortunately had his bat under lock and key and brought it forth to smash a homer, triple and single. He's batting .364. Keystone partner Bobby Knoop drove in three runs with two singles and is batting a startling .420.

A young man named Hal Green motored up from Indio where he is training with Hawaii and produced three of the Angels' 16 hits. He brought an overnight case and will be seen in left field again today.

Held in check by McBride, Boston battered Danny Osinski into submission in the eighth.

ANGEL ANGLES: President Robert Reynolds called the Angels' press corps together prior to the game to discuss the "preposterous" rumor Casey Stengel would become the club's prexy . . . Reynold's statements were a repeat of what the ex-Stanford football great had told the L.P-T Friday . . . "Gene and I have never discussed the possibility of divesting ourselves of the presidency," reiterated Reynolds . . . "In September we extended Fred Haney's contract through 1965," said Autry. "That would seem a ridiculous move if we didn't have the highest confidence in Fred. In fact, he has far exceeded the original confidence we placed in him . . . I certainly wouldn't have signed a long term contract if I thought at all that I might retire in the next year or two," said Haney.

Turley, the ex-Yankee and Angel, opined that Yogi Berra wouldn't have any problems handling the Yankees. . . . "I wish I had his problems," said Turley. "I think he might have made a mistake by hiring Whitey (Ford) as his pitching coach. This is a much tougher job than I ever anticipated and I can't help but feel that coaching will have an effect on Ford's pitching. I think he'll find it impossible to forget his coaching problems when he takes the mound."

KTLA director Don Patton revealed that the Angels and Giants had a TV rating of 14 last Sunday. . . . "That means we went into about 378,000 homes," said Patton.

Koppe was struck over the left eye by a thrown ball prior to the game. Ice reduced the swelling and Koppe will be available for action today when Barry Latman faces Earl Wilson. . . . Albie Pearson was bedded again Saturday by the flu. . . . Ed Kirkpatrick had the seven stitches removed from his middle finger Saturday but it will be at least one week before Spanky will be able to grip a bat.

Giants Pound 6th Straight Victory, 7-4

5 Games Rained Out in Florida

Compiled From Wire Reports

Five major league baseball exhibition games were scrubbed Saturday when rain hit Florida's Grapefruit circuit, but out in Arizona the San Francisco Giants followed the sun to their sixth consecutive win, 7-4 over the Cleveland Indians.

Pittsburgh benefited from eight unearned runs in an 8-6 decision over Houston in Fort Myers, Fla., while Washington blanked the Baltimore B team, 6-0, in Pompano Beach, Fla.

• • •

The Giants rammed in three runs in the eighth inning for their victory. Indian hurler Peter Ramos was the victim, surrendering four hits in the outburst, including a key triple to Jesus Alou, his third hit.

DON LEPPERT hit two homers, Chuck Hinton and Bill Skowron one each and the Senators' Claude Osteen pitched six shutout innings against the Orioles B team.

Six Houston errors led the way to all the Pittsburgh runs at Fort Myers. Jim Wynn had two homers for the losers.

Howard concluded the interview by saying, "It's not a matter if I want to play. I've got to."

Golfer Beard Much Improved

LOUISVILLE (AP)—Professional golfer Frank Beard's condition was described Saturday as greatly improved.

His physician said Beard was out of a coma and his condition was good.

He was hospitalized Thursday after he slipped into a coma with a brain inflammation.

However, a neuro-surgeon said the 24-year-old winner of last year's Frank Sinatra Open would be hospitalized for some time.

OCC Wins Easter Title; Goldberg-Led Vikes 3rd

By GARY RAUSCH

Orange Coast won the Easter Baseball Tournament Saturday, downing defending champion San Diego, 5-1, and Alan Goldberg earned himself a job with Long Beach City College off his performance in the Vikings' 11-2, third place victory over Compton.

OCC staked Dale Townsend to a 3-0 first inning lead and Townsend reciprocated with a neat six-hitter that held the Knights scoreless until the eighth.

• • • •

GOLDBERG, the speedy Lakewood High product, couldn't report to Bill Hatch until basketball season concluded and then was delegated to the junior varsity. He was brought up to replace the injured John Kalench during the tourney.

Saturday Goldberg tripled, singled twice, scored four runs, stole third base and was flawless in the field. His triple and Bart Hammer's single started LBCC's scoring in the first inning.

He led off the fifth with a single to center and went all the way to third on Hammer's liner to left. The fast-starting shortstop was halfway to the plate on the suicide squeeze when Chuck Williamson ripped the ball to center for a two-run single.

Williamson's grand-slam homer to center in the eighth added the frosting to Jim Parks' victory cake, his fourth of the year. It also gave Williamson six RBI for the day.

The afternoon also saw Don Keel, the Vikings' leading hitter last season break out of a slump that had seen him go hitless in his last 20 at bats. The big redhead tripled and singled twice, driving in Rich Lawrence in the fifth.

HOUSTON (UPI) — Oklahoma State University almost swept everything in sight Saturday to win the 10th All-Americas Intercollegiate Invitational golf tournament.

NOT OLD, FAT OR LONELY

Umpires Almost Like People

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP)—Lou DiMuro is a 31-year-old bachelor learning the transportation business in New York. Paul Pryor is the new basketball coach at Dominican College in Racine, Wis. Ed Sudol is the manager of a shopping plaza in Deland, Fla.

They're also umpires.

And they're not lonely.

Along with men like Vinnie Smith and Joe Paparella, they are articulate spokesmen for their profession who insist that umpires have no more problems or any less laughs than scientists, salesmen or laborers. They do admit, however, that the problems involved may be unusual.

• • • •

"THE GENERAL impression of an umpire," said DiMuro, "is that he's an old, fat man on the way out. That's not true. We have to be physically fit and mentally aware. We don't just stand out there like a lot of people think. There's a lot of pressure on us.

"But it has its rewards," he continued. "An umpire's salary is above average and we can increase our income working during the off-season. And we're fortunate to be associated with a business that has been above reproach as long as I've been in it."

DiMuro, however, doesn't minimize the problems.

"It's a different life than a ball player's, even though we're in the same business," he said. "They're in the spotlight and we're in the background. They get applause when they do a good job; we just get silence."

Pryor said he not only had to place restrictions on his weight because he is an umpire, but on his activities.

"There's certain places you can go to, some places you shouldn't go to and a lot of places you can't go to," he said. "And without your family you can't be seen in a lot of places because people are liable to talk.

"But I don't think we ever get lonely. There's a lot of places we can go and a lot things we can do. Most of us spend a lot of time together. We watch television and shoot the bull."

"We're like four married people," said Sudol, talking about the regular team during the season. "We travel in a group and we all have the same interests. We make a nice happy team. I think that's good."

Eye-Popping Scoreboard Waiting

NEW YORK (UPI)—Any time New York Met fans grow weary of watching their heroes perform on the field, they can look at pin-up pictures on their new scoreboard in Shea Stadium.

Among the features of the new installation now being put in place will be a 24-foot projection screen on top of the scoreboard which will flash color pictures of each player as he comes to bat. Color motion pictures also can be shown to the entire stadium through the "Photorama" screen.

The scoreboard, designed by General Indicator Corporation, will stand 20 feet off the ground, measure 40 by 136 feet and weigh over 60 tons. A white shell surrounding the back of the main unit will tower higher than a seven-story building.

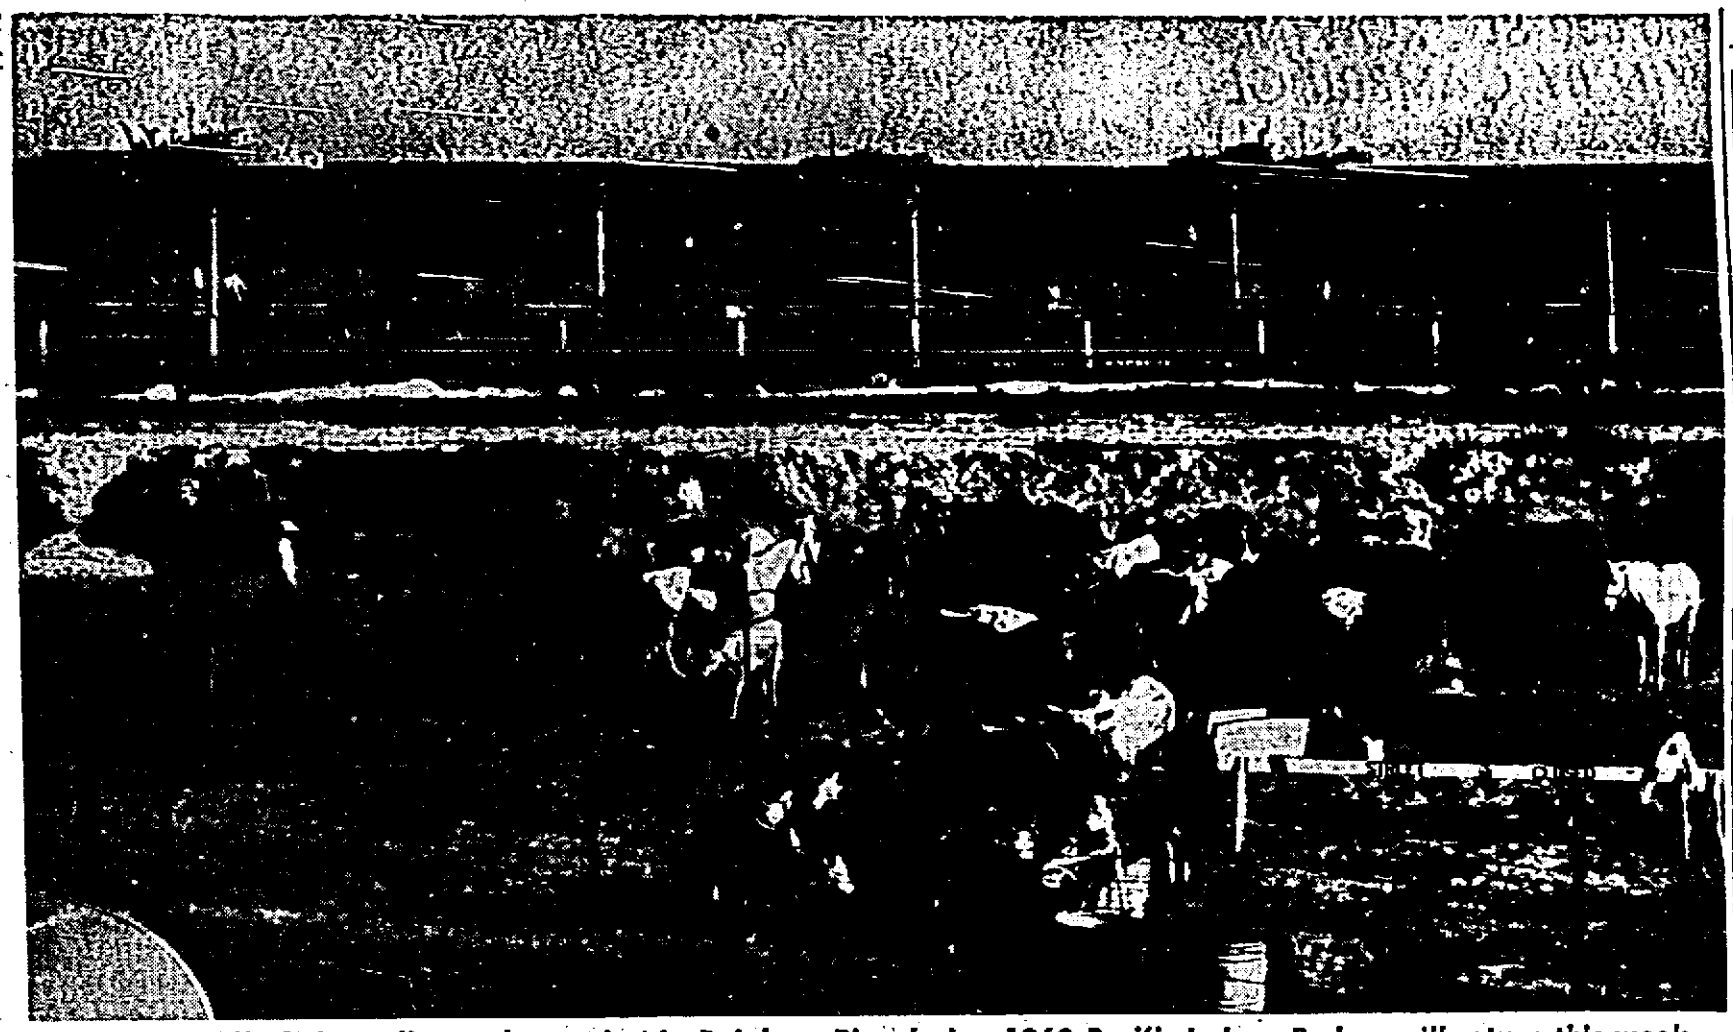

Color spotlights, activated by musical tones, will flash animated colors across the shell in recognition of outstanding plays and also to provide between-inning attractions.

Approximately 28,000 lamps will be used for the scoreboard and the electrical power could provide full electrical service for about 50 homes. Approximately 80 miles of wiring will be used.

• • • •

THE SCOREBOARD will contain such usual information as game details and scores of all other major league games in progress. The board can easily be converted for football use.

In addition to the main board, two synchronized auxiliary scoreboards will be placed on opposite sides of the field.

INDOOR RODEO PRIMER

Here's Test of Your Cowboy IQ

By AL LARSON

Are you as smart answering rodeo questions as you were at figuring out the Army's math quiz that stumped heavyweight boxing champion Cassius Clay?

No doubt you rattled off last Sunday's five-question session in a matter of seconds. Try these 10 terms for size since they'll pop up at all five performances of the Pacific Indoor Rodeo which gets under way Thursday night at the Long Beach Arena:

Q. Hooey?

A. A wrap around any three feet and a half-hitch used in calf roping as opposed to the usual method of tying calves with two wraps and a half-hitch.

Q. Lap and tap?

A. A lap and tap start occurs when the steer or calf is released from the chute without a head start on the roper or steer wrestler.

Q. Hazer?

A. A cowboy who rides along beside a steer on the opposite side from the steer wrestler to keep the steer from running away from the steer wrestler's horse.

Q. Go-round?

A. That part of a rodeo that is required to allow each contestant to compete on one head of stock. The number of go-rounds in a rodeo may vary from one in a small one-day contest to as many as seven or more.

Q. Fishing?

A. A common expression used in rodeo when the roper has thrown at an animal but has missed, and then by accident, or by flipping the rope, turns it into a legal catch.

Q. Barrier?

A. A rope stretched across the front end of the box from which the roper's or steer wrestler's horse comes when the barrier flagman drops the flag.

Q. Breaking the barrier?

A. If the contestant rides through or breaks the barrier before it is released a penalty of 10 seconds is added to his time.

Q. Flank (or flank strap)?

A. A sheepskin lined strap with a self-holding buckle passed around the flank of the bronc or brahma bull that is pulled tight as the animal leaves the chute. In an effort to get rid of the flank strap, the stock bucks higher and harder.

Q. No time?

A. When a flag fieldman waves "no time" it means that the contestant has not caught or thrown his animal properly.

Q. Pickup man?

A. A mounted cowboy who helps the rider off a bronc when the ride is completed.

If you answered 9 of the 10, you rate as an expert cowboy. Eight is good, seven is fair, but if you missed five or more, you'd better arrive early at the Arena and conduct your own question session with one of the contestants.

Denver Rips Blades, 8-2

DENVER — The Denver Invaders crushed the Blades, 8-2, in one of their roughest games of the season Saturday night to even their semifinal Western Hockey League playoff series at one victory each.

The teams move to Los Angeles for the next three games in the best-of-seven series, beginning Monday night, and return to Denver if necessary next Saturday night to wind it up. Los Angeles won the first game Wednesday night, 7-3.

The Invaders, who won the Governor's Cup in a runaway in the regular season play, returned to form. They yielded the first goal of the game to Los Angeles' Jim Baird, then ran up a 7-1 lead before the Blades could connect again on Bob Solinger's goal early in the last period.

• • • •

THE GAME was a near donnybrook from start to finish. A final tally showed an hour and 24 minutes in penalty time charged, including three major infractions and a bench penalty against Los Angeles for delay of game late in the final period.

Three Invaders scored two goals each: Freddy Hucul, Marlin Margetta and Marty Howe, all defensemen. Denver's first five goals were scored by defensemen.

A crowd of 3,782 watched the game at University of Denver Arena.

FIRST PERIOD—1, Los Angeles, Baird (Arnett, Haworth) 1:40. 2, Denver, F. Hucul (S. Hucul, Sleaver) 8:04. 3, Denver, Howe (Lamoureaux) 11:24. Cincy-76er Semi-Final Series Tied

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Big Connie Dierking came off the bench Saturday night to spark Philadelphia to a 129-120 victory over Cincinnati and tie the National Basketball Association Eastern Division semi-finals.

The victory enabled the 76ers to tie the Royals at two wins each and set the stage for the deciding game tonight in Cincinnati.

Dierking scored 21 points, his season's high, to lead Philadelphia to the victory. He got 15 of his points in the second half when the 76ers moved ahead in a tight game.

• • • •

TRAILING by 61-60 at halftime, the 76ers rallied for a 73-73 tie with 7:11 remaining in the third quarter. They went ahead to stay on a drive-in basket by Hal Greer with seven minutes remaining in the third quarter.

Greer finished with 22 points to lead the 76ers while Oscar Robertson took game scoring honors with 31 points. Substitute Tom Hawkins added 25 for the Royals.

the Lakers. Nor did LaRusso.

Pettit scored 23 points against LaRusso while the latter recorded 10 points and 8 rebounds. Pettit did have 12 rebounds, but only ONE assist. Compare that to Baylor.

Coach Fred Schaus of the Lakers said, "West's game was tremendous but the son of a gun still gave away 10 points by throwing the ball away. Although we've lost five games in a row in St. Louis, I think we've played well there and we have a good chance on Monday."

The Lakers managed a 23-23 first-quarter tie against the rough-and-tumble Hawks, fell back by eight at halftime, but burst through with a 34-point effort in the third and maintained an easy advantage therein.

This is the third time that West has scored 39 points against St. Louis during the season.

Anyway, today it's West; Monday it's Midwest and, from there, who knows?

During the half-time intermission, Frank Selvy, popular back-court star of the Lakers for many years, was honored.

He retires at the end of this season and will become an assistant coach at his alma mater, Furman, where he once scored 100 points in a single game.

The first two games of the Western Division finals will be played in San Francisco Wednesday and Friday.

The Lakers, not even counting the playoff games to date, have once again set an all-time NBA home attendance record. Last season's total was 255,462. This season they drew 322,311.

Ashe Falls to Ralston in Two Sets

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP)—Hard-hitting Dennis Ralston and defending champion Charles Pasarell advanced Saturday into the finals of the Phoenix Thunderbird tennis tournament.

Ralston, the nation's second-ranked player and the tourney's second seed, overwhelmed fourth-seeded Arthur Ashe of UCLA, 6-2, 6-4, with a booming serve and strong court game.

Pasarell, a UCLA student from San Juan, Puerto Rico, outlasted stubborn Greg Grant of Phoenix, 13-11, 6-4. In Friday's quarterfinals Pasarell, seeded eighth, eliminated the nation's top-ranked netter, Chuck McKinley, in straight sets.

Two San Francisco girls, Mimi Arnold and Janie Albert, will meet today for the women's title.

NHL Owner Fined

MONTREAL (AP)—Clarence Campbell, president of the National Hockey League, said Saturday he had fined William Jennings, president of the New York Rangers, $500 for invading a referee's dressing room.

Maple Leafs Square Stanley Cup Series

MONTREAL (AP)—Red Kelly and Frank Mahovlich collaborated on back-to-back goals in the first period and the Toronto Maple Leafs defeated the Montreal Canadiens 2-1 Saturday night to square their Stanley Cup semifinals series at one victory each.

Kelly, a 36-year-old veteran appearing in his 130th postseason game, and super-star Mahovlich each scored during a four-minute span. The Leafs, defending Cup champions, held on behind Johnny Bower's brilliant goaltending.

Jean Beliveau thwarted Bower's shutout bid when he scored the Canadiens' goal on a second-period power play.

The best-of-seven games series shifts to Toronto for Tuesday's third contest as well as games 4 and 5.

Jankowski Leading Gentleman in WHL

DENVER (UPI)—Lou Jankowski, leading scorer for the Denver Invaders and league-leader in goals scored, was named winner of the Fred J. Hume trophy Saturday as the most gentlemanly player in the Western Hockey League.

Jankowski was charged with five minor penalties for a total of only 10 minutes in the penalty box.

Shubert Takes Dragster Title

Zane Shubert of Newport Beach drove the Shubert-Herbert Chevrolet fuel dragster to top eliminator honors Saturday night at Lions Drag Strip before 4,850 fans.

Shubert defeated Larry Faust, driving the Long Beach entry of Mooneyham-Ferguson-Jackson which in the semifinal bracket had turned back the formidable Chris Karamasines of Chicago with his 'Chizler.'

Results: Top eliminator (fuel)—Shubert-Herbert 8.69 at and 187.88 mph. Elapsed time—7.95 by Shubert-Herbert and Shelnings-Hampshire (deadheart). Top speed—193.64 mph, Stellings-Hampshire. Top eliminator (gas)—Danny Ongais 8.57 and 169.81 over John Mitchell. Top eliminator $500 (fuel)—Warren-Coburn-Warren won on single run, other failed to fire.

Thai Wins Badminton

SAN DIEGO (UPI)—Channarong Ratanaseanguang of Thailand Saturday captured the men's singles badminton championship of the United States by defeating Jim Poole of San Diego 15-12,17-14.

Hayes Runs 8.7, Comes Up Short

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP)—Bob Hayes, world's fastest human, broke the nine-second mark in what was supposed to be the hundred-yard dash in the 14th annual Florida A and M relays Saturday.

Two officials recorded Hayes time across the tape as 8.8 and a third recorded 8.7. But the run measured only 91 yards.

INJURED HAND BLESSING IN DISGUISE

Besselink Real Swinger, Shoots 65

WILMINGTON, N.C. (UPI)—Al Besselink, now a swinger instead of a puncher, stroked out a seven-under-par 65 Saturday to take the 36-hole lead in the $20,000 Azalea Open golf tournament with a two-round 135.

The big, curly-haired blond from Merchantsville, N. J., who said an injured hand had forced him to sophisticate his swing, came within two strokes of tying the record at the Cape Fear Country Club.

He was nine under par after 36 holes.

Besselink was one stroke better than Bob Gajda of Bloomfield Hills, Mich.

"I used to be a puncher," said Besselink, obviously pleased with his performance. "Look at my hands. They are soft as a violin players. They used to be calloused because I'd grip the club as hard as I could. But not any more. Now I'm a swinger, not a puncher."

The only flaw in his game came on the eighth green where he overshot and then missed a six-foot putt for a bogey—the only bogey of his round. To offset that his card showed eight birdies that came on putts of six, three, three, 15, one, three, 30 and 30 feet.

Joe Campbell, in losing the lead, said, "It just wasn't my day." Five times, he said, his putts hit the cup only to roll around the rim and fail to sink.

Besselink had hurt his hand when his club head struck a tree root.

Besselink was off the tour for the past three years while serving as a club pro at the Philmont Country Club in Philadelphia but returned by entering the Los Angeles Open this year. His last tourney win was the 1957 Kansas City Open.

Besselink picked up $1,000 for being the second round winner and leader after 36 holes.

Meschery Injured, but OK for Playoffs

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Tom Meschery, star forward of the Western Division champion San Francisco Warriors, suffered a fracture in the little finger of his right hand during practice Friday, it was revealed Saturday.

However, Meschery is expected to be able to participate in the first playoff game on Wednesday against either St. Louis or Los Angeles.

BENEFIT GAME

Feller to Hurl Again, Face Williams, Musial

WINTER PARK, Fla. (UPI)—Former Cleveland Indians star and Hall of Fame member Bob Feller is scheduled to test his right arm Monday against two other former major league greats.

FELLER

Feller, Stan Musial and Ted Williams are among the stars scheduled to participate in the opening-day activities of the Rollins College Invitational baseball tournament.

Proceeds from the first day of the week-long tourney will go to the United States Baseball Federation to help finance the sending of a team of college and amateur baseball players to Japan this summer to play several exhibition games during Olympic Games.

The tourney gets under way with a game between Colby and Davidson, followed by one between Duke and Rollins.

Between the games Monday, Feller will pitch to Musial and Williams.

It's What They Say for Pay That Counts

Salaries and purse money in sports are getting bigger and bigger each year. But in many cases they are incidental to the earning power of a top athlete, whose name can bring a small fortune in endorsements, personal appearances and the many business opportunities available to sports leaders.

Most of your veteran athletes who have wisely taken advantage of the opportunities have become independently wealthy.

Mickey Mantle, Roger Maris and Whitey Ford of the New York Yankees have been cashing in heavily the past few years. In fact, all of your name baseball stars do all right for themselves.

ARNOLD PALMER
$100,000 a Year Business

There probably are 40 ballplayers whose salary and outside income surpasses $100,000 a year. Willie Mays, of course, is the highest paid—salarywise. He gets $105,000 a year. Mantle gets $100,000 and Warren Spahn $85,000.

After them, there are 60 to 75 more whose supplementary earnings put them in the $75,000 bracket, while another 30 or 40 are good for $50,000.

Arnold Palmer was known as a "400,000-a-year business" when he was winning only around $50,000 in golfing prize money annually. Now he can count on more than double that amount from all his various enterprises. Jack Nicklaus rapidly is getting into that bracket, too.

Usually, for every dollar the average professional athlete earns in salary or prize money, he can make another dollar from endorsements, personal appearances and business opportunities.

THE LARGER A PERFORMER'S salary or purse, of course, the greater the opportunity to cash in on outside money and investments.

Athletes attract a high number of wealthy businessmen who are constantly giving them financial opportunities on a platter merely for the privilege of being in their company.

From a salary standpoint, the top paid athletes are the heavyweight fighters who fight for the world championship.

No other sports figures made more directly from competition last year than Sonny Liston and Floyd Patterson.

This year, Liston and Cassius Clay will top the list. In fact, if they fight again before January 1, Sonny's net take will be in the neighborhood of $1.5 million AFTER all the people who cut into his purses get their payoffs.

Clay, meanwhile, will collect around $1 million . . . if he fights again this year. Of that sum, $500,000 will go to him outright and another several thousand dollars into a trust fund.

MEANWHILE, HERE IS a rundown of the top salaries in some of the professional sports:

Basketball—Wilt Chamberlain makes in the neighborhood of $75,000 plus bonuses. Elgin Baylor collects $52,000; Oscar Robertson and Bill Russell are in the $40,000 bracket, while Jerry West gets $37,500. Another couple of dozen make over $20,000.

Football—Jimmy Brown is the top paid player at $50,000 . . . but reportedly will ask $75,000 for next season. Other high salaries go up to $40,000—mainly for quarterbacks.

Ice hockey—Highest paid performer is Gordie Howe of the Detroit Red Wings, who gets around $31,000 a year. Two others get as much as $25,000.

Golf—Five players won more than $50,000 in official money last year with Palmer and Nicklaus both going over the $100,000 mark. In golf, more than any other sport, "unofficial" money mounts up fast. Perhaps as many as 40 to 50 touring pros will pick up $50,000 a year . . . and the others from $20,000 to $50,000. A club pro at a busy course can make over $25,000.

BOWLING—Don Carter was the first man in his sport to make $100,000 in a single year, but he was joined by a half-dozen others the past year.

Wrestling—Many performers, as many as 30 or so, make over $50,000 annually.

Pro tennis—Prize money fell off the past year, but about eight performers still made well over $20,000 plus "extras." Ken Rosewall was top man with around $30,000 plus an estimated $20,000 in side money.

Horse racing—As many as 15 to 20 riders will make in excess of $200,000 a year. Willie Shoemaker is good for around $400,000. Top jockeys usually get extra fees in many cases plus 10 percent of the purse money. Another 100 or so jockeys will make between $50,000 and $100,000 annually . . . while any jockey who can ride regularly on as few as 100 cards a year will make over $25,000.

Thus, many of the sports world's tiniest athletes can make more money than all but the heavyweights in boxing.

Browns Sign Bradley Star

CLEVELAND (AP)—Lavern Tart of Bradley University, one of the nation's top collegiate basketball stars, has signed with the Cleveland Browns.

Tart, who is 6-foot-2 and weighs 202 pounds, was selected as the most valuable player in the recent National Invitational Tournament in New York.

The Browns said he will be tested primarily at defensive halfback, but also is a possibility as an offensive end.

Hardwick Winner

PONTIAC, Mich. (UPI)—Billy Hardwick of San Mateo, Calif., whipped fellow California Ed Bourdase of Fresno, 213 to 196, Saturday to capture the $4,000 first prize in the $16,000 North American PBA Open bowling tournament.

500,000 SEE ROWING WIN BY CAMBRIDGE

LONDON (UPI)—Cambridge University's "North American engine room," consisting of a giant American and an even bigger Canadian, poured on its power all the way to crush Oxford by 6½ lengths Saturday in the 110th annual boat race between the two schools.

A crowd of 500,000 lined the shores of the Thames River to watch the classic while Princess Margaret and her husband, Lord Snowden, a former Cambridge coxswain, followed the race in a launch.

With John Kiely of Woodside, Calif., and John Lecky of Vancouver, B.C., a pair of six-foot, four-inch oarsmen who swing the big sweeps like matchsticks, rowing so strongly that the coxswain said, "I thought they were going to pull us right out of the water." Cambridge led all the way in the four-mile, 374-yard test.

49ers Second at Claremont

CLAREMONT—Long Beach State's John Rambo set a meet record and the 49er relay teams won three events Saturday but San Diego edged LBSC for team championship of the Claremont-Mudd Relays.

Rambo cleared 6-9 in the high jump while Jim Richardson took second in the 100 (10.0), Gary Gaudet third and Bob Armstrong fifth. Kent Parson pole vaulted 14-0 for a third.

Jack Rose had winning relay teams in the 2-mile (7:48.4), 440 (42.1) and distance medley (10:22.2).

VARSITY

120-HH—Walker (CP) 14.2 (meet record). Lund (MS), McCracken (Red), Brown (LBSC), Bunyer (Red).
100—Curtis (CP) 9.9, Richardson (LBSC) 10.0, Gaudet (LBSC), Heckler (SD), Armstrong (LBSC).

Senate Seeks to Link Carbo With Cassius

Liston's Pre-Fight Payoff Studied

WASHINGTON (AP)—Senators probing the controversial bout in which Cassius Clay won the heavyweight championship from Sonny Liston headed in a new direction Saturday.

Sen. Kenneth B. Keating, R-N.Y., asked the investigators to determine if associates of Frankie Carbo, former underworld czar of boxing now in prison, were in the Florida training camps of both Clay and Liston.

Keating, a member of the Senate antitrust subcommittee staging the boxing inquiry, offered sworn testimony about a meeting of Carbo here in Washington six years ago with fight world figures as a probable clue.

• • • •

ONE OF those present was said to be Sam Margolis, Philadelphia vending machine operator and long-time associate of Liston to whom Liston gave without payment some $100,000 worth of shares in the promotions corporations.

"I am informed that there is some additional evidence stemming from New York investigations linking the figures in the Clay-Liston fight with the Carbo combine," Keating said, adding:

"I think it is most essential that we discover whether Frank Carbo has reached out from behind prison bars and placed his cohorts in both the Liston and Clay camps."

Sen. Philip A. Hart, D-Mich., chairman of the Senate panel, will resume public hearings Monday on the Clay-Liston bout.

Carbo is now serving a 25-year prison term in the state of Washington for extortion.

Trojans Roll Over Oxy at Coliseum

Occidental's Mike Johnson cleared 15-10 in the pole vault, but the University of Southern California racked up an easy 111-34 track and field victory over the Tigers in the Coliseum Saturday.

The Trojans, last year's national champions, took first place in 15 of the 17 events.

USC's Wellesley Clayton broke the oldest meet record on the books when he turned in a long jump of 25-5. He broke the record which had been set in 1931 by more than a foot.

The USC frosh downed the Tigers, 90-51.

High jump—1, Hoyt, USC, 6-4¾; 2, Manson, Occ., 6-2¾; 3, Block, USC, 5-10¾.
Long jump—1, Clayton, USC, 25-5 (meet record; old record 24-7½, Dick Barber, USC, 1931); 2, Johnson, USC, 23-7¾; 3, Lazaro, Occ., 23-5¾.
Shot put—1, Mills, USC, 54-9¾; 2, Castle, USC, 53-11¾; 3, Wynn, USC, 54-7½.

FREEMAN FLIES IN TRIPLE JUMP

Poly Boy Sets National Mark

By DOUG IVES

Little Larry Freeman bettered a national record and didn't know it, Earl McCullough continued his masterful timber topping and Poly High's track titans kept on winning.

That was the story, or most of it, in the National Record Relays at Bellflower on a warm Saturday afternoon that produced six meet records and Freeman's effort in the seldom-held triple jump.

The 5-8, 132-pound junior hopped, stepped and jumped 46 feet, ¾-inch to at least temporarily claim to be the best prep triple jumper in the nation.

Not to minimize his performance, but the event is just coming into popularity in U.S. high schools and few think Freeman's record application will be ruled upon before someone jumps further.

Freeman didn't know of his record until it was announced publicly.

With a high jump victory at 6-2 to boot, Freeman shared the Earl Ray Memorial Trophy as the meet's top competitor with Ray Felix, who knocked eight seconds off his own mark in the steeplechase.

How much consideration was given to McCullough is not known, but the super senior soared over the low hurdles in a record 18.6, tied the high hurdles standard at 14.3, triple jumped 45-7¾ for third place and anchored Poly's second-place finishing 440 relay team.

He was the top point-grabber for the Rabbits, who outscored chief nemesis Muir, 43-37, by unofficial count. No award is given to the high-point team.

Marv Motley was the other Poly winner, long jumping 23-1½, two inches shy of the record. The defending CIF champ was in fine form, exceeding 22 feet on all seven tries.

Known for their speed, the Hares could gain only nine points with a second, fourth and three fifths in relay races. But McCullough, Freeman, Motley and soph shotputter John Hubbell (55-3¾) and high hurdler Ron Wilson (14.7) combined for 34 points.

Poly's city rival, Wilson, had a good day, too. The Bruins picked up 11 points for a seventh-place finish. They came in second in both the distance medley and 8-man mile.

Bob Deeds' strong anchor leg sparked the mile relay, while Doug Lofgren, Rob Russell, Jim Druckenmiller and Hartzell Alpizar teamed for runner-up honors in the other race.

Millikan won a second in 4-man, 4-mile with Tom Welte, Ralph Spicer and Jim Busher clocking around 4:36 and Charles Webb 4:29.0.

Surprise loser was Warren's Paul Wilson, who could only climb over 14 feet in the pole vault and had to settle for second place behind Buena's Tom Dullam (14-5¼).

TRACK ROUNDUP

Uelses Climbs Record 16-1¼ in Easter Relays

Compiled from Wire Reports

John Uelses cracked his own Santa Barbara Easter Relays pole vault record Saturday by clearing 16-1¼ to better by one inch the altitude he reached when he became the first man to exceed 16 feet in the pole vault in 1962.

Hard-luck youngster was Charlie Craig of Fresno State who bettered the American collegiate triple-jump record with a leap of 52-1½.

But the wind gauge was in operation on the opposite side of the field and it's doubtful a national record will be approved.

Dave Davis of the Camp Pendleton Marines beat out Parry O'Brien by one-quarter inch with a throw of 60-10¼.

In the San Diego Relays, Jim Grelle of the L.A. Track Club ran 4:01.3, the fastest outdoor mile of the season, and Dyrol Burleson won the 3,000 meters in 8:06.9.

Jerry Siebert returned to action after nearly a two-year absence and captured the half-mile in 1:50.2 in a non-scoring track and field meet on the California oval.

Cal sprint ace Forrest Beaty was a member of the winning 440-yard relay; finished second in 100 in 9.8; won the 220 in 21.6; and then ran a leg on the winning mile-relay team.

Distance-runner Ben Tucker, with wins in the mile and two-mile runs, led San Jose State to an 85-60 triumph over Stanford.

Tucker ran the mile in 4:05.2 and came back with an 8:57.2 clocking in the two mile.

Freshman Del McNabb of LSU broke the national freshman javelin mark in the LSU invitational track meet at Baton Rouge.

McNabb hurled the javelin 252-4.

Gerry Moro's record-breaking pole vault leap of 15-4, backed up by Martin Frank's second-place effort, gave Oregon's highly-favored Webfoots the edge they needed to fight back the challenge of Oregon State and Washington State and win the Far West Relays at Seattle.

DUFFER BAGS BASS INSTEAD OF BIRDIE

PANAMA CITY, Fla. (AP)—What Dr. Harry Goldner wanted when he played the seventh hole at the Panama City Country Club was a birdie.

What he got was a fish.

Goldner, a visitor from Birmingham, Ala., hooked an iron shot into a lake Friday and his ball struck a three-pound bass swimming near the surface.

He lost the ball, but he recovered the stunned fish and had it baked for his dinner.

Fishin' Around

By DONNELL CULPEPPER

Repeat of Grunion Guessing Game

If you can pick the right spot on the right beach at the right time on the right night, you may be able to solve the grunion mystery and have a delightful fish dinner. Tonight's the night for another round of grunion runs—four of them, but only three are legal. The fourth is in April, and both April and May are closed months.

April and May are the peak spawning months and the Department of Fish and Game protects the tiny, silvery fish as a conservation measure. Open season resumes in June and the first four-night run is scheduled for June 11.

Back to tonight's run: it is scheduled for 10 to 11 o'clock. Monday's run is due at 10:30 p.m. for an hour. Tuesday's is slated for 11:30 p.m. and, naturally it runs into the wee hours of April 1. I don't think that any DFG warden is going to show at such a ghastly hour to give you a citation.

It is illegal, says the DFG, to dig holes in the sand where the little tail-dancers could be trapped. There is no bag limit, but the DFG asks that you take no more than you can use.

If you are 16 years of age or older, you need the regular three-dollar general sportfishing license, good for any kind of fishing in the ocean, but not good for lakes and streams, warm-water fish and trout.

SOME OF THOSE LUNKERS in Isabella Lake are beginning to hit the baits. Surprisingly, both large trout and bass are being taken. Although it is not legal to fish for trout in the Kern River, which flows into Isabella, until May 2, you may take the rainbows in the lake.

Numbers of the big fish were washed into the lake last year when a flood knocked out some DFG brood ponds upstream from Kernville. Just a few days ago Ernest Menard, Ridgecrest, got an 8½-pounder, the largest trout ever taken from Isabella Lake.

Several fish ranging from three to six pounds were caught by others in the Camp 9 area. In the week just ended more trout in the three-to-five-pound classes were caught. Night crawlers seemed to be the best bait.

Biggest news of the week, however, was the great bass catch that Pete Donaldson and his wife, of San Pedro, did in the South Fork. Pete took five bass (legal limit) which weighed 35 pounds, 11 ounces. That's more than seven pounds average.

Not to be outdone, Mrs. Donaldson caught five fish. The weights ranged from 6 to 7¼ pounds. F. Tedora, Wofford Heights, fishing with the Donaldsons, also caught a limit. It would appear that Tedora and the Donaldsons have the Indian sign on Isabella bass.

Oh yes, lots of other anglers weighed in nice strings of crappie and bluegill.

FAR MORE IMPORTANT than just this fish report is a story about the Kern River water users agreeing to keep the water level of Isabella at 30,000 acre feet or more the year 'round.

The water level dropped to 15,000 acre feet in 1961 and it was Isabella's worst year from a recreational standpoint.

Jack Magoffin, Sherwood Lake concessionaire, reported that the lake had one of its best openings in history last Saturday, with many catches of bass to five pounds and large strings of crappie. Anglers also found plenty of catfish averaging about 14 inches.

Although the water level of Sherwood is down, Magoffin has arranged a tram service from the parking lot to the docks, thereby saving his customers from a tiresome walk with all their gear.

Lake Wohlford had rain, hail, cold and vicious winds for its opening weekend, but all that weather didn't stop 3,000 fishermen from trying their luck. Most of those really had good luck. Lake personnel checked 260 limits of trout, ranging from one-half pound to three pounds.

Channel catfish, mostly five and six pounds, with one weighing 9-7, were the second in numbers. Also, there were plenty of bullheads, but few crappie and bluegill. Some bass weighing three and four pounds were taken.

OUTDOOR PERSONALS—A badly injured wild animal has just about as much chance for survival as does a tortoise trying to cross the Long Beach Freeway, but there are exceptions. Such as the hen pheasant a biologist found in South Dakota.

Her legs had beeen cut off about 1½ inches below the feathered portion when she encountered a mowing machine. The stub ends were club-shaped, but the pheasant ran several yards on those before taking to the air. The biologist finally captured the hen. She weighed 2 pounds, 3 ounces and was in excellent shape.

Big things ahe popping in the outdoor field this week. First of all, the Los Angeles Sportsmen's Show opens Thursday at Pan-Pacific Auditorium. It continues through the 12th.

The National Rifle Association has its convention at the Ambassador Hotel April 4 through 8 and there will be some terrific exhibits of guns, both modern and ancient firing pieces.

There will be another breed of personalities celebrating at Lake Elsinore Saturday. Bill Kent, of the Pacific Coast Speedboat and Water-Skiing Association, is coordinating an all-day water show to celebrate the formal opening of the lake, which is now filled and which is being used by boaters.

Troy Retains Swim Crown in Surprise

Saari Paces Upset With Third Record

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (UPI)—Southern California swept from behind with three gold medals Saturday night to win the NCAA swimming and diving championships in which existing meet or NCAA records were broken in every event.

Heavily favored Indiana was second with 91 points, five behind Southern Cal, and Yale was third with 87.

Roy Saari, sensational Southern Cal sophomore, lifted the Trojans from third place with his third NCAA and meet record of the championships, winning the 1,650-yard freestyle event.

Saari was clocked in 16:49 to eclipse the old record of 17:24 set by Jon Konrads (USC) last year.

* * * *

BILL CRAIG won the 100-yard breaststroke, Bob Bennett captured the 100-yard backstroke title for the Trojans and Southern Cal wrapped up the championship in the final event—the 400-yard freestyle—finishing third to upset Indiana, which finished a disappointing fifth.

The defending champion Trojans were only one point ahead of Indiana going into the relay and wasn't expected to do much better than fourth or fifth, while Indiana was conceded at least third place.

1,650-freestyle — Saari (USC) 16:49.3 (meet, NCAA record); Farley (Mich.) 16:56.1; McAneney (I.) 17:10.2; Foss (USC) 17:21.8; Dudley (Mich.) 17:29.3.
100-freestyle—Clark (Yale) 46.3 (meet, NCAA record); Austin (Yale) 46.7; Van Kemen (Wesleyan) 47.4; Marker (Wash. St.) 47.5; Geoghegan (Vill.) 47.7.
100-breaststroke—Craig (USC) 59.9 (meet record); Trethewey (Indiana) 1:00.8; Dockeray (USC) 1:01.5; Luken (Minn.) 1:01.6; Frost (Indiana) 1:01.8.
100-backstroke — Bennett (USC) 53.1 (meet, NCAA record); McGeorge (USC) 53.1; Mass (N. Car.) 53.2; Graef (Pitt.) 53.5; Bartsch (Mich.) 54.2.
400-butterfly—Richardson (Minn.) 50.2 (meet, NCAA record); Schmidt (Indiana) 51.6; Hall (Stanford) 52.1; Schultheis (Indiana) 52.2; Kennedy (Yale) 52.3.
3-meter diving—Larson (Ohio St.) 520.75 pts.; (Meet record); Boothman (Mich.) 499.35; Gilbert (Indiana) 492.75; Morse (Indiana) 478.60; Early (Indiana) 438.30.
400-freestyle relay—Yale 3:06.7 (meet, NCAA record); Villanova 3:14.4; USC 3:15.8; North Carolina 3:12.1; Indiana 3:13.3; SMU 3:13.4.
Team scores—USC 96, Indiana 91, Yale 87, Michigan 30, Minnesota 22, N. Carolina 13, Ohio St. 12, Villanova 12, Princeton 10, SMU 8, Wesleyan 8, S. Illinois 7, Wash. St. 7, Stanford 5.

Stallworth, Murrell Sink East All-Stars

LEXINGTON, Ky. (UPI)—Kansas State's Willie Murrell and Wichita's Dave Stallworth combined Saturday to power the West to a 79-78 victory over a shorter East team in the National Association of Basketball Coaches all-star basketball game.

Murrell, voted the game's "star of stars," gunned 20 points on a dazzling variety of shots. Stallworth came through with a pair of free throws and a basket in the last minute-and-a-half.

'Naked' Truth Reveals Ancient Pros, Payoffs

By JIM BECKER

OLYMPIA, Greece (AP)—This is going to come as a shock to a certain set of people, but the fellows who ran in the ancient Olympic Games were about as amateur as the Chicago Bears.

The athletes were as finely trained as a modern boxer, and they traveled with the same sort of entourage as Cassius Clay, complete with trainers, rubdown men and cheer leaders.

They trained and competed all year around. And they never worked at all.

The Games, which were staged for 1,168 years in this once-splendid sanctuary of the god Zeus, were religious festivals. The Greeks — who invented logic but were as superstitious as everybody else in the old world—believed the winners at the Games had been selected by the gods.

They put up statues to the victors, wrote poems about them and showered them with gold. Their bills were paid for the rest of their lives.

Every big city in ancient Greece had its own stadium and its own Games. There were 30 to 40 of them, and a good athlete could travel from one to the next, year in and year out, picking up prizes.

It's in the record book.

The athletes ran naked, or at least they did after one Orsippus dropped his pants, possibly by accident, and won the sprint. It was decided after that that clothing slowed the runners down. Women were not allowed at Olympia.

Nobody knows for sure how good the ancient Greeks were, but it is known that some of them were as huge as modern football defensive tackles.

The broad jumpers carried weights in each hand to increase their distance, and one recorded a leap of 50 feet. Historians would like to discount that—it is about 23 feet past the modern mark—but all other parts of the account check out.

Maybe they used fiber glass takeoffs.

The Greeks, of course, had no watches for timing races, and kept no official records of distances in field events.

PLAY STARTS WEDNESDAY

Flying Wheels Defend Title in N.Y.

The national champion Long Beach Flying Wheels will depart Monday night to begin defense of their title Wednesday at the National Wheelchair Basketball Tournament at Queen's College in New York.

The Wheels will open play at noon against the Kansas City Pioneers.

Long accustomed to top seeding, the Wheels find themselves pegged fourth in this year's tourney.

An outstanding field of 10 teams led by Brooklyn, New York, Indianapolis and Long Beach will compete for four days with the finals slated for 3 p.m. Saturday.

Long Beach will take an impressive 84-2 record over the past five years into the tournament. The Wheels have not lost to an Eastern team since 1958, their two defeats coming at the hands of the Garden Grove Bears.

All-America Bill Johnson and John Cheves, who have led the team in scoring over the years, appear to be in top form. Center Erle Gerard has been ailing slightly and, according to coach Russ Churchman, is a doubtful starter.

The addition of Phil Ramsey will give the Wheels much needed help at a guard spot if it becomes necessary to move Cheves to center.

Team members making trip include Frank Vecera, Roger Robinson, Hubert Smith, Gerard, Johnson, Cheves, Ramsey, Lowell Brant and Churchman.

Rams '5' at Dominguez

The Los Angeles Rams basketball team will meet the Hollywood All-Stars in a benefit game for the Dominguez High stadium fund Friday night.

The game will be played in the Dominguez High gym with the tip-off slated for 8. The Dominguez High School Boosters Club is sponsoring the event.

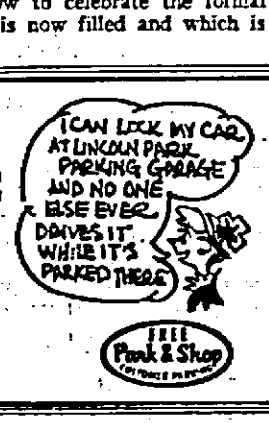

If in town, any of the following will play for Hollywood: Pat Boone, Gardner McKay, Phil Crosby, Johnny Mathis, Rafer Johnson, Don Murray and James McArthur.

Suiting up for the Rams, Ed Meador, Red Phillips, Carver Shannon, Art Hunter, Joe Scibelli, Pervis Atkins, Marlin McKeever and Jack Pardee.

Record Dead Heat in S.D. Pace

By ERNIE MASON

In one of the most thrilling duels in Western Harness' history, Rusty Range and Mr. Budlong battled to a deadheat for victory in the $10,000 San Diego Pace Saturday before 16,604 roaring fans at Santa Anita.

Mr. Budlong, desperately urged on by driver Jimmy Cruise, drew exactly even with Rusty Range and pilot Willard Niles in the very last stride to gain the "tie" in the sizzling time of 1:58 1/5, fastest mile in the U.S. this year and a world record for a deadheat.

Shadydale Monitor was third, favored Irvin Paul fourth and they were trailed by Star Gem and Pole Adios.

Rusty Range and Mr. Budlong, plus their followers, will be rematched next Saturday in the $20,000 Californian Pace, WHRA's climactic event for sidewheelers at the spring meeting.

Rusty Range, hero of the Harness Tracks of America finale last year, rewarded his backers with $6, $6.20 and $5, while Mr. Budlong, the gritty veteran campaigner with earnings of nearly $300,000, paid $4, $3.60 and $3.20. Shadydale Monitor returned $7.80.

From the start, the San Diego Pace had all the aspects of a classic. Pole Adios boiled to the front from his outside position, with Irvin Paul dogging his heels and Rusty Range and Mr. Budlong well back.

Heading into the turn, Charlie King zoomed into command and opened up 1½ lengths, with Rusty Range going by Pole Adios, Shadydale Monitor moving into contention and Mr. Budlong launching his bid for Cruise.

Shadydale Monitor's challenge was repulsed by the courageous Rusty Range. But meanwhile Cruise had found daylight and was picking up the leader with every stride.

Mr. Budlong drew within a neck of Rusty Range at about the sixteenth pole, hung there momentarily as Rusty Range fought back valiantly, then dug in again to earn the deadheat in the last exciting stride.

The crowd was kept in suspense for many minutes as the judges studied the picture and finally determined that both horses hit the wire as a team.

The former world record for a deadheat was 1:59 4/5 by Ensign Hal and Meadow Gold in 1954 at Hollywood Park.

RACING ROUNDUP

Cedar Key Zips to Florida Win

Cedar Key returned to his native land from out of the West Saturday and turned back the best grass runners in Florida to win the $59,750 Donn Turf Handicap at Gulfstream Park.

However, the Donn was anticlamactic, as Windfield Farm's Canadian-owned Northern Dancer dashed seven furlongs under the same jockey, Manuel Ycaza, in record-equaling 1:22 during a warmup for the Florida and Kentucky Derbies.

Ycaza held the long-legged Cedar Key in fourth position throughout most of the mile-and-one-half on the infield course, then shot him to the front entering the stretch to win by two and one-half lengths.

The dark bay gelding carried top weight of 122 pounds and completed the route in 2:26, only one-fifth of a second off the track record.

Cedar Key was only a luke warm favorite although he had won the rich San Juan Capistrano Handicap at Santa Anita. He paid $8.40, $4.60 and $3.80. Parka was worth $4.20 and $3.60 for place and show while Suspicious returned $6.60.

• • • •

AHOY, carrying 130 pounds for the first time in his career, set a track record of 1:10 3/5 for 6 furlongs to win the $22,275 Capitol Handicap at Laurel in Maryland.

Ahoy returned $2.60 and $2.20. Cosdave and Near Man returned $2.20. There was no show wagering.

Rocky Link dropped his nose in front just at the wire and won the 40th running of the $29,150 Westchester Stakes at Aqueduct in New York.

Carrying 114 pounds, Rocky Link was clocked in 1:35 1/5 and paid $23.30, $11 and $7.40. Bonjour returned $5.10 and $3.90 and Morry E. was $5 to show.

Rockets to Meet Lone Conqueror

The Los Angeles Eagles, the only team to defeat the Long Beach Rockets during the Winter Semipro Baseball League this year, provide the opposition for Long Beach in an Easter Sunday contest today at Blair Field at 1:30.

Last Sunday's game with the Valley Dodgers was canceled because of rain so the Rockets are still looking for their fourth win in a row. Their overall record this year is 18-3.

Blassie to Defend

Roy (Kangaroo) Hefferman is the next challenger for Freddie Blassie's heavyweight championship belt. They'll clash Tuesday night at Municipal Auditorium.

Florida Race on TV

The $100,000 added Florida Derby will be covered by KTTV (11) next Saturday from 4:30 to 5 p.m. The classic for three-year-olds from Gulfstream Park in Hallandale Florida, is one of the important warmups for the Kentucky Derby in May.

GOOD PAY IN AUTOMATION TRAIN FOR IBM CAREER

CHARLES WOLFF, M.B.A.
Educational Director
AUTOMATION INSTITUTE

One of America's most fascinating, fastest-growing fields for career opportunities & advancement is Automated Data Processing. It's a field where companies are SEARCHING for employes.

Let's assume you want to become an IBM Operating and Wiring Specialist. In just a few months, at Automation Institute, you can master the basic techniques of Business Automation. With ability and confidence you operate sorters, collators, accounting machines, interpreters, reproducing punches, and other modern "tools" of Automated Data Processing. You also plan and diagram new Data Processing procedures.

As an IBM Operating & Wiring Specialist you are a leader in your field. With your special skills—and the high-speed equipment at your command—you can perform in a matter of minutes an accounting job that would once have taken an entire staff many days to complete.

As an Operating & Wiring Specialist, you work in a pleasant, comfortable office (the modern Automated Data Processing department is a "showcase" of the progressive organization). Your associates are intelligent, well-informed, interesting men and women.

Your work is indispensable to management. You are stimulated and secure in your career. Your responsibilities are varied and challenging. Professional growth, higher salaries and increased responsibility are your prospects for the future. Does all this sound too good to be true? Not at all!

The chances are excellent that you can qualify for a leadership career in Automated Data Processing. No special mechanical or mathematical skills are needed. If you have the ability to think logically and accurately . . . and a desire to learn and grow . . . you can be trained for success at AUTOMATION INSTITUTE.

You can qualify to train as an Operating and Wiring specialist
- By successfully completing a personal interview in which your educational & work experience is evaluated.
- By passing an aptitude analysis.

Results of your analysis, which is given by appointment and is free of charge, will be discussed with you by your counselor immediately after completion. Only those suited for Automated Data Processing studies are admitted.

Tuition is reasonable and deferred payment can be arranged. You may enroll in either morning, afternoon or evening courses. The evening program, which takes a little longer, enables you to hold a full or part-time day job. Moreover, when you complete your Operating and Wiring training you can qualify to take Automation Institute's Computer Programming Course. In every way, the comprehensive Operating & Wiring Course is your springboard to success.

Additional information about courses and tuition may be obtained by calling, writing or visiting AUTOMATION INSTITUTE.

L.B. State to Host Gym Stars

Long Beach State College, newly-crowned state champion, will host some of America's top gymnasts for the fifth annual Long Beach Invitational Gymnastics Meet Friday at 8 p.m. in the 49er gym.

Ken Bartlett, LBSC coach and meet director, expects a turnout of more than 50 of the best high school, JC and college gymnasts around. Competition will be on an individual basis in eight events.

In addition to the outstanding local talent, Bartlett has recruited gymnasts from some of the top teams in the U.S., led by Penn State's Mike Jacobson, the top scorer. The Big Ten will be represented along with the University of Arizona and Cal (Berkeley) among others.

Long Beach State's Vic Taggart and Mini Inouye will enter the competition on the rings with Fred Wantland on the parallel bars. Jim Mills, California's number two all-around performer, may miss the meet because of an ankle injury.

The 49ers' Don Devendorf will perform on the side horse and parallel bars where he finished first in state competition a few weeks back.

Other Southland talent on hand will include Dave Smith of San Fernando State. Smith is the current all-round and horizontal champion in California. Tony Bautista, free exercise title holder from Cal-State (L.A.) will also be on hand.

Softballers Set to Play at Gardena

Eight of the top area softball teams will compete in the Gardena Tournament beginning Monday at 7:30 p.m. at Gardena City Park.

There will be two games nightly through Saturday, with single games the three concluding nights of the tourney.

This will be a double-elimination tournament with the hosting world champion Gardena Merchants opposing Gopher City in Monday's curtain-raiser. In the nightcap at 9 the Oxnard Merchants will meet Karl's Shoes.

• • • •

TUESDAY at 7:30 Paramount Chevrolet of Downey will meet Los Alamitos, and at Etiwanda, formerly the Pamona Bombers will meet Monterey Park.

The tourney will conclude Monday, April 6, or Tuesday, April 7, if the loser's bracket team should force a final game.

The Long Beach Nitehawks will work out Monday, Wednesday and Friday at Park Avenue Field.

Doug Ballard's Lakewood team is preparing for the opening of the Pan-American Tournament slated to get under way April 17.

FORD CORTINAS IN LEAD

66 of 94 Remain in Grueling African Safari Auto Rally

NAIROBI, Kenya (UPI) — Sixty-six of the original 94 starters left here Saturday on the second leg, 1,753 miles, in the 3,183-mile East African Safari auto rally with most observers asking whether the Swedish ace Erik Carlsson will catch the two Ford Cortinas ahead of him.

Only three points divide the first three cars—Mike Armstrong and Chris Bates, Cortina, with 18 points lost; Peter Hughes and Billy Young, Cortina, 19 points down; and Carlsson in his Saab, 20 points.

The Cortinas head the team position, followed by Mercedes, Saab and Ford Zodiac Zephyrs. It could well mean an overall win for Carlsson, and if so, he will be the first overseas driver to take this rally. But the team prize looks certain to go to the Cortinas.

Major casualties on the northern leg were the Swedish Volvos, which still have two left in the rally, but are piling up heavy penalty points — likewise, Lincoln Mercury Comets with three heavily penalized cars are just managing to stay in the rally by the skin of their teeth.

• • • •

DRIVERS arriving from the north leg this morning told the usual mud bath story. There were also many complaints of stone throwing. One driver said burning brands had been thrown at his car.

Safari veteran Vic Preston, in a Zodiac 111, described the northern leg as "bloody as ever," while a Mercedes driver said, "I never want to drive over Taimbach again. It was absolutely terrifying."

The Peugoet 404's are staying quietly in the center of the rally. They have had no casualties among the 12 cars entered. Last year the rally was won by a Peugot.

Alaska Newsman Watches Temblor Wreck His House

(Editor and Publisher Robert B. Atwood of the Anchorage Daily Times watched his home torn apart in the twisting, heaving movements of Anchorage's disastrous earthquake late Friday. Here is his story.)

By ROBERT B. ATWOOD
The Anchorage Daily Times

ANCHORAGE Alaska (AP)—Mrs. Atwood was leaving for the grocery store when I arrived home from the office about 5:30 Friday evening. I thought of going with her.

Then, I decided to stay home and practice on my trumpet while the house was empty.

I could blow loud without disturbing anyone.

I had just started doing precisely that when the earthquake started. Minor earthquakes are not uncommon here but they always prompt me to stop what I am doing and watch what happens.

* * * *

IT WAS QUICKLY OBVIOUS that this earthquake was no minor one. The chandelier made from a ship's wheel swayed too much. Things were falling that have never fallen before.

I headed for the door, carrying my trumpet. At the door I saw walls weaving. I was still carrying my trumpet.

On the driveway I turned and watched my house squirm and groan, as though in last mortal agony. It was as though someone had engaged it in a gigantic taffy pull, stretching it, shrinking it and twisting it.

I became aware of the falling of tall trees in our yard and I moved to a spot where I thought I would be safe.

* * * *

AS I MOVED, I SAW CRACKS appear in the earth, pieces of ground in jigsaw-puzzle shapes moved up and down, tilted at all angles.

As I started to climb the fence to my neighbor's yard, the fence disappeared.

Trees were falling in crazy patterns. Deep chasms opened.

Table-size pieces of earth moved upward to stand like toadstools with great overhangs.

A chasm opened beneath me. I tumbled down. Soft sand cushioned the impact. I was quickly on the verge of being buried. I was only one of many bits of debris tumbling into that chasm.

* * * *

I COULDN'T PULL MY RIGHT arm from the sand . . . it was buried to the shoulder. Most of the rest of my body was also covered. I let go of my trumpet and my arm pulled free easily.

Somehow, even in that perilous position, I felt the loss keenly. I felt I had just lost my last contact with many things associated with a happy home.

My neighbor's home slowly collapsed and slid into the chasm. For a time, it threatened to come down on top of me.

When the earth movement stopped, I climbed to the top of the wall of my chasm. I found angular landscape in every direction.

I found my neighbor, Warren Hines, with his son and young daughter.

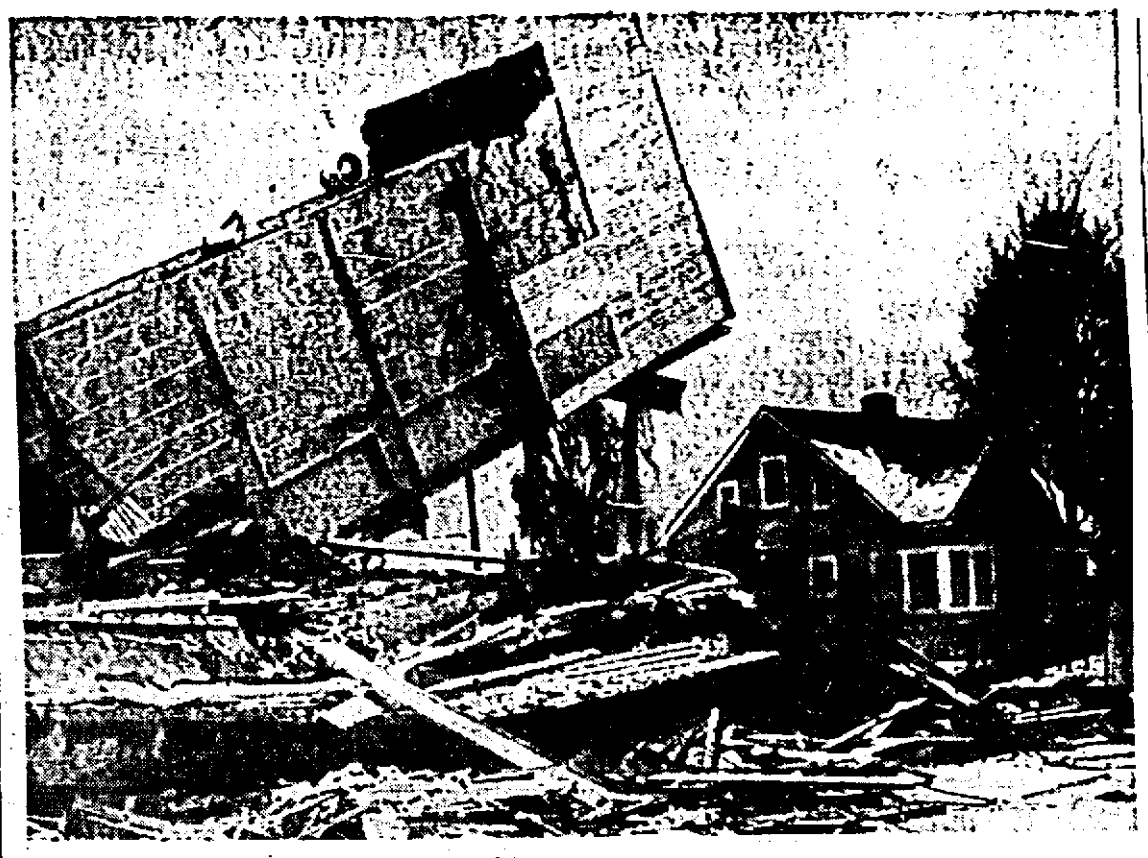

* * * *

WE FOUND HIS WIFE STANDING alone with her auto, marooned on one of the mushroom-like outcrops.

We crawled under dangerous overhanging pieces of frozen ground to safety.

The children responded marvelously. Never a whimper.

Helicopters were overhead but they couldn't land near us. After what seemed to be endless time, rescuers helped us out of the quagmire that had once been home.

THIS WAS A SIX-STORY BUILDING
A nearly completed six-story luxury apartment building at Anchorage, Alaska, was shattered in the giant earthquake which shook the state Friday. More than 85 lost their lives in the disaster and damage to property ran into the millions of dollars.

No Nightmare, This Was Worse

(Editor's Note: Chester Stygar was asleep in Crescent City when sea water started rising in his room. This is his story.)

By CHESTER STYGAR
As told to Jack Schreibman, Associated Press Writer

CRESCENT CITY (AP)—You ever been through a nightmare?

We were asleep in our two bedroom apartment at Van's Motel, my wife and I, when she suddenly woke up.

The baby woke up, too. My wife said, "Chester, I hear a noise at the door—get up."

I put my feet on the floor and there was a foot of water in the room. I tried putting the lights on but they wouldn't work.

* * * *

THE BABY was screaming and I tell you I was scared. Jean took the baby, Carmen, in her arms.

I heard a noise out back and I opened up the back door and all I could see was the ocean. The last time I saw the ocean out the back door it was a quarter of a mile away.

I felt the whole building float up, like it was on a cloud.

* * * *

I OPENED the front door to try to escape with my wife and baby. All I saw in the blackness was water and things rushing back and forth. We didn't dare go out there.

My wife got hysterical and the baby was hollering. I told her that if anything happened and the building fell apart she and the baby should make for the boat. But there was nothing to do.

The house was rocking around and it was black and the gas started smelling. I didn't dare light a match. I told her to sit down on the couch and sit tight.

* * * *

"MY GOD," she cried, "we're flooded. We're flooded."

A few minutes later we felt the house settle down. Everything seemed to close in on us. The gas, the water, the awful black.

Pretty soon I looked out the front door and people were running from all directions. There are some nice people in the world. This family took us in, set us in front of a warm fire and gave us clothes.

145 Injured in Japanese Train Wreck

TOKYO, Sunday (AP)—An express passenger train rammed into the rear of another passenger train at Nagoya, central Japan, today and first reports said at least 145 were injured.

Police said the one train was stopped at the station when it was hit by the express, which was slowing for its own stop. Both were crowded with holiday passengers.

Early reports said there were no deaths and the relatively slow speed of the ramming train was believed to have prevented a major disaster.

Kyodo News Service, reporting from Nagoya, 175 miles southwest of Tokyo, said ambulances sped injured passengers to 11 different hospitals in the 1.8-million-population city.

L.B. Burglars' Loot Totals $1,244

Police were searching late Saturday for burglars who entered the home of Walter E. Durbin, 2849 San Vicente Ave., and made off with loot valued at $1,244.

Officers said Durbin reported the loss of a number of personal articles, including a $750 diamond wristwatch, when thieves broke into his home between 5 p.m. and 8:30 p.m. Friday.

Rest Cure Ordered

KINGSTON, Jamaica (AP)—Prime Minister Sir Alexander Bustamante, on doctors' orders, is taking indefinite leave for a rest cure and is expected to visit the New York World's Fair.

Copter Rescue Units Head for Alaska

LIMESTONE, Maine (AP)—Loring Air Force Base said it was preparing Saturday to send a helicopter rescue unit along with similar units from Dow AFB, Bangor, and Westover, Mass., AFB to the scene of the disastrous earthquake at Anchorage, Alaska.

Loring said the units, each consisting of one HH43B Huskie copter with a four-man crew are being flown to Alaska aboard a C24 Globemaster. The copters were first being dismantled.

LBJ Calls for Food Probe

JOHNSON CITY, Tex. (AP)—President Johnson called Saturday for an investigation of the gap in food prices—the spread between what producers get and consumers pay. The emphasis would be on meat prices.

At one of his surprise Saturday news conferences, Johnson also:

—Took issue with Sen. J. W. Fulbright's critical views of administration policy toward Cuba and Panama.

—Said he is planning to visit pockets of poverty and unemployment at some time not yet set. But he does not intend to make a flying trip to view Alaskan earthquake areas.

—Hailed the release of two American pilots who were shot down by the Russians over East Germany.

Johnson covered these and an array of other topics in the crowded, pine-paneled library-office of the big stone-and-frame LBJ ranchhouse on the bank of the Pedernales River.

He was attired in range-country garb, from brown, high-heeled boots to wide-brimmed hat, beige shirt, slacks and jacket with his initials on the pocket. He sat behind a spacious mahogany desk or paced behind it while he fired off announcements and answered questions.

Mrs. Johnson listened in at the back of the room. She was wearing tan stretch pants, a tan turtle-neck sweater and embroidered tan boots.

One announcement was that the President was preparing to ask Congress for legislation to create a bipartisan commission of 15 to study changes he said are taking place in the food industry.

As an illustration of what the commission would get at, Johnson cited this situation:

"We have some commodities today where the producer is receiving 25, 30 percent less and we have the housewife who is paying 25 or 30 percent more—or about the same as a year ago.

One Swept Out to Sea

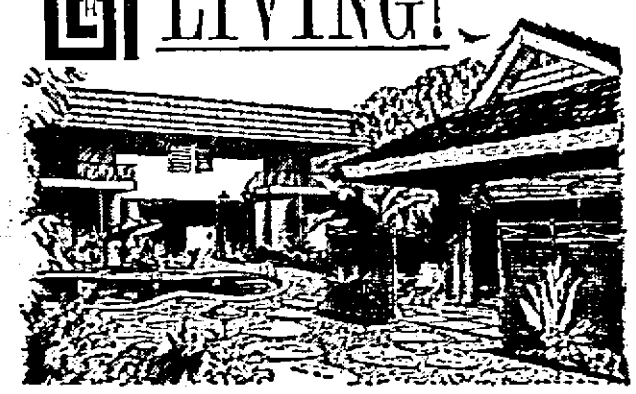

KLAMATH (AP) — The first tidal wave that roared up the Klamath River early Saturday swept two Air Force sergeants off their feet and carried one out to sea.

Sgts. Donald Mclure, 33, and Robert Harrington were fishing for eel at the mouth of the Klamath when the huge wave knocked them off their feet at 12:09 a.m. and carried them upriver.

Harrington made it to the riverbank, a witness said, but McClure, whose father lives in Akron, Ohio, clung to a piece of driftwood and was carried out to sea as the wave receded.

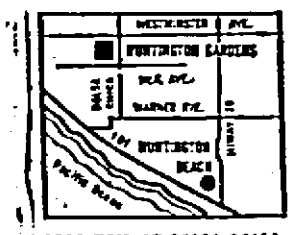

McClure is survived by his widow, Hisako, and three small children.

"I WILL NEVER HAVE TO FACE THIS PROBLEM ALONE!"

"When my husband suggested we talk to the Rose Hills man about before-need memorial property, I knew he was thinking of the unnecessary suffering my friends went through because they had not planned ahead.

"We arranged a Family Protection Plan, while we both could choose what we wanted, without emotional pressures. He says he feels ten years younger, with the peace of mind he gained, knowing that I will never have to face this problem alone. He has proven his love beyond mere words.

"We certainly are glad we chose Rose Hills. Its beauty is so natural, with rolling hills, lovely lawns and gardens, and no headstones or monuments, it looks more like a park than a cemetery. There were so many beautiful sections from which to choose, and we found just what we wanted.

"We know, too, that Rose Hills will always be as lovely as it is today for they have that government-supervised Endowment Care Fund.

"By planning ahead, we gained financially, too. We were able to arrange a monthly payment plan that fits our budget perfectly, a plan which minimizes the cost to us.

"And as one of those little extra touches you always appreciate, the Rose Hills man gave us a handy Estate Portfolio for our important papers. It has containers for insurance, real estate papers, stocks and bonds and other vital records, properly catalogued so they are easy to find. He told us this portfolio is free to anyone interested."

This reaction is typical of that of thousands of wives, whose husbands had the foresight to plan in advance. Why don't you talk to the man from Rose Hills soon? Arrange an appointment by phone, or better still, send in the coupon for your free Estate Portfolio.

THE BUSINESS WEEK

Stocks Finish on Note of Greater Optimism

By C. J. NARNOW

NEW YORK (UPI)—Stocks finished on a more optimistic note this holiday-shortened week and prices perked up from a four-day slump.

Prices opened the week's first session on a mixed note then closed lower. The same performance was repeated Tuesday. Wednesdays opening presented the same picture but before the noon hour steels had taken the initiative and moved higher, taking the rest of the market with them.

Thursday's performance was good but somewhat stunted by the upcoming Good Friday holiday and the evening up of books which normally precedes a long weekend.

Brokers were pleased by the revival of interest in steels and other cyclical stocks and the growing interest in the secondary shares and those which have not participated in the advance so far. They felt that as interest spread throughout the list it will help sustain the market.

• • • •

MOST BROKERS viewed the four-day slump as a healthy sign. An advisory service went as far as to say the fundamentally strong issues appeared to be refreshing themselves before advancing.

The economic horizon continued mostly clear. Toward the end of the week the market got word that although machine took orders, business' vote of confidence in the economy had fallen 25.7 per cent last month, they were still 32 per cent ahead of February 1963.

Expansion plans announced by a number of corporations also gave brokers cause for optimism.

About the only dampening factors in the outlook are the possibility of a strike over the railroad work rules dispute and the possible demands the United Auto Workers may make at the bargaining table this summer.

Indications from the UAW convention in Atlantic City, N.J., were that the union will pass up heavy wage demands in favor of costly fringe benefits. Even so, President Walter Reuther's ominous statement that the union will make its "most significant historic bargaining effort" leaves room for gloomy speculation.

DOW-JONES industrial average finished with a tiny gain of 0.92 at 815.91. Rails skidded 1.31 to 192.16 and utilities slipped 0.52 to a new low of 137.76. Standard & Poor's 500 stock index tacked on 0.27 to 79.19.

Volume amounted to 21,334,064 shares for the four days compared with 27,206,798 for the five days last week and 19,349,340 shares in the same week last year.

Of the 1,458 issues traded, 684 advanced, 269 to new 1964 highs, while 632 declined, 142 to new lows.

Lehigh Valley Industries topped the market in activity, it slipped 1/8 to 2⅝ on a turnover of 658,500 shares. The stock has been very active recently but the company could offer no explanation for the action other than that it sold the last of its coal properties recently.

It was followed in activity by Continental Airlines, up 2½ to 26⅞ on 306,900 shares, Chrysler up ⅜ to 46 on 300,000 shares and RCA off ⅛ to 36⅛ on 243,300 shares.

Steels were in the forefront of the advance and Lukens led the pack with a manumental gain of 14¼. Inland racked up a gain of 2½, National Steel advanced 3, McLouth 4¼, Jones & Laughlin 3⅝, Republic 1⅜, Bethlehem 1⅛, Allegheny Ludlum 2⅛ and Armco 1⅝.

• • • •

MOTORS WERE held in check and moved only fractionally. General Motors advanced ⅞ and Chrysler tacked on ⅜. American Motors lost ⅛ and Ford skidded ¾.

Union Carbide turned in a good performance with a gain of 4½, followed by Diamond Alkali up 2¾ and Du Pont up 1¼. Eastman Kodak retreated 1⅜ and Allied Chemical slipped ⅞.

Blue chip oils were quiet and generally seemed neglected. Standard Oil of California slipped ⅝, Standard Oil (N.J.) ⅛ and Texaco 1⅜. Pure Oil climbed 3½ and Pennzoil added 1⅜.

IBM soared 14 points in a mixed section which included Motorola up 8⅜, Electronic Associates 1¾, and Litton 3⅞. Minneapolis-Honeywell took to the downtrack and lost 5½.

Richardson-Merrell dropped 2½ in a weak drugs section after the company pleaded no contest to a federal suit which charged the company with failing to include key information to manufacture a drug. Smith Kline & French also dropped 2½. Elsewhere in the section, Carter Products dropped 4 points, Abott Labs 2¾, and Upjohn 4⅞.

• • • •

RAILS WERE depressed. Southern Pacific dropped 2½, Missouri Pacific 2⅛, Pennsylvania 1½, Louisville & Nashville 1¾, and Chicago & Northwestern 1¾. Northern Pacific was on the upside with a gain of 3, as was Norfolk & Western with a gain of 1¼.

Cigarette stocks met some demand on reports that sales were climbing back up from the 30 per cent drop which followed the surgeon general's report on cancer and cigarette smoking. American Tobacco and Liggett & Myers gained 1⅜. Phillip Morris 1⅜ and Reynolds 1⅛.

Airline shares climbed sharply higher, featuring Western Air Lines up 12½. Pan American up 8¾, Delta up 8½, American up 3¼. Northwest up 6 and Continental and National up 2½ each.

Financial shares also turned in a good performance spurred by reports the institutions expect increased loan demand and expect to keep growing despite government restrictions. Financial Federation jumped 5½, United Financial of California 4¾ and Wesco Financial 3¼.

Bullocks scored a strong gain Wednesday of news it planned to merge with Federated Department Stores, but slipped back in the final session on a combination of profit-taking and reaction to a statement by a company official who said he would vote against the merger. Bullock's showed a gain of 3¾ on the week. Federated was off 3⅝.

Polaroid rose 7¼ but normally wide moving Xerox slipped ¾.

Kiddie Couture: Fashion Plates of 1964

By Mary Ellis Carlton

LOOKS TOO MUCH like a dunce hat to be smart, says kindergarten couturier Loree Gray as she tries her Easter bonnet in-the-making on classmate Becky Pugsley during hat-designing session at Emerson Elementary School. She thinks she'd like something a little more feminine ("Easter is the time for girls to look pretty") and later fashions a chapeau with paper plate and posies similar to those pictured below.

The Easter bonnet, subject of song and poetry for countless decades, is today's substitute for spring flowers worn in the hair of maidens at spring rites 2,000 years ago.

But in teacher Dorothy Caldwell's kindergarten class at Emerson Elementary School, the traditional bonnet was a pre-Easter project of much fun, creativity and originality.

The kindergarten couturiers—equipped with scissors, paint brushes, pins, paper clips, tag board, paste pots and paper clips—created some silhouettes in their original chapeaux that would turn heads on any avenue—from Long Beach to Long Island.

Although some would-be pace-setters tried their hand at tall crowns and wide brims, most followed the girly trend for spring with saucy, flower-strewn creations anchored coquettishly with streamers and bows.

And, as you might expect, even in this smallfry world of pony tails and freckles, the young men of the group had some devastating comments to make when the bonnets were modeled.

Peering out from under the rabbit ear headgear they'd made during the Easter paste-paint-and-pin-up project, they came forth with comments very much like father would make: "You call THAT a hat?"

SUNKEN TUBS NEW TREND---

Now You Need a Toga

By CURTYNE DRISCOLL

The big gurgle in plumbing circles these days is the popularity of the sunken bathtub.

"We are installing one in almost every new custom-built home," said a spokesman at Nyland Plumbing. "One home we're working on has two."

"They are the real Roman style step-down-into baths, some about as big as swimming pools," he reported.

"In the past four or five months, sunken bathtubs have become extremely popular in Long Beach," agreed Jimmy Blanchard of Advance Plumbing.

USUALLY THE SUNKEN tubs are constructed of wooden forms covered with cement, then covered with mosaic tile, making them available in any shape or size.

One plumbing fixture manufacturer, however, makes a regulation tub that can be sunk in the floor for a Roman effect.

"I don't think there is anything in my home that I enjoy more," said Mrs. Thomas Shaheen Jr., of her sunken bath.

"Most kitchens and bathrooms are too utilitarian," she said. "I like mine glamorous."

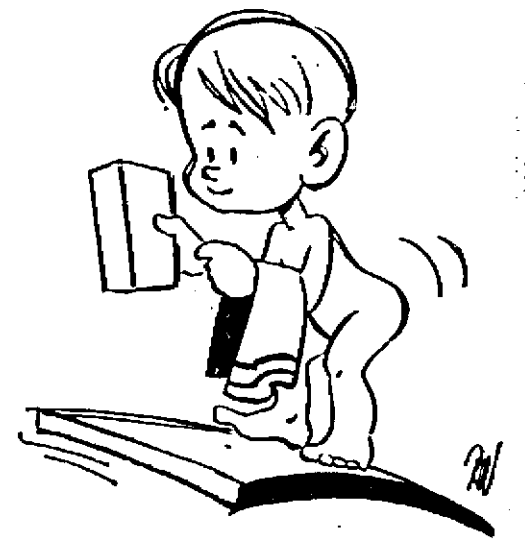

When the Shaheens built their luxurious home two years ago, Mrs. Shaheen planned her large Roman tub with five foot Venetian columns at either end, a skylight and an outdoor, garden feeling.

"IT MAY BE a new trend," said Mrs. Douglas McFarland, "but there must be a lot of people like us, who find it an old one. Our Spanish style Naples duplex was built in the '20s and has a sunken tub that you simply can't beat for complete relaxation."

The McFarland tub has an additional note of elegance. It is lighted by a colorful stained glass window.

One new homeowner isn't sure he likes his sunken tub much.

"I'm accustomed to an enclosed stall shower," he said. "And to tell you the truth, in this big, open tub I feel awfully lonesome sometimes."

His wife is in consultation with her decorator to cure this complaint with a partial drapery or a beaded curtain.

J. E. SIMPKINS has incorporated a Roman bath in the plans for his new Los Cerritos residence.

"I always like the unusual," said Simpkins, formerly a general contractor, now an auto dealer.

"The design for our bath includes a couple of steps up, then a couple of steps down, with a heating element under the tile."

The Simpkins bath also will have a folding partition and shower attachment so the master of the house can "shower like a duck."

Simpkins was asked if he could foresee any problems arising from the new trend. Will there be a shortage of hot water? Will tiny tots fall in? What about cleaning all that grout?

"The only drawback I can think of," he said, "is that after a leisurely soak on those ceramic tiles, you might come out looking like a waffle!"

For More Beauty... Use Shibusa

By MARY NETH

Koo Ito, owner of the Scand-Asia, Redondo Avenue, cringes inwardly whenever someone pops into his shop and announces enthusiastically, "I'm doing my house Japanese."

This may seem like a strange reaction from a man who is doing his best to encourage interest in Japanese decorating ideas. But, it's quite reasonable once you understand Ito's view.

"I know how a try for a Japanese-style house frequently turns out," he says with a sigh.

To him pseudo-oriental in a western setting adds up to nothing less than a heavy-handed conglomeration of the worst of both East and West—reason to change Kipling's "never the twain shall meet" to "the twain absolutely must never meet."

ITO, IT SEEMS, is all for borrowing concepts, not for copying wholesale. In fact, he's apt to rip off superfluous, tell-tale Oriental flourishes from chests and chairs; remove dragons and gold characters as you'd do away with that fancy bow on an otherwise high-style dress. The result: subtle good lines with no gewgaws.

"We Americans shouldn't try to superimpose an alien culture on top of ours," he says. "Instead we should adapt Japanese principles of beauty to our pattern of life. That way we CAN profit. After all, the Japanese have been giving aesthetics top billing since the 8th century."

As he sees it, many Americans miss the boat in house decor by restricting themselves to a period—or cheap facsimile thereof—back when they are newlywed. "By the time they've outgrown the ruffled chintz and apple-wall-plaque stage, they're in almost too deep to do anything about it."

THIS IS WHERE Ito feels an understanding of Japanese decorating would help a lot. He advises couples to look into the meaning of shibusa before going shopping.

Shibusa? That's the Japanese word for the highest level of good taste. A word that you'll find has no counterpart in other languages. It means, in part, an easy-to-live-with beauty which incorporates simplicity, sensibility, fine quality and depth of interest.

"Something shibui (the adjective form of shibusa) could come from any place in the world—Japan, Denmark, Mexico, California. The intrinsic qualities contained would place it above any one period—allow you to use it in any setting."

Koo Ito

A second generation Japanese-American, Ito often has been told he "must have been born with a knack for decorating."

"I don't think that's true," he says, "any more than I believe that the Japanese have an inherent flair for art."

MANY YEARS AGO, Lafcadio Hearn, then an authority on Japan, wrote along these lines that "the mental difference between a Japanese and a European child is mainly potential." Ito agrees today.

"I'm sure the Japanese owe their reputation as connoisseurs of beauty to the awareness shibusa has brought the culture. We can make use of it, too."

This yardstick for measuring artistic value was developed by the early Zen Cha-no-yu or tea masters. As they saw it, the world abounds with dif-

Their Travel Light Turns to Erin Green

By Iola Masterson
I, P-T Women's Editor

IT WILL be a broth of a trip—but a very busy one for Joan (Frs. Denis) Murphy as she sets out next Saturday by jetliner for her former homeland. And where but Ireland could be the homeland of a lass with a name like that?

During the 13-hour flight, Joan will have in tow active daughter, Margaret Mary, 3½, and cute handful of a son, Michael Patrick, 10 months old. Wise in the ways of wee ones, Joan will be ready with lots of toys to keep the youngsters happy between naps. For mama's sake, I hope there are many passengers with a love of children who will help entertain when the toys grow dull.

Seasoned travelers check over important luggage.

Husband, Dr. Denis, will fly over in June to share visiting with both their families—his in Clonmel and hers in Limerick.

In the Irish custom, the children (Denis being the eldest son) are named after their grandparents, so wherever they go there will be name duplication, with Marys and Margarets and Michaels and Patricks to cope with.

Thinking this a very brave undertaking for the pert young mother, I asked her how long it had been since she had made such an extensive trip. This will be her's and Denis' FOURTH time back to the auld sod since they moved here just six years ago. It will be Michael Patrick's second, if you please, and Margaret Mary's third trip. Mike made his first visit to Ireland at the age of 3 months!

WHEN A dozen knowledgeable hostesses give a party—a big one—nothing DARES go wrong. And it didn't, not even on rainy, rainy Monday. Whether it was the result of their combined crossed fingers and wishes for clear skies, a pull with Pluvius or just sheer luck, don't know. The clouds stopped spilling over, as if by magic, to let more than 70 guests arrive at the home of Agnes (Mrs. Roscoe) Howell with nary a tress nor smart chapeau dampened.

Wild Waves Say...

Party was a shower (how appropriate!) and luncheon for Mrs. John Rawls (nee Sharon Vaughan). Cooperating as hostesses were Vivian Decker, Olive Hodges, Eleanor Kirkpatrick, Nora Cravins, Lena Walker, Caroline Saunders, Alberta McKay, Helen Rolo, Frances Sidford, Walterine Strong and Lois Mayes.

And what had they planned for party decorations? Why, umbrellas, of course.

THE DATE distance between arrival and departure is equal to too brief a time—way too brief. Houseguests at the Ocean Blvd. home of Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Cheroske are their daughter, Eleanor Robinson, granddaughter, Ann Hughes, and great-granddaughter, Kathryn, just 20 months old. They've been here a week, will return to N.Y. next Saturday.

Ann's husband, Sam, flew out with them, too, but stayed hardly long enough to dent a pillow. He returned to Gotham Tuesday.

WHEN YOU'RE dutifully hard at work at your desk the thought of being snowbound in the mountains is a lovely daydream. But when it happens, then the snowshoe is on the other foot.

It did happen to Loraine and "Chick" Cicoletti, with their guests from Los Angeles, plus children and children's friends. They went to the Cicolettis' lovely home above Lake Gregory at Crestline Saturday and by Monday, when the men needed to be at work, they were hopelessly trapped in a sea of white. Their home there is off the country road so the ploughs simply didn't get to it.

What's more, there sat Loraine and "Chick's" one week old deluxe T-Bird taking a beating and over its mufflers in sleet.

Like many a stranded mountaineer, the men had to hike to Crestline to get extra food for the enforced stay (a distance of something like five miles!). Enough of a roadway was cleared Tuesday to let the men out, via car. By Wednesday they were back at their desks —and I'll bet dreaming how great it would be to be snowbound again!

THIS NEWS is winning their friends' unanimous vote of approval. Val Lovell Richards and Bob Crowe, both prominent in Republican circles (in fact, it was through their mutual interest in GOP that they met) slipped away to Las Vegas and when they did the most important act in town was their "I do" date.

THE TERM "annual dinner," with its connotation of well done chicken or raisin-laced ham, lands like a thud on the ears. But not in this case. For years, a small group of avid sportsmen and their wives have gathered for a hunters' dinner of sheer delight. The feast is put together from the finest gourmet viands each hunter has hoarded in his freezer.

This year Naomi and John Hanberry entertained at Long Beach Yacht Club with co-hosts Virginia and Charles Dickie. Club manager-hunter Ev Boyette, present with wife Dorothy, was "menu chief."

Elk and venison from Colorado, geese from Tule Lake, Montana trout (out of the Madison River), dove from Calexico, plus other specialty dishes galore were served.

Among those dining and wining were such members of the gang as Dorothy and Charles Flippin, "Rick" and Dr. Lowell Bowton, Betty and Milt Cantor, "Jo" and Jerry Ryan and Harry Christensen.

FRIVOLITY and golf marked the second annual Apple Valley Steak House "invitational" golf tournament at Torrey Pines last weekend. Still are all friends, although they played against each other. They were rained out Sunday, you see, never finished the tourney. Which is one way to solve a contest the most amiable way possible.

Among the 25 couples who highwayed it down coast were Gail and Jim Ireland, Darlene and John Coultrup, Rose and Tom Coultrup, Idell and Abe Azar, Lavonne and Steve Kral, Hallie and Oscar Contratto Jr., Marie and Jim Contratto, Jan and Bobby Faraha, Bobby and Gladys Campbell, Andy and Nataline Bryson and Johnny Olszewski, there without Dorothy who couldn't make trek.

ALTHOUGH you'd never guess if from the aplomb they show below, Dick and Patricia Hugen of 2691 Fanwood Ave., admit they had their share of head-over-heels spills during a wonderful skiing week at Baldy Mountain, Sun Valley, Idaho.

And the two are not "bunnies," either, meaning beginners on the slopes. Prodded as to their prowess, Dick warily confessed he and Pat are really "sort of good." Everyone tumbled occasionally on the steep runs, he said.

They were treated not only to excellent ski conditions but to superb weather and came home suntanned as if they'd been on the sands of Waikiki instead of high on a winter mountain.

The Hugens were passengers on UP's famous Sno-Ball Express, the holiday train that chugs into the valley just twice a year, they said.

Others on the trip from Long Beach were Jack and Don Crawford, the most forever-at-it skiiers in town. What DO these two do when the good old summertime is here? Probably take a boat to sea—and go water skiing, what else?

Poised pose, fumbles not camera-witnessed.

Mrs. Lester Barnett Heads Emblem Club

Mrs. Lester Barnett

Mrs. Lester Barnett will assume presidency of Long Beach Emblem Club 106 when it stages 19th annual installation of officers at 8 p.m. April 8 at Elks Club, 4101 E. Willow St. She succeeds Mrs. Clifford Pierce.

Mrs. Clara Miller of Burbank, past supreme president, will be installing officer.

Mrs. Barnett is a charter member of Long Beach Emblem Club and has held offices for seven years including that of first and second vice president. In addition, she has served as secretary of Heart Guild, Inc., and is a member of Kenneyettes. She shares her husband's interest in antique automobiles and has served the Horseless Carriage Club for eight years as women's editor of its national magazine.

Serving with Mrs. Barnett will be Mmes. Andrew Anderson, Harry Gallagher, Robert Orcutt, Ted Day, Roy Castle, Merida Maxwell and numerous appointive officers.

Husbands and members of Elks Lodge 888 will be escorts for the new officers and entertainment will be by Voices of 106, directed by Mrs. Harvey Raston.

Mrs. R. A. Berg, past president, is general chairman, and Mrs. Sam Beck, also a past president, is in charge of the reception.

Penelope Bryant Now Mrs. Turk

In a formal evening ceremony at First Congregational Church on Wednesday, the wedding of Penelope Anne Bryant and Robert Louis Turk was solemnized in the presence of 400 guests.

The bride, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. David Logan Bryant of 5561 Las Lomas St., was escorted to the altar by her father. She wore a gown of peau de soie with lace bodice and lace applique on the bouffant skirt with chapel train. Her fingertip length veil fell from a crown of pearls, and she wore a pearl necklace, gift of the bridegroom. Her bouquet was of white roses centered with a detachable orchid corsage.

Attendants, gowned in pink crepe sheaths, were Mrs. William Tyra, sister of the bride and matron of honor; Adrien Mango, Marguerite Matlock and Carole Powers with David Tyra as ring bearer.

The bridegroom, son of Mrs. Herman Turk, 219 Belmont Ave., and the late Dr. Turk, was served by his brother, James Turk, as best man. Seating the guests were John Buster, Earnest Kartinen, William Tyra and Richard Wienig.

• • • •

BOTH young people were graduated from Wilson High School. The former Miss Bryant received her BA and MA degrees from UCLA where she was affiliated with Phi Beta Kappa and Alpha Phi and was a member of the sophomore, junior and senior honorary societies, as well as Mortar Board. She is now a teacher at Venice High School.

The bridegroom is an alumnus of Stanford University where he was a member of Stanford Young Republicans and El Cuadro, and is now working toward his MD degree at UCLA where he is a Nu Sigma Nu.

Following their honeymoon in La Jolla the new Mr. and Mrs. Turk will be at home in Los Angeles.

Mrs. Robert Louis Turk

CHAMPION CALIFORNIA HOMEMAKER

To Vie for 'Mrs. America' Title

—Staff Photo

FRIENDS AND STRANGERS have kept Mrs. Darlene C. Ticehurst's phone busy with congratulations since she won "Mrs. California" title March 9. Brian, 7 (left), and Jeff, 11, share in the excitement. Mrs. Ticehurst and her husband, Glen, will leave Thursday for St. Petersburg, Fla., where she will compete with 51 other women for the title of "Mrs. America."

By ELISE EMERY

What is it like to win the title of "Mrs. California?"

Says Mrs. Darlene C. Ticehurst, 3141 Bostonian Drive, Los Alamitos, "Overwhelming!"

Thursday, Mrs. Ticehurst, accompanied by her husband, Glen, will leave for St. Petersburg, Fla., where she will compete for the title of "Mrs. America" in the 25th annual national contest.

Mrs. Ticehurst was born Jan. 11, 1925, is 5 feet 6, weighs 128 pounds, has shining brown hair and candid green eyes.

"It was my wonderful mother-in-law, who first taught me homemaking skills," she recalls. "When I was married 19 years ago, I was 20 years old and didn't know a thing about housekeeping. I was cocky and over-confident. But Glen's mother taught me to cook and sew and keep house."

• • • •

THE PARENTS-IN-LAW, Mr. and Mrs. Jay Ticehurst of Topeka, Kan., will stay with the Ticehursts' children, Steve, 17, Jeff, 11, and Brian, 7, while Darlene and Glen are in Florida.

"This began almost as a lark — I never expected it would end like this! It's been wonderful fun," says the pretty contestant.

She thought it was a joke when she was asked Feb. 3 by Rossmoor Homeowners Association to compete for the "Mrs. California" title.

When she realized the association board members were serious, she sent in an entry form, filled out a lengthy questionaire, and submitted a full-length photograph of herself.

"Things just progressed from there," she says.

• • • •

SHE WAS NOTIFIED that she was to be one of seven finalists in the local Rossmoor area competition Feb. 28. She won this and went on to compete with six other finalists in Hollywood March 9.

"I wasn't nervous. It was just fun. I practiced what we teach the boys: 'Don't expect to lose. Do your best. If you do lose, don't feel that you can never look anyone in the face again.' That's the way I feel about the Mrs. America competition, too."

• • • •

IN HOLLYWOOD, she was named top homemaker in the state after all-day competition in baking, sewing, table setting, menu planning, grooming, poise and personality. She won first place in the menu planning category with these recipes:

Chicken breasts in sherry sauce, wild rice, raw spinach salad, toasted French bread and grasshopper pie — a cream pie flavored with creme de menthe.

"We were told constantly that it is the overall rating that would count, not just the number of first places we won. The two runners-up, my alternates, didn't win a first award. Nor will the Mrs. America judges expect the winner to be perfect in every area—no one is. It is the total approach that is important."

• • • •

THE CHAMPION California homemaker doesn't believe in work schedules for herself.

"Every morning I summarize what I hope to accomplish during the day, but a schedule just isn't possible in this day and age when every time the phone rings the plan could go to pot. A woman whose children are of school age is busy with both home and community affairs and her routine must be flexible."

How does she define the "representative homemaker?"

"Woman today must be versatile and vital. On demand she must change from mother to den mother, from hostess to chauffeur, from bridge partner to sports enthusiast, from night dinner and dancing to day repainting and decorating. When she can do these things, to name a few, with a smile, surely she deserves the title, representative homemaker.'"

• • • •

ONE OF THE MOST exciting results of winning the "Mrs. California" contest has been the flood of messages she has received from friends and strangers.

"The title wouldn't mean a thing without the wonderful, warm response of people. For the first week the phone never stopped ringing. It was quite an adjustment to change from my 19 years of homemaking routine to appointments for photographs, interviews, television and judging contests."

When "Mrs. California" judges asked Mrs. Ticehurst what she could offer to other women if she were selected as "Mrs. America," she answered:

• • • •

"I DON'T feel that I could offer myself as an example to others. There are 1,000 other women just as competent to win the 'Mrs. California' title as I—they just didn't enter the contest. What I would want to do is to meet with other women for discussion and to exchange points of view."

Will Honor Newlyweds

A reception will be held honoring newlywed Mr. and Mrs. Gene Howard Record Saturday evening at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Howard J. Record, 2620 Eucalyptus Ave.

The couple eloped to Las Vegas on March 8 and their wedding took place at Little White Chapel. The bride is the former Janice Eloise McMinn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Vernon R. McMinn of South Gate. They were attended by Nancy Gallager and Robert E. Lyman.

The bride wore an ensemble of yellow French silk with matching accessories and a cymbidium orchid corsage.

The bridegroom was graduated from Polytechnic High School and his bride from South Gate High as well as Los Angeles Trade Technical College.

Accent Shibui--Best in Beauty

ferent aspects of beauty. The lovely, powerful, gay, smart all belong to the beautiful, and everyone, according to his own disposition and environment, feels a special affinity to one or another aspect. But, when taste grows more refined, all will arrive at the beauty which is shibusa.

"It's unfortunately easier to say what shibusa is not, than to describe what it is with simplicity," says Ito.

"It isn't the brightly colored or gaudy that the Japanese call Hade. It's not the stylish or chic, that's called Iki and it's not the sober, sedate, and proper, the Japanese term Jimi.

"It's the latter, or Jimi type of beauty, that many Japanese come up with in their attempt at shibui, he continues.

FOR THOUGH a shibui garment or decoration is always unobtrusive, it's never dull. There's always a touch of the unexpected—the unfinished—to add depth of interest. You'll never find yourself growing tired of a shibui artifact.

"It should, in fact, be something you can enjoy day in and day out. It was the uneventful, normal world that the tea masters explored for unusual beauty—their masterpieces were the utensils they used every day.

"When you grasp the idea of shibusa you have gained the best the Japan culture has to offer. And, once more you'll see things you missed before."

Shibusa draws its inspiration from nature where one never finds static symmetry. And, for its followers, such as Ito, it offers a never ending learning process.

RIGHT NOW, Ito is doing what he has always wished to do—concentrating on this search for beauty. He picks items for his shop from all parts of the world (not just the Scandinavian countries and Japan) that he believes represent this syndrome.

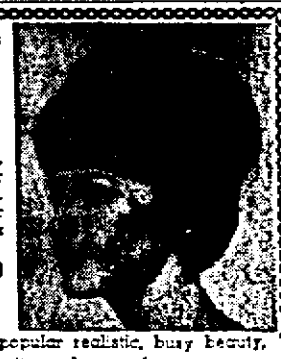

As to his own home, Ito laughingly confides that it doesn't come close to being shibui . . . not yet. He's been too busy collecting shibui works of art to work on it.

New Exhibit

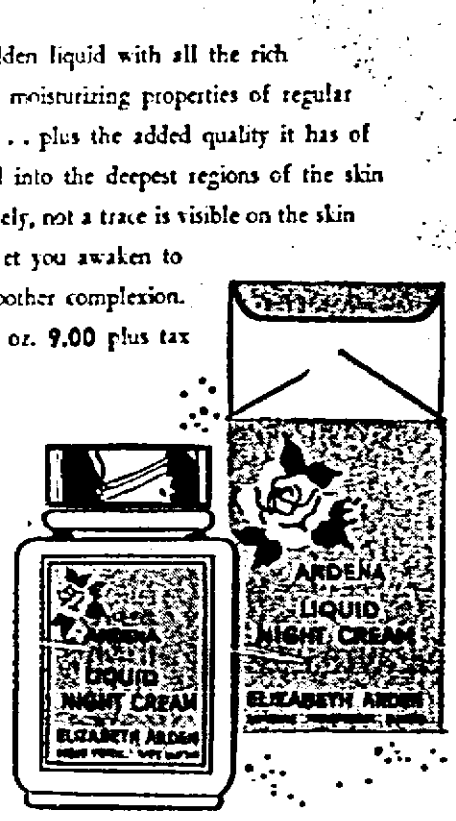

"Collectors' Choice" is the new exhibit opening at the Lytton Center of Visual Arts, 8150 Sunset Blvd., Hollywood, on Wednesday. Outstanding pieces of sculpture from private local collections include works by Arp, Lipchitz, Marini, Degas, Giacometti and Moore; examples of African and pre-Colombian primitive art; Spanish, early American, Egyptian and Coptic folk art.

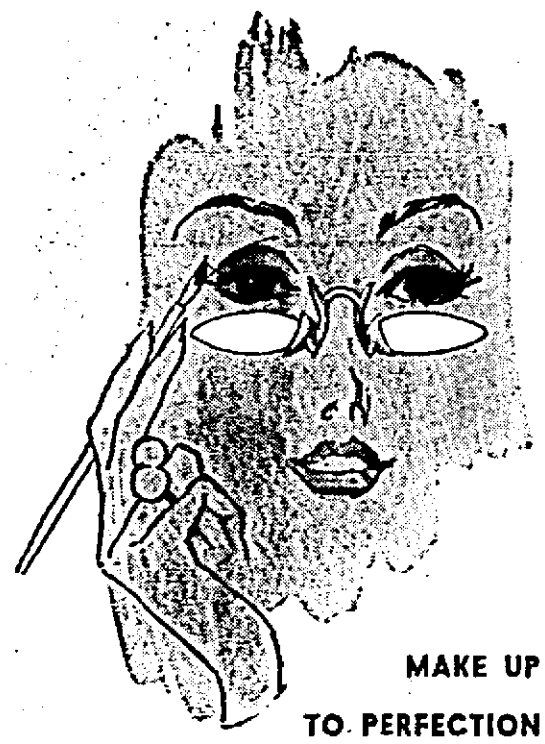

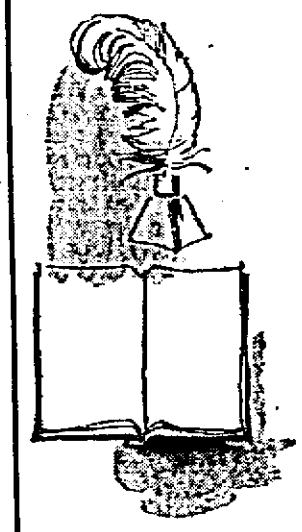

The center is open daily and on Saturday from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Admission is free.

FOASBERG'S FABRIC CARE COUNSELOR
RESEARCHERS looking into causes of overweight have found there are 3 types of eaters: "night eaters" who eat heavily before going to bed; "binge eaters" or people who go on eating sprees, and those who eat to satiation, apparently never knowing when to stop. They also found that the overweight women walked an average of 1.9 miles a day while women of normal weight walked 4.2 miles a day. They did not draw any conclusions as to whether the overweight women walked less because they were heavy, or they were heavy because they walked less. However, authorities agree that walking is one of the best ways of keeping as fit as trim and we do far too little of it.
P.S.: Another "secret" of looking and feeling your best is treating your garments to the special care that only your professional laundry can give.

THAT OLD BUNNY TALE!

Sandra, 2½, pooh poohs stories about that once-a-year Easter bunny. Her three cuddly cottontails may not bring baskets of colored eggs but they're sure hare-raising—she's got 14 baby back-yard bunnies to prove it and that's lots more fun. The youngest of four girls, she's daughter of the John Adams, 27636 Tarrasa Drive, San Pedro, who say keeping their pets in carrots keeps them hopping. For Easter, Sandra's rabbits will forgo bonnets and bows for extra juicy bunch. Proving they're certainly not dumb bunnies!

To Outline Cultural Activities

An illustrated talk, with vocal selections, entitled "Us Uncultured Americans," will be presented by John Arnold Ford to members of American Institute of Banking's women's committee of Harbor Chapter on Monday at 8 p.m. at Alfred's Restaurant.

Ford's talk, which is presented under joint sponsorship of the Hollywood Bowl Association and Southern Counties and Southern California Gas Companies, reviews the many cultural assets of Southern California, giving recognition to fine local musical, artistic and dramatic organizations, both professional and amateur, that exist in Southland communities.

• • • •

FORD FIRST made his name as one of the area's leading bass singers, and rounds out his program with a variety of vocal selections. He has sung in opera and light opera and has for seven years produced the Pilgrimage Play in Hollywood.

Dirty Car Is Unsafe to Drive

Slick roads from rain are not the only driving hazard this time of year. So is a dirty car. A car encrusted with road grime is treacherous to drive.

That is why General Motors' professional road-test drivers urge motorists to keep their cars clean during inclement weather—for both their own safety and the car's protection.

FAMILY AFFAIR

With the help of Gabriella, 6; Peter John, 5 months; Mark, 21 months, and Marisa, 3, Mrs. Peter Miotto checks material for Community Concert campaign, which gets under way Monday. As a division manager, she is one of 300 volunteers who will work on the drive.

'Spring' Exhibition at LBAA

By ELISE EMERY
Arts Page Editor

Long Beach Art Association members Monday will enter exhibits for the April "Spring" show in the gallery, 600 E. Ocean Blvd. Entries will be received from 1 to 7 p.m.

Grace Sorenson Dimmick, Long Beach artist and teacher, who has just returned from a three months sketching tour in Europe, will select winning works.

The May exhibit will be titled "Our Town" and will feature artists' interpretations of familiar Long Beach landmarks.

LBAA member Joy Nye Elliott was one of 98 artists selected to have work exhibited at the 19th annual Newport Harbor exhibit. There were 600 works submitted.

• • • •

"RENAISSANCE AND Recent Color Prints" is the title of an exhibit which will open Tuesday in Long Beach City College art gallery at Faculty Ave. and Harvey Way. The show will continue through April 17. Hours are 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Mondays through Thursdays, 7 to 10 p.m. Tuesdays and Thursdays, and 9 a.m. to noon Fridays.

Drawn from the LBCC art department's collection of color reproductions, the exhibit ranges from Renaissance to contemporary paintings, and includes such diverse artists as Bellini, Durer, Rembrandt, Reynolds, Blake and Picasso.

• • • •

CALIFORNIA State College at Long Beach will open its National Invitational Print Exhibition Thursday in the art gallery. Hours are 8 a.m. to noon and 1 to 5 p.m. daily; 8 to 10 p.m. Wednesday; and 2 to 5 p.m. Saturdays and Sundays.

• • • •

WINNERS in the professional class in the spring membership show of Artists League of Seal Beach were named by Dr. Bela Biro. They are Evelyn Carpenter, Robert Wagner and Carol Palmester, oils; Harold Chestnut, drawing; and Patricia Jackson, Audre Hutchins and Bob Dahlquist, water color.

Other awards went to advanced students and to B Class students.

Pat Jones won a special judge's award for a montage.

Entries in the league's second annual national cash award Stitchery Show will be accepted April 12 through 16 from 1 to 4:30 p.m. and 7 to 9 p.m. Eleanor Neil will judge the show and will present awards April 18 at the Art Center, Ocean Ave. and Main Blvd., Seal Beach.

Further information may be obtained by calling the center or Pat Jones, 632 Sea Breeze Drive, Seal Beach.

• • • •

WATER COLORS by Ann Rutledge will be on exhibit at North Long Beach Branch Library, 5571 Orange Ave., from Thursday through May 1. Mrs. Rutledge has been a member of Long Beach Art Association for 20 years. She has studied with Eliot O'Hare, Rex Brandt, Robert E. Wood and the late Pearl Macy Lucas.

• • • •

IRVING MANOIR of Corona Del Mar will give a painting demonstration and talk at a meeting of Huntington Beach Art League Wednesday at 7 p.m. in Lake Park.

• • • •

WILLIAM F. LA VALLEE, formerly of this city and member of Long Beach Art Association, has been appointed director of the Tulare County Museum of Art in Visalia. He resides in Three Rivers.

• • • •

THE 1963 Henry H. Bellamann Foundation Award of $1,000 for outstanding achievement in the arts will go to artist Andrew Bucci of Washington, D.C., according to Mrs. Edith Sansom of New Orleans, director of the foundation.

COLLEGE CRISIS

A university classroom crisis plunges a professor (James Whitmore) and his wife (Cloris Leachman) into intense drama in "P. S. 193" in its West Coast premiere by University Extension's Theater Group at UCLA beginning Friday at 8:30 p. m. and running through May 10 in Humanities Building. Play was selected as one of 10 best plays of 1962-63 New York season.

Ticket Is 'Bargain in Culture'

The membership committee of Long Beach Community Concert Association is convinced that it offers the greatest cultural bargain in the city.

Members point to the price of subscriptions—$6 for adults, $3 for students—and to such top artists as Dorothy Kirsten and Eileen Farrell who have appeared here on Community Concert programs.

• • • •

THEY BOAST, too, of the artists already scheduled for the coming season—Mantovani and His Orchestra, Ruth Page's Chicago Opera Ballet, and the Royal Welch Male Choir, and note that two other attractions will be added. Membership capacity is 4,300 and even before the campaign begins, 2,600 renewals have been received. It is traditional that membership sales reach capacity each year. Campaign headquarters will be at Humphreys Music Company, 135 E. Third St.

• • • •

THE CAMPAIGN will open with a kick-off dinner for the membership committee Monday at Lafayette Hotel. Mrs. Alfred Durfee is campaign chairman.

Approximately 300 enthusiastic volunteers give their time to this non-profit, cultural association.

One is Mrs. Fiorella Miotto, who has worked for the association since its beginnin in 1959. Despite the fact that she is the mother of four children between the ages of 5 months and 6 years, she heads a division of workers. A native of Trieste, Italy, she came to the United States while a teen-ager, finished her schooling in New York City and majored in chemistry at Hunter College. After her marriage to Dr. Peter Miotta, she came to Long Beach and has continued her studies at California State College at Long Beach.

• • • •

ANOTHER volunteer is Miss Bertha Parsons who has worked with the organized audience plan since it began many years ago and has been with Community Concert since its start. Now retired, she was secretary to the Long Beach Board of Education for many years.

Mrs. Glenn Manning, another who was an original Community Concert volunteer, has earned her bachelor of science and teaching credential at CSLB during the past three years and now is a school nurse. In addition to her homemaking duties for her husband and four children, she has undertaken various civic duties.

• • • •

COMMUNITY Concert Association president Ray L. Hazlet credits the success of the organization to the many volunteers who tell its story.

Mrs. Arch Henry, executive secretary, is assisted at campaign headquarters by Mrs. George Cerveny and Mrs. B. E. Burchfiel.

The campaign will continue until April 11, or until capacity is reached.

Patterson to Play With Symphony

Ronald Patterson, violin virtuoso, will be soloist with Long Beach Symphony Orchestra next Sunday in Long Beach City College Auditorium. The concert will begin at 8 p.m. under direction of Lauris Jones.

Patterson won the Furjanick Award in the recent annual Symphony Competition for Young Artists. He also has won awards with the Aspen Symphony, Fresno Symphony, and in the Monterey County and USC String competitions. He will play the Tchaikowsky "Concerto for Violin and Orchestra."

THE FURJANICK Award was established by Long Beach Symphony Association as memorial to the late Nicolas Furjanick, associate conductor of the orchestra for many years and director of music at Wilson High School.

Works to be performed by the orchestra next Sunday will be Brahms' "Academic Festival Overture," Haydn's "Symphony No. 104" and Barber's "Adagio for Strings."

• • • •

THIS IS the fourth concert of the current Sunday Evening Series. Tickets are on sale at the Symphony Association office in Gilmore Music Store, 1935 E. Seventh St., and at Humphreys Music Company, 135 E. Third St. For additional information, call the association office.

MAJOR & MINOR NOTES

of Glad Hosannas Easter Is Season

By RACHEL MORTON
L. P-T Music Critic

Outside my window there is an azalea bush cascading in gorgeous orchid-colored blooms. I look at it in wonderment, not only for its beauty, but because only a short while ago, it was a mass of dry, brown twigs. My whole garden is a riot of color in the miraculous transforming of Spring. There are other signs, too of the grand event of life being renewed. I hear little chirpings in the trees as the parent birds fly busily to and fro with food for the baby birds.

• • • •

IT IS EASTER, the season of hosannas and praise! Out of the dark of the tomb came the Christ, arisen from the dead. That was the emancipation that has given meaning and impetus to all Christians, the world over. By it, life has become a thing of hope, of anticipation, of conviction that the grave has not the victory. There shall be newness of life after death, according to the promise, because spirit never dies.

Life, this side of the grave, is a pruning time for mankind. The dry twigs of existence can become glorious years of rich accomplishment, or broken years of defeat. It was the risen Christ who showed us the way to overcome death.

• • • •

IN THE SOUL of every human being there is an urge for good, for love, for God. This is the same impetus that sends forth the flowing branch; this is the spirit which never dies. Life is given us for fulfillment. How are we managing it? Because, as we live, so shall we find ourselves after death.

Let us sing loud hosannas and give praise on this glad Easter Sunday because we have a rebirth through Christ, the Wayshower, and death has lost its sting.

Machiko Kyo

'Street of Shame' on Film Series

Termed one of the most successful of the Japanese "modern" films, "Street of Shame" will be presented at California State College at Long Beach in the Little Theater next Sunday at 5 and 7:30 p.m. as third spring presentation of Long Beach Film Society.

Starred are Machiko Kyo and Aiko Mimasu in a story about five prostitutes and their reasons for being what they are, which include poverty, lack of education, disillusionment and greed. It is directed by Mizoguchi who also did "Rashomon" and "Ugetsu."

A companion feature is "Black Cat." Tickets are available at the box office.

Show Will Continue During April at PCC

By VIRGINIA LADDEY

Manuel Toapanta, Ecuadorian artist, is having a one-man show at the Pacific Coast Club, 850 East Ocean Blvd., which will continue through the month of April. Sr. Toapanta has a marked degree of skill in draftsmanship and in the use of various media — oil, water color and ink. His approach, however, in subject matter, technique, composition and content completely ignores the 20th century. His work will be most pleasing to that part of the public which finds "modern art" so distressing.

Toapanta's points of reference which are most marked are post-impressionism and Latin colonial baroque. The former he uses in flickering color in short, small brush strokes to render stone walls and hills, and the highlights on water and objects. Here, the pigment is quite thick with many tones mixed with white.

• • • •

THERE ARE TWO works in vivid water color and ink line which show the influence of colonial baroque. In one, a line of angel musicians extend into the infinity of an imaginary horizon while the foreground is filled with powerfully built angels. There is a crowned Christus figure among these. The colors are brilliant magenta and green and forms are defined in vigorous penline.

In another work, a Christ in the attitude of benediction is standing on both a globe of the world and a mysterious transparent sphere which surround it. On either side are whirling spheres and towering columns.

• • • •

THERE ARE several renderings of thick-walled colonial buildings with campaniles. Toapanta renders this architecture very strongly. Another group of paintings is of a fishing harbor with boats, rocks, surf and hills. He does some unusual things with color, as in one work for instance, which is all in shades of emerald green.

It is interesting to see this Ecuadorian's view of his world.

Preview Tuesday

Members of Long Beach Committee of Southern California Symphony Association will attend a preview salon Tuesday at 10 a.m. in Assistance League House, 394 Roswell Ave.

Dr. Russell N. Squire, associate professor of music at California State College, Long Beach, will discuss the program to be played by Los Angeles Philharmonic orchestra Thursday at 8 p.m. in the Concert Hall

Schola to Perform Saturday

"An Evening of Choral Masterworks" will be presented by the Schola Cantorum of Long Beach City College, directed by Wayne B. Gard, at 8:15 p.m. Saturday in the college auditorium. Tickets will be available this week at the student body banker's office, 4901 E. Carson St.

Works to be performed are Palestrina's "Kyrie" (from the "Mass for Pope Marcellus"), considered one of the outstanding examples of liturgical polyphony; Mozart's "Vesperae Solennes do Confessore," to be performed by chorus, chamber orchestra and solo quartet; and Vaughn Williams' "Mass in G Minor," written for double chorus and solo quartet.

• • • •

SOLOISTS for Mozart's seldom-heard "Vespers for the Confessor" will be Jeanette Beiter, soprano; Ruthanne Lorenzen, alto; Donald E. Rohrer, tenor; and Donald Ogren, bass.

Ogren also appears as a soloist in the "Mass in G Minor," with Mary Jane Gard, soprano; Iris Eshelman, alto; and Terry Danne, tenor. All seven of the soloists have had extensive concert, choral and operatic experience. Helen Davenport is the Schola Cantorum accompanist.

Trio Will Play Museum Concert

An evening of chamber music by the Ariel Trio is slated for Thursday at 8 p.m. at the Long Beach Museum of Art, 2300 E. Ocean Blvd. The program is free to the public.

The trio consists of Lydia Shapiro, pianist, Esther Rabiroff, violinist; and Mary Jane Gillian, cellist. They will play the Beethoven "Trio in C Minor" by the Brahms "Trio in B."

Miss Shapiro is a teacher and concert artist in Los Angeles. Miss Rabiroff, a graduate of Juillard, has been alternating concertmaster of the Buffalo Symphony, and a member of Hollywood Bowl orchestra.

Pity Wasted--She's Single by Choice

Dear Molly Mayfield

DEAR MRS. MAYFIELD:

I get so tired of hearing about these "pitiful," unmarried girls and widows. Would you let me know what is so "pitiful" about not having a man?

"Oh, the poor lonely thing, couldn't she land a husband?" is a remark I hear all too frequently.

Well, maybe she didn't want a man; maybe she wanted to be FREE. Maybe she is happier the way she is; maybe she is not one bit lonely.

At least I don't see these "pitiful," manless ones always writing you about all THEIR problems — and it's probably because they don't have so man-y?—"PITIFUL" ME

DEAR "PITIFUL" ME:

Since you don't need advice I won't pretend to offer any. Since you don't feel sorry for yourself, it's not likely others are going to feel sorry for you, bless your heart.

I'll just go along with you a few words longer and say that some of the happiest women I know are spinsters —and spinsters by choice, too. —M.M.

* * * *

DEAR MRS. MAYFIELD:

I'm a 21-year-old working girl living at home. I pay my parents for my room and board, which I realize is only fair.

I have a new car which I am financing all by myself. My parents allow me to drive it to work and home again every day, but driving it to club meetings or to friends' homes after dark is absolutely forebidden.

They say it is too dangerous for me to be out alone in the evening. Well, I know there are dangers, but we can't lock ourselves in a cage to protect ourselves from all the dangers of the world, can we?

When I object, they say, "As long as you live at home you'll do as we say!" It seems to me a 21-year-old girl who owns her own car, and pays her room and board ought to be able to make some decisions for herself.

Am I being unreasonable or not?—JUST SICK

DEAR JUST SICK:

No wonder you're "just sick." You're a grown woman now, and you're being treated like a child. Oh, it's undoubtedly because your parents love you very, very much. BUT, there comes a time when the fledgling must leave the nest, and I would guess that now is the time for you to, perhaps, pay room and board elsewhere, and taste a bit of the freedom you're being denied.

How can you learn to use your wings until you've tried them Your parents mean the best, I'm sure, but sometimes meaning best ends in doing wrong. I'd say this was a case of just that.—M.M.

* * * *

DEAR MRS. MAYFIELD:

I have a problem — my older brother, who is 23. He lives with us (Mother, Dad and me — I'm 16). His son by a previous marriage also lives with us. My brother comes and goes as he pleases, doesn't work, eats constantly, and is always making his three-year-old scream.

He doesn't respect anyone and lives off and on with a woman who is twice his age and is no good. He cusses all the time and pays no attention to what Mom or Dad says to him. Mom has literally become his slave.

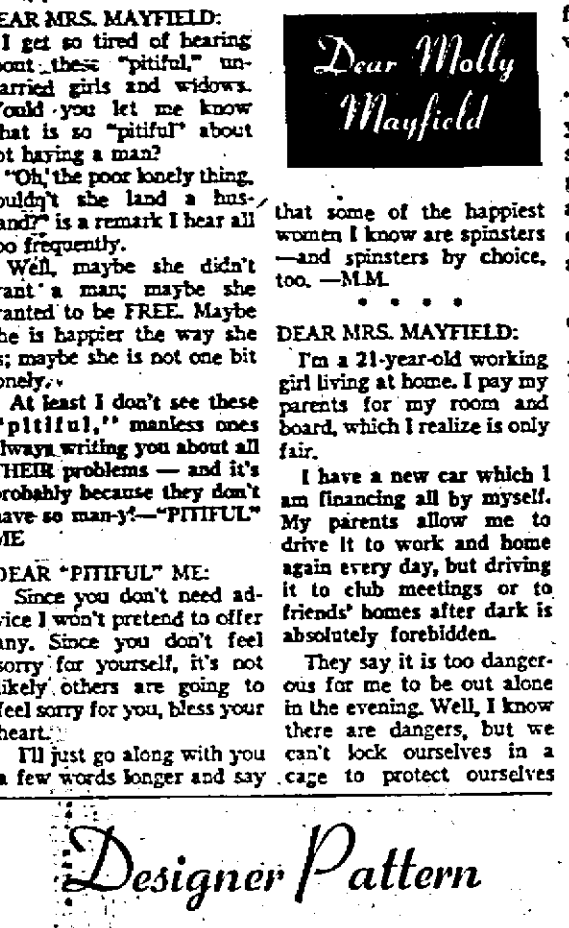

Please, Molly, tell me what to do. Should I stay out of it and say no more or what?—BOTHERED ONE

DEAR BOTHERED ONE:

If Mom and Dad put up with it, guess you'll have to. You are 16 and will be getting married one of these days and able to get away from it. It's deplorable that a situation like this should be allowed to develop but unless Mom or Dad takes over there isn't much hope for any improvement.

One thing you can do, though, is try and help the little fellow have a happier home by the many small attentions YOU can show him. —M.M.

PRINTED PATTERN

THE NEW DEEP DECOLLETAGE and a more classic version—both reveal the OLEG CASSINI genius for design! Printed Pattern M398 is very simle—all the magic is in the beautiful bosom and body shaping. Note for instance, the way the waist curves from slightly higher in front to natural at the sides to lower in back. Creates a narrow, willowy look you will love. The bow that marks the low decolletage is set on a separate bias band. Devastate the man in your, or an entire audience—sew and wear either version to Spring, Summer parties. Choose silk linen, shantung, crepe, faille, fine cotton.

Printed Pattern M398 is available in Misses' Sizes 8, 12, 14, 16 and 18. Size 16 requires 2⅞ yards 39-inch fabric.

BACK TO COLLEGE go the bicycles, golf clubs, surfboards and skis that visited here with their collegiate owners during Easter vacation. Donald Atwood of REA Express demonstrates the TLC that traveling birthday cakes receive.

Anything Goes . . . But Students

By CURTYNE DRISCOLL

Personnel at REA Express is braced for the onslaught of skis, bicycles, surfboards and golf clubs that will signal the end of Easter vacation for their collegiate owners this week.

"The only thing we can't ship is a live person," said Herbert Carpenter, chief clerk of the Long Beach office.

Sporting goods and luggage are not the only things that go to college. REA, formerly Railway Express Agency, does a brisk business in delivering laundry. Many a Long Beach mother receives a 28 or 30 pound case of dirty laundry every week or so to do up and return.

"It seems to give the students a feeling of closeness with home," commented Wilbur Lewis Bostic, manager. "We rather doubt that a laundry case is ever returned without some homemade cookies in it."

The local office had one steady exchange of laundry between a student in New York and her mother here. It takes four days, or if she's really desperate, it can go by air today and be delivered in New York tomorrow from door to door.

MOTHERS BEING the way they are, a large number of homemade birthday cakes travel by express to distant relatives. They are sent in open top cartons covered with clear plastic and, according to Bostic, get very tender loving care.

The new emphasis on visual education has resulted in a new type of cargo for the agency. Educational films visit California State College at Long Beach and Long Beach City College on a tight schedule. They travel strictly by air and there is a constant coming-and-going in increasing volume.

"Within five years I see everything in small shipments (less than a railway car or truckload) going entirely by air," Bostic stated.

"We now make shipments from Los Angeles to New York in five hours and are trying to solve the problem of transportation time to-and-from the airports. About the middle of April we hope to have some helicopter service from Long Beach Airport to LA International."

REA pioneered in air transport, with their first package air-borne in 1933. Dollar volume has increased from $1,000,000 in 1940 to a current $60,000,000.

YOU CAN STILL hire a guard armed with a sawed-off shotgun to travel with your shipment at $6.68 per hour. This may be of less interest to senders of birthday cakes than it is to the large number of coin collector-speculators who are currently shipping silver dollars briskly all over the U.S. as a result of the announcement made in Washigton that there would be no resumption of dollar coinage.

"Coins all travel in canvas bags," said Bostic. "And just about the most revolting thing that can happen to us is to have one of those bags break."

Carpenter's "most revolting" experience happened long ago, but it made an indelible impression on him. He and another man were assigned to the job of delivering an alligator to the Pike.

"Unfortunately," said Carpenter, "I got the end with the teeth."

The agency had a lively day with a shipment of snakes going from a State College professor to the Black Mountain Zoological Gardens.

ONE SNAKE GOT loose and found its way from the warehouse to the front counter where there was a goodly number of lady customers.

"It caused quite a commotion," said Bostic in what must be an understatement. "We called the professor and he came down and recaptured it."

Why didn't you just shove it out the door, he was asked.

"Well, we certainly couldn't do that," he said. "We must protect our shipments."

Sixtieth Fete on Sunday

Mr. and Mrs. Percy Hanewinckel will be honored next Sunday on the occasion of their sixtieth wedding anniversary at a dinner party at Sam's Sea Food Restaurant in Surfside.

The honorees, who live at 724 Vernon St., were married in Crescent City, Okla., in 1904. They moved to Long Beach in 1920 where Mr. Hanewinckel has owned and operated the Boys Transfer Company until his recent retirement. He is a past master of Neptune Lodge 619 of Masons and she is a member of Eastern Star Lodge.

• • • •

HOSTS for the dinner party will be the couple's three sons, Doyle, Jerry and Lowell Hanewinckel, and their wives, and a grandson, Len Herendeen. The couple had six children, 11 grandchildren and 11 great-grandchildren.

Singers and Dancers at Auditorium

A troupe of entertainers from the Norton Voice and Dance Studio of South Gate will headline the Community Program sponsored by the Long Beach Recreation Department Monday at 7:30 p.m. at Municipal Auditorium.

Included among the performers will be Pearl Riebe and her son, Jim. Mrs. Riebe is a song writer, pianist and vocalist. Her son is a vocalist and has appeared on the Lawrence Welk show.

Other members of the group are Donna Caswell, tap and modern jazz dancing; Vivianna Ross, vocalist; L. L. Kassak, dancer; the De Manies and Zappos, exhibition ballroom dancing; Cynthia Hocott, toe dancer; Gayle Sauen, the Charleston and Gloria Masterson, baton twirler.

• • • •

AL ROSS will serve as master of ceremonies. Community singing directed by Carl H. Robertson with Regenia Beam as accompanist will open the program.

The Tyo Orchestra will play for old time and square dancing following the stage show. Joe Marshall will be the caller.

A Campaign, and Away They GO-P!

Exciting schedule of events planned for forthcoming 12th annual Republican Women's Conference in Washington, D.C., April 7 to 11 elicits anticipatory smiles from Long Beach trio of dynamic leaders who will attend.

They're (from left) Mrs. Logan Goodknight, president of California Federation of Republican Women (membership is approximately 60,000). Mrs. Roland Coltrane, president of 32nd Congressional District Republican Women's Club; and Mrs. J. Lloyd O'Donnell, vice chairman for women of Republican State Central Committee and national program chairman.

Also expected to attend from Long Beach is Mrs. John D. Bowler Jr., co-chairman of Los Angeles County Goldwater-for-President committee.

Mrs. Patricia Reilly Hitt of Orange, Republican national committeewoman for California, is chairman of the delegation of 100 women from all parts of the state who will jet to Washington for the five days of intensive study and orientation in political techniques. This is one of the largest groups ever to attend the conference.

Headquarters will be the Sheraton Park Hotel. Mrs. Elly M. Peterson, assistant chairman of Republican National Committee, will direct the conference which will be considered the official kick-off for the GOP campaigns of 1964. Over 3,000 women are expected.

Senator Margaret Chase Smith of Maine will be the keynote speaker at the opening session and all GOP potential presidential nominees, with the exception of Nixon and Lodge, will be speakers, as will GOP leaders in Congress.

Top 'Y' Officer to Speak at Membership Drive Tea

Mrs. Earl Cranston of Claremont will be the featured speaker at a YWCA membership tea on Thursday at 1:30 p.m. at 550 Pacific Avenue.

Mrs. Cranston is a member of the national board of the "Y" and has been vice president-at-large as well as serving on its world executive committee. At one time she was a member of the Pasadena Board of Education and was on the City Council of Redlands.

Mrs. Harry Serex, chairman of the membership committee, will preside at the tea. She will be assisted by committee members, Mmes. Pearle Anderson, Henry Bodes, J. D. Gabrial, Thurman Goode, D. A. Morrison, M. Earle Radebaugh, Rex Swartz, Misses Marjorie Dougherty and Katherine Morrison.

• • • •

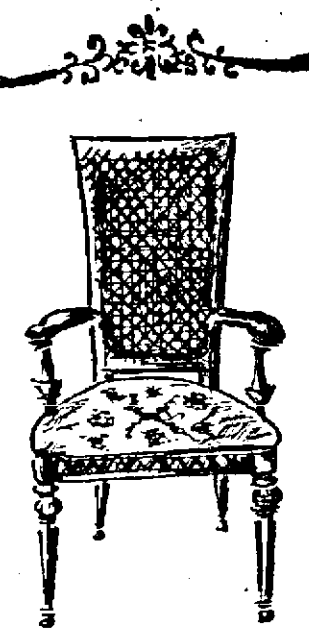

MRS. CRANSTON will confer with the local YWCA staff in the morning on aspects of the national YWCA convention in Cleveland, O., April 20 to 25. She will be entertained at luncheon by Mrs. James Starr, president of the board of directors.

Benefit Party

Women's Guild, Church of Religious Science, will have a benefit luncheon and card party Thursday noon at 505 E. 36th St. Mrs. Ray Burkland, president, will be in charge of arrangements assisted by Glodine White. Music will be presented by Virgil and Michael Haskins. Guests are welcome.

CHEF OF THE WEEK

Wins Votes at Stove, Too

By MILDRED K. FLANARY
Staff Writer, I-T Food Editor

He has held 15 elected offices in Long Beach—six in Los Angeles County and six in the State of California—all in the field of real estate. So one could deduce that he's in the real estate business.

Today's Chef of the Week, Arnold B. Berg, has just been elected president, Long Beach Apartment House Association for 1964, and was recently appointed to the City Planning Commission by City Manager John Mansell. (Mansell cooks, too!)

The real estate profession was the culmination — not the beginning — of Berg's business experiences. Back in his native town of Minot, N. D. at the age of 14, he became a clerk (after school hours) in one of the local banks.

• • • •

BERG was graduated from Minot High School, studied at the University of Minnesota, Minot State Teacher's College, and then migrated to the State of Washington. It was only to visit relatives, but he remained to complete several courses in law at Washington State U.

In the late 30s he came to Long Beach and accepted a position as general manager of a grocery chain which later became a part of the gigantic Safeway Stores.

• • • •

WORLD WAR II interrupted his career and he served as a member of an infantry training cadre for more than a year. Returning to civilian life, Berg became production manager of the Electric Development Co., which was engaged in the manufacture of submersible pumps.

But to get to his real estate career. He had dabbled to some extent in the procurement of run-down properties, rehabilitation and selling. This was in the late 30's.

Since that time he has served as chairman of the Long Beach Board of Realtors' legislative committee, as its vice president, its president, and on its board of directors. These same offices can be duplicated with relationship to the Long Beach Apartment House Association, and the Associated Property Owners of Long Beach, as well.

Arnold B. Berg

BERG is a member of the Chamber of Commerce, American Legion Post 27, Elks Lodge 888, and was a charter member of the Society of Real Estate Appraisers 94. In 1960, he was selected as Realtor-of-the-Year by the Long Beach Board.

A director of the CREA (California Real Estate Association) for seven years, Berg has been its "veep," its state director at large, and a member of the multiple listing committee.

He was chosen as chairman of the Southern Division of CREA on Planning and Zoning in 1961; and in 1962, was one of the authors compiling the pamphlet on planning and zoning which has now been published by CREA for use of California realtors and city planners in the State of California.

Aside from keeping up with him, Mrs. Berg (Tecky) has served as hostess for the International Beauty Congress for the past 10 years.

• • • •

UPLAND game hunting, trap shooting and golf are his modes of relaxation, and his golf game seems to improve when playing with borrowed clubs. Each year Berg returns to South Dakota to hunt with five friends from five different states, with whom he has hunted for years.

The Bergs divide their time between Long Beach and Palm Springs in their camper-trailer. While there, our "Chef" does all the cooking, and we're told, his salesmanship holds out when it comes to selling his own cooking.

His recipe today, quite naturally, is for pheasant.

HUNTERS PHEASANT
"South Dakota Style"

Wash pheasant in salt water and carefully cut out all shot.

- 1 tblsp. aromatic bitters
- 1 tblsp. lemon juice
- ¼ cup water

- 1 2½-lb. pheasant cut into serving pieces
- 1 tblsp. salt
- 2 tsp. accent
- 1 tsp. garlic salt
- 2 eggs, well beaten
- 1½ cups crushed corn flakes
- ½ cup flour
- 1 cup margarine or butter

Combine bitters, lemon juice and water in small sauce pan. Heat to boiling.

Season pheasant pieces with combined salt, accent and garlic salt. Place pheasant pieces in shallow pan. Pour hot sauce over pheasant. Let stand at room temperature for 1 hour, turning pieces frequently. Drain, saving the leftover sauce; combine with eggs.

Coat pheasant pieces, first with flour, then dip in egg mixture, and then in crushed corn flakes.

Fry in one cup of butter or margarine using electric frypan set at 350°. Fry to golden brown on both sides —usually about 15 minutes per side. Serves 4.

ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

'The Lord Helps Those...'

DEAR ABBY: I am a 32-year-old widow with four boys to raise. I have no desire to marry again, but all my friends tell me my boys need a father. They are always arranging for me to meet this man and that man. I love my boys very much, and am raising them in a good Christian atmosphere. They are good boys, and I discipline them when they need it just as a father would do. I take in sewing and manage to keep my bills paid, so I don't need a husband to support us. I believe if the good Lord intends for me to have another husband, He will take care of it Himself. Do you think I should accept the company of men with marriage in mind just because people think my boys need a father, even though I don't think I need a band?—SATISFIED

ABBY

DEAR SATISFIED: As a Christian you must know that the Lord said, "It is not good that man should be alone.' (Genesis II, 18.) And the same goes for woman. God helps those who help themselves, and perhaps God is trying to help you through thoughtful friends.

• • • •

DEAR ABBY: Have you any suggestions for getting our son to date a certain girl? This girl is charming, intelligent, has a wonderful personality, and would be an ideal match for our son. He is 25, but he seems to prefer the more glamorous, flirty type. We know that once he gets to know this girl, he would appreciate her fine qualities.—PARENTS

DEAR PARENTS: I cant tell you how to get your son to date a certain girl, but I can tell you how to sour him on her before he even sees her. Just keep telling him how "good" she would be for him! Your best move would be to arrange for them to meet "accidentally." And let him "discover" her for himself.

• • • •

DEAR ABBY: Our baby is only three months old. My husband's family is quite wealthy and they have spent a lot on gifts for her. I must admit there is a great deal our baby wouldn't have if it weren't for them. On the other hand, my parents barely make ends meet, and, though they would love to buy things for our baby, they can't afford to. Ours is the only grandchild on both sides, and both sets of grandparents are wild about her. But we don't want her to grow up thinking that because all the presents come from one set of grandparents the other set doesn't love her as much. What can we do about this? Or should we just keep quiet and teach our child that love means more than presents?—NEW PARENTS

DEAR PARENTS: The affection of very young children is easily bought with gifts. It takes a mature mind to reason that "love" means more than presents. Your husband should explain this to his generous parents. They'll understand.

Grand Army Circles Meet

Southern District of Ladies of the Grand Army of the Republic Circles will gather for their quarterly meeting on Monday at 10 a.m. in Patriotic Hall, 1816 S. Figueroa St., Los Angeles.

Attending from Abraham Lincoln Circle 44 of Long Beach will be Mrs. Florence Tallman, state department junior vice president; Mrs. Mabel Fischer, state department Council of Administration; Mrs. Ona Nelson, assistant chairman of forthcoming convention in May; Mrs. Bonnie McLaren of Leisure World Department of Veterans Service; Dr. Mabel Conger, secretary of the Southern District, Mrs. Marjorie Woods, Circle 44 president; Mrs. Myrtle Thompson, past president; and others of the 70-member group.

Hope for the Best

Today's hand sprung from the fertile brain of Donald Parson and may be found in his book "Fall of the Cards."

Obviously, it never took place, but it does illustrate one important principle of dummy play. It is to try to find some combination of adverse cards that will allow you to make your contract.

Once East discards a club at trick one, it is not difficult for South to get a count on the trumps. West has all six of them. It is also reasonable to assume that East holds all nine clubs so that West started with six spades, three hearts and four diamonds.

As a reader you can look at the East-West hands and confirm this. You also note that West's three hearts include both the queen and ten.

Declarer South had to assume this, too, since if East held either of the hearts, there would be no possible way to make the contract.

• • • •

BEFORE going any further, see if you can figure out the way South took advantage of the favorable heart situation to make the slam.

He started out by drawing all West's trumps. He had to make five discards from dummy. Four were low diamonds. The other was the ace of clubs.

Then he started on hearts. Dummy's jack held the first heart trick and the king the next one. Then he led the deuce of clubs from dummy and while East made his king, he had to give South the last three tricks with the queen of clubs and ace-nine of hearts.

New Films to Interest Sports Fans

Long Beach Public Library has films to appeal to almost everyone. In addition to a permanent collection of more than 500 16mm films, the library will offer another 14 during April through the Southern California Film Council Circuit.

For sports fans there are: "Big Moments in Sports," the story of the 1951 Giant-Dodger play-off and Roger Bannister's breaking of the 4 minute mile in 1954; "Riding High," which follows a horseback excursion in the Canadian Rockies; and "Outboard Fisherman, U.S.A.," produced by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service. "Small Craft Safety" is especially timely now that boats are being readied for the season ahead.

• • • •

Other films which may be borrowed in April include: "Camel Who Took a Walk," made from a favorite children's picture book; "Dances of India," "A Date With British Columbia," "Denmark, Fairytale Lane," "Everybody's Prejudiced," "Hawaiian Islands — Their Origin and Nature," "Literature in America: The Short Story," "Poland and the Soviet Power," "Siam" and "Many Faces of Spain."

Recent additions to the library's permanent collection are: "First Aid Now," "Four Black Days in November" and "Washington State—Appleland."

THE FABLE AND THE FACT — little known truths for media buyers

FABLE: SAN FRANCISCO HAS THE HIGHEST INDUSTRIAL PAYROLL IN NORTHERN CALIFORNIA

FACT: METRO SAN JOSE HAS THE HIGHEST INDUSTRIAL PAYROLL IN NORTHERN CALIFORNIA

As a media buyer, did you know this?

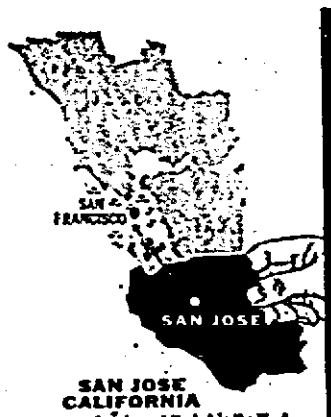

It means the average wage earner in Metro San Jose has more money to spend for your goods or services than one living in San Francisco. About $600 per year more.* This makes him a mighty good customer.

Yet many media buyers still think San Francisco is the biggest, richest market in Northern California. It's not. Many still think they can cover Northern California with San Francisco newspapers. They can't. ABC shows the biggest one covers only 13% of rich Metro San Jose families.

That's why—to sell Northern California—you must sell the rich, money-spending people in Metro San Jose.

And the only way to reach them is with the Mercury and News.

Don't Shield Child From Death Fact

NEW YORK—Children who are shielded from the fact of death develop fantasies about death that are worse than the reality, according to Dr. Benjamin Spock.

Writing in the April Redbook, the noted child-care expert stated that being able to discuss a death in the family is a comfort to the children as well as to the parents.

It's only when the children are not given a satisfactory explanation, Dr. Spock said, that they turn to their imaginations for morbid and sometimes damaging answers.

Death in the family often involves a guilt reaction, Dr. Spock warned. "A young child is apt to feel—unconsciously, at least—that he bears some of the responsibility for the death of a brother or sister or parent." So, if a child has ever had angry thoughts about the person who died, he might feel that he caused the death.

• • • •

SINCE A child is able to suppress his feelings or disguise them to a remarkable degree, Dr. Spock told parents that mourning is a natural and necessary way for them to recover from a loss. "With adults and children," he said, "there is always a deep sense of loss that cannot be evaded or patched up quickly."

It isn't true, Dr. Spock pointed out, that the child who hardly seems to notice the loss, or the mother who remains cheerfully considerate, has somehow escaped the blow. He cautioned that grief which is held back may break out in disguised forms such as anger, phobias or compulsions.

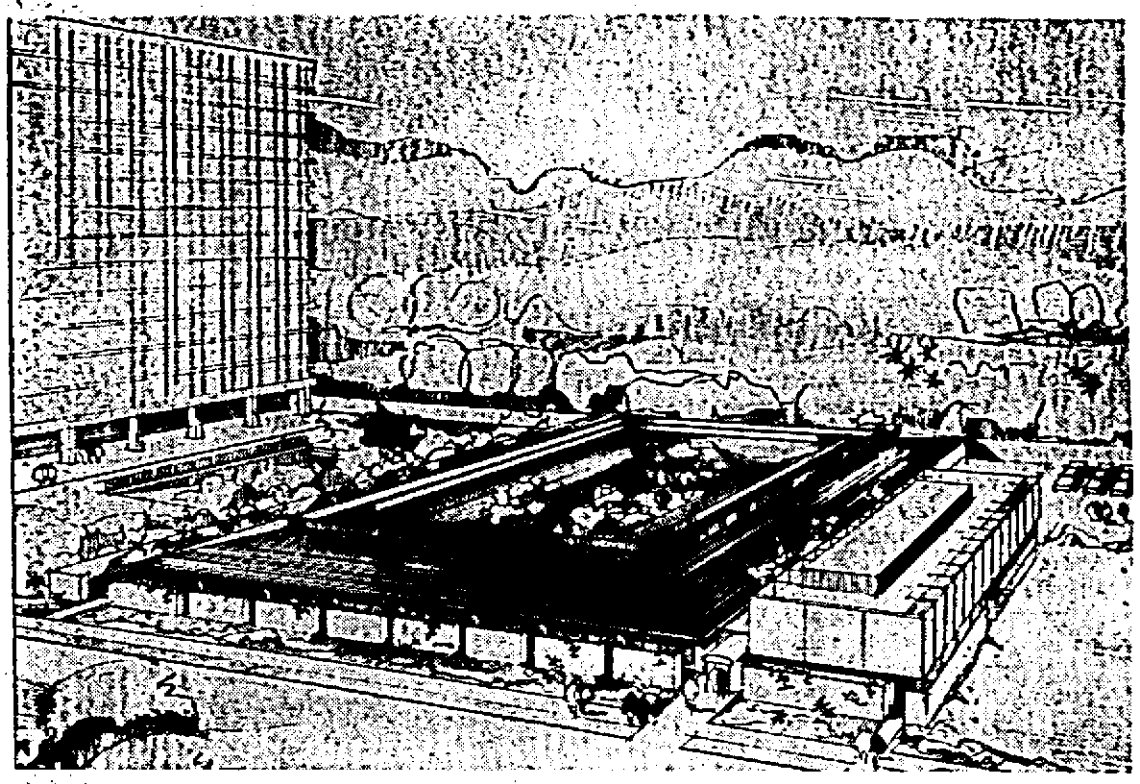

One effect on a child of suppressing grief altogether, Dr. Spock said, is that he may grow up afraid to love anyone deeply because of the risk of being deprived again.

To prevent this from happening, parents are advised to discuss death seriously and honestly, to talk about the person who died openly, and to answer a child's questions in a way he can understand.

Hospital Will Be Near Towers

ARCHITECT'S SKETCH shows John Brown Convalescent Hospital, to be erected adjacent to John Brown Towers, 3737 Atlantic Ave. Opening of $400,000 hospital is slated for early in 1965.

June Set for Start of John Brown Hospital

Third phase of the John Brown retirement center under construction at 3737 Atlantic Avenue materialized last week as an announcement ceremony was held for a convalescent hospital just north of the present John Brown Towers.

Start of construction is scheduled for about June 1.

Official representatives for the occasion included Mayor Edwin Wade; Ray B. Bliley, first vice president of the Chamber of Commerce; and Clinton H. Fowler, vice president of the John Brown Schools Foundation.

• • • •

THE $400,000 hospital, designed by Hugh Gibbs and son Donald, architects, AIA, will be a 15,000 square foot, single story 72 bed structure.

The Brown project for senior citizens also includes a restaurant under construction to the south of the Towers.

Formal opening of the Towers and restaurant is scheduled the first of June.

LOOKING OVER THE PLANS

• • • •

FOWLER said the hospital will serve as a medical facility for Towers residents but also will be available to the public.

Each of the 169 apartments in the Towers will be so equipped that an emergency button can be used to summon medical aid from the hospital.

The retirement center, following guidelines laid down by a presidential conference on aging, is designed to provide housing, food and medical care for Towers residents, who must be at least 62 years old.

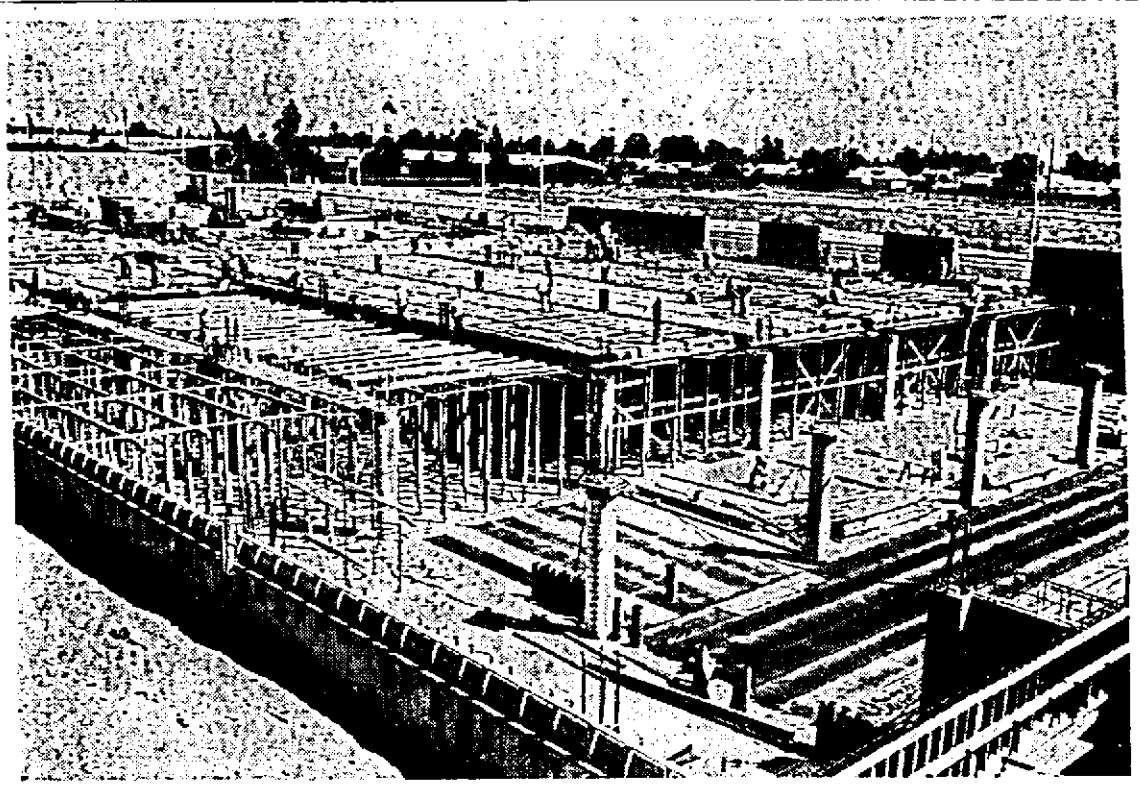

• • • •

THE HOSPITAL will be built on land leased from Mrs. A. C. Sellery, widow of the physician who founded Seaside Hospital in Long Beach.

Opening of the new unit is scheduled for the first of next year.

Interim arrangements for medical care of Towers residents moving in prior to the opening of the hospital will be made with other hospitals, Fowler said.

He explained that medical service and insurance are optional for Towers residents, as will be food and housekeeping services.

JOSEPH KUEHNLE
Urges Fair Values

Hits Bias in Property Appraisals

By VERN ANTHONY
Southland Progress Editor

Recognizing a growing challenge facing the property appraisal profession, the president of the American Institute of Real Estate Appraisers last week prodded John Q. Public to be more careful in selecting reputable appraisers.

Joseph G. Kuehnle of Chicago, in Los Angeles to help make arrangements for the Institute's national convention to be held there in November, spelled out the problem at a press conference in the Ambassador Hotel.

• • • •

HE POINTED to recent 'scandals' in interstate highway right of way acquisition appraisals and in mortgage lending practices. Some lending organizations, he said, have 'kited' appraisals in biased and unethical procedure to obtain higher loans.

However, he saw no critical problems in Southern California, where realty dealings have been at a fast pace the past few years.

He said the tremendous interstate highway program involving acquisition of hundreds of millions of dollars worth of land has increased the need for competent appraisers to "protect the national economy."

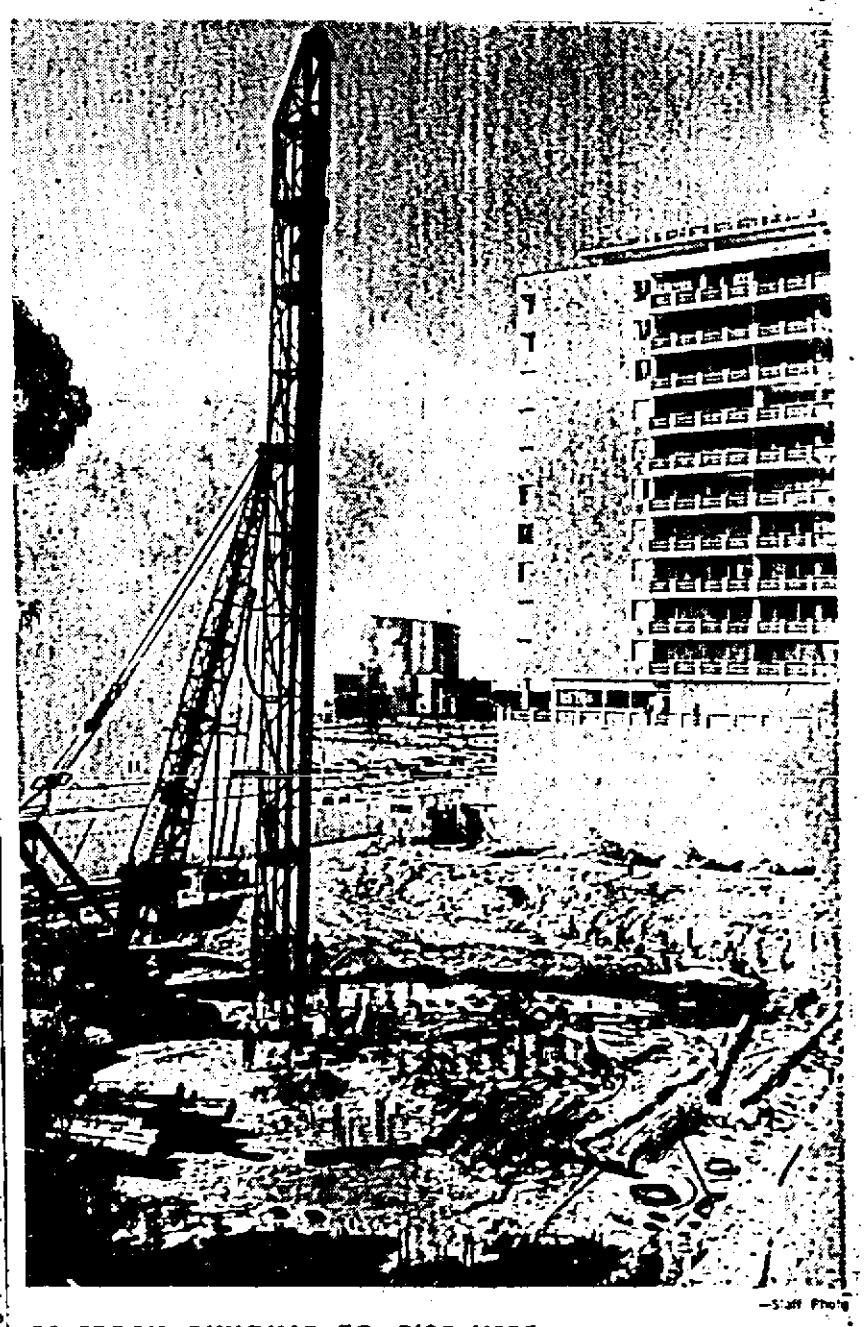

• • • •

KUEHNLE STRESSED responsibility of the public to employ qualified appraisers belonging to the Institute or similar organizations and of appraisers to be ethical and unbiased in their valuations. (Institute members designate themselves MAI—member of Appraisal Institute.)

"The Institute," Kuehnle said, "aims to enforce ethical and impartial procedure."

The Southern California Chapter of the Institute, headed by Stanley E. Goode Jr., of Santa Ana, now has a Standards of Practice Committee investigating all complaints involving members, and will enforce discipline.

Kuehnle formerly did appraisal work for the Cook County assessor in Chicago. He now is vice president of Walter R. Kuehnle & Co.

31-STORY BUILDING TO RISE HERE

Steam from piledriver partially obscures big Long Beach Arena (center background) in this view of "groundwork" for builder Henry Sassoon's 31-story circular apartment tower under construction at foot of Linden Avenue. Skyscraper is going up just east of "600 Ocean" apartment building shown at right, which was built by Sassoon and already is occupied.

ON SIGNAL HILL

Computer to Expedite High-Rise

Computer processing will be used to expedite construction of the 12-story and penthouse condominium apartment building to be erected in Signal Hill at Hill Street and Cherry Avenue.

J. R. Slatton, executive vice president of Tri-Cor-Inc., general contractors for the $1,400,000 job, said the firm already had used data processing successfully

• • • •

GROUNDBREAKING for the new project was held last week. City officials, principals in the project, oil company representatives and other guests participated in a luncheon program at the Hilltop Cafe following the groundbreaking.

City Administrator Frank Baxter hailed the event as opening a new chapter for Signal Hill comparable to the finding of oil in 1921.

Toshe Corporation, headed R. A. Simmons, is developer of the high-rise project, on which work is due to start in April.

Builders to Meet

Western builders from all states this side of the Rocky Mountains will meet May 26-28 in San Francisco's Fairmont Hotel for the Sixth Annual Pacific Coast Builders Conference.

The "Soaring '60s" is the convention theme, according to Donald H. Stoneson, PCBC Conference president for the second year in a row.

The conference is sponsored by the Home Builders Council of California, Inc., representing 14 individual home builder associations.

NAREB Head, in L.B., Raps Administration Bill

Strong opposition to the big Omnibus Housing bill now before Congress was voiced in Long Beach last week by Edward E. Mendenhall, president of the National Association of Real Estate Boards (NAREB).

"I think it is clear the intended passengers on this 'omnibus' are free-loaders. The bill has subsidies for almost everyone," Mendenhall said addressing Realtors at their breakfast meeting in the Crown cafeteria.

The NAREB chief, who lives in High Point, N.C., and is a brother of Mayor William Mendenhall of Signal Hill, stressed several housing bill proposals which NAREB especially opposes.

• • • •

HE CHARGED that a proposal to insure a $50 million mortgage for a developer to set up a new town would lead to federal control tactics in such new communities.

He also opposed expansion of public housing on the grounds that federal ownership of family shelter is "inherently wrong." He argued that housing for people in need of help is a welfare problem best handled by local agencies.

He did favor certain provision of the administration's bill, but with a minimum of "government interference and subsidies."

• • • •

ON THE CIVIL RIGHTS question, Mendenhall said:

"Realtors are firmly opposed to the forced housing laws adopted or proposed by a number of states and cities in which the traditional right to own, rent, and dispose of real property as the owner sees fit is destroyed under the guise of providing a new so-called right for individuals of minority groups.

"The point which unfortunately is so often overlooked in the whole situation is that social acceptance, which is so bound up with human emotions, cannot be legislated.

"As much as we may deplore snobbery, class consciousness, racial bias, or whatever you want to call it,

Plan North Sea Oil Exploration

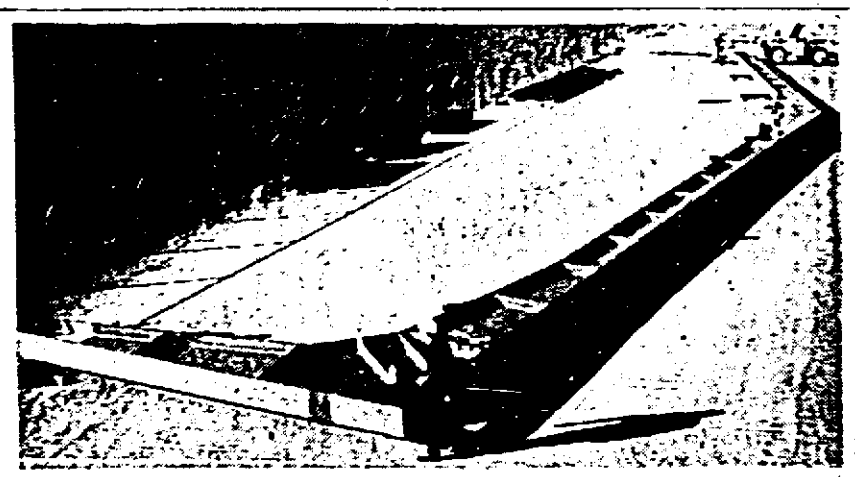

Signal Oil & Gas Co., Richfield Oil Corp., and Marathon Oil Co. through its wholly owned subsidiary, Marathon International Oil Co., have joined as equal partners in an oil and gas exploration venture in the United Kingdom area of the North Sea, officials of the three companies said last week. Signal is operator for the group.

Geophysical surveys of an area of 25,000 square miles off the eastern coast of England will be started as soon as weather conditons are suitable.

Dupuy to Address Civic Association

"The Rumford Act vs. The Freedom Initiative" will be discussed Tuesday at the luncheon meeting of the Artesia Street-Long Beach Boulevard Civic Improvement Association.

Reg F. Dupuy, legislative chairman of the Long Beach District Board of Realtors will be speaker. The meeting, to be held at Angelino's Cafe, 940 S. Long Beach Blvd., Compton, will be open to the public.

BIG SPAN FOR PORT OF LONG BEACH

Giant, 200-foot span is shown being checked at Bethlehem Steel Company's Torrance works, before being disassembled and shipped to the Port of Long Beach to frame a transit shed. Floors Prestressed, Hoisted Into Position on Torrance Project

By VERN ANTHONY
Southland Progress Editor

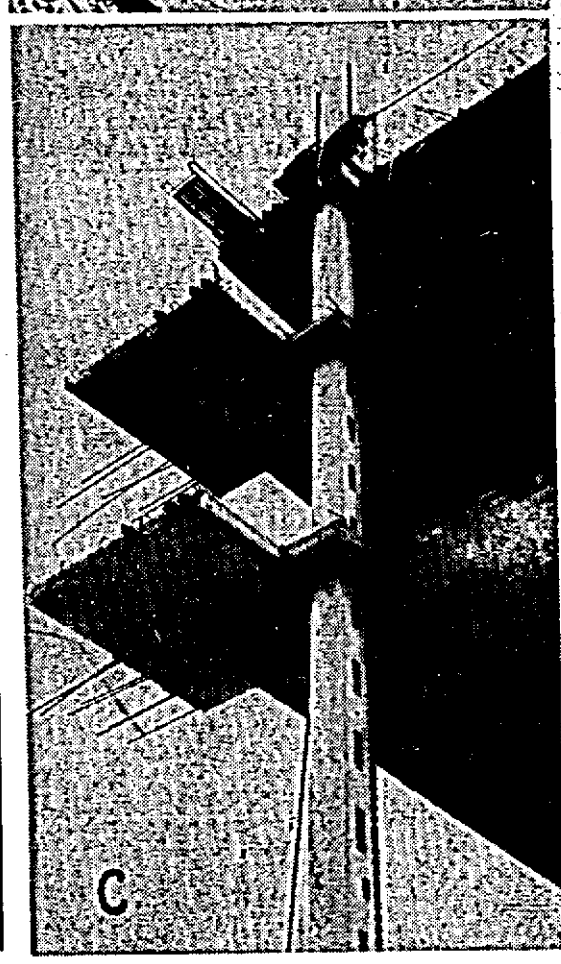

Several stages in prestressed lift slab process construction under way on Sakura Gardens project in Torrance are shown here. Work is being done by Western Concrete Structures Co., Gardena. Site is at Tandem Way and Dalemead Street. Complex includes square blocks of two and three bedroom apartments—13 with fireplaces—with two-story structures around three sides and six five-story buildings in center area. Features will include heated pool, cabana, Japanese garden and individual patios. Unusual construction on central building involves hoisting of completed prestressed floors into position on upright supports. Photo 'A' shows workmen polishing surface of concrete floor on stack of slabs. Picture 'B' was taken as two floor slabs were being hoisted. Photo 'C' illustrates how slabs slide up along uprights and are fixed into position. In 'D,' three top floors have been lifted. There will be six buildings like this one in central section of apartment complex. Illustrated at bottom are overall views of how Sakura Gardens will look when finished and a drawing of how Japanese garden will appear on completion. Prestressed lift slab process of construction is not new; but only in late years has advanced technology brought it into major importance. The lift slab method is simply a process of casting floor and roof slabs directly on top of one another. Columns put in place before the slabs are cast become pedestals on which hydraulic jacks are placed to lift the slabs vertically into their final positions. Western has become a leader in this type of construction, which has proved to be speedier and more economical, it is said. This lift slab process has been used in various other Southland projects. Examples are: Costa Mesa High School and Nortronics Division, Northrop Aircraft Corp., Anaheim. In fact, several major engineering advancements in lift slab construction were pioneered by Western.

Star Alumnus of SAC Gets New Honor

James A. Smith, who is general manager of Eastman Kodak's Pacific southern sales division, and who was Santa Ana College's outstanding alumnus of 1960, keeps right on winning honors.

JAMES SMITH

The California Junior College Association picked him at its San Francisco spring convention for achievement in his career.

The organization took note of the fact that Smith was a junior college student in getting the initial phases of his college training. Subsequently, Smith was graduated from Northwestern University. He has been with Eastman 34 years.

While in Santa Ana High School and Santa Ana College, Smith was an honor student. He played football, basketball and baseball for the college, and ran on its track team. He headed the college's frosh and soph classes, and headed the Associated Students during his campus years. Still active in alumni affairs, he now lives at 1012 Eastridge Drive, Whittier.

Dividend Declared

Kaiser Steel Corporation's Board of Directors last week declared the regular quarterly dividend of 36½ cents per share on the preferred stock, and a dividend of $1.4375 per share on the 5¾ per cent convertible preference stock, both payable March 31 to stockholders of record at the close of business on March 13.

AS VIEWED BY LEADERS

Western Business Outlook Is Bright

Western business leaders are predicting a prosperous second quarter in 1964, according to the latest survey by the Prudential Insurance Co's Western Business Forecast panel.

About 87 per cent of the responding businessmen are forecasting that second quarter business will equal or exceed first quarter results of this year.

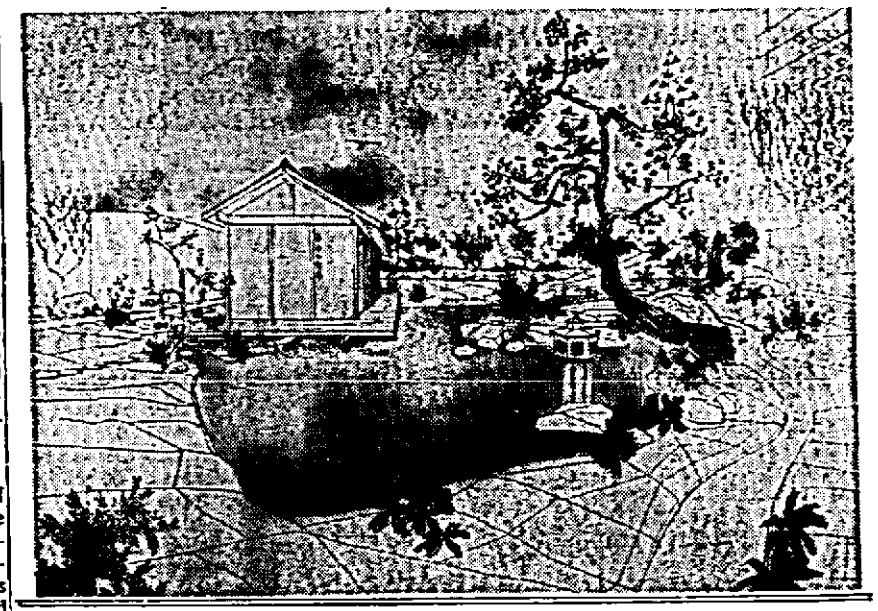

Similar optimism prevails comparing the upcoming second quarter to the corresponding one in 1963. About 85 per cent of the panel predict their business will equal or exceed the 1963 period. More than half expect gains in the 1-10 per cent range while approximately one-sixth are expecting even greater increases.

* * * *

THE AVERAGE degree of optimism expressed by the panel has remained almost unchanged in the past three surveys, although the opinions of the separate industries and geographical areas have varied from quarter to quarter. The finance, insurance and real estate sector is decidedly more optimistics than on the previous survey and views the coming quarter more favorably than any other industry.

The service group is also showing very positive views with 91 per cent expecting the second quarter to equal or better the year-ago level. Agriculture-extractive is the least optimistic sector.

In the various geographic groupings the Southern California, Arizona, Nevada area registered a high degree of optimism with 83 per cent of those answering returning equal or better predictions for the upcoming quarter.

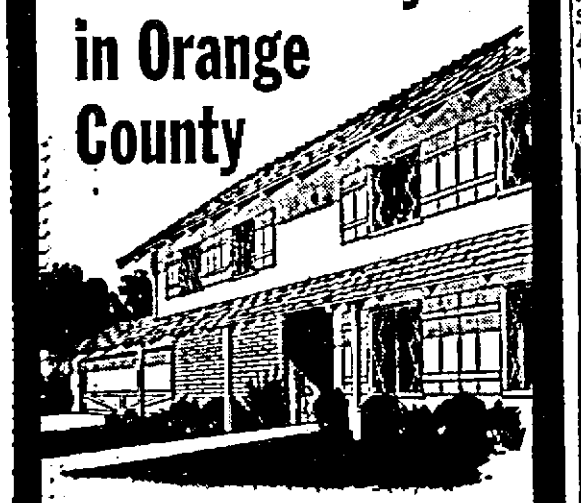

Small Business Loan Data Aired

Nearly $24 million in loans were approved by the Small Business Administration during January, according to an announcement by Alvin P. Meyers, regional director of SBA for Southern California, Arizona, and Southern Nevada.

Approvals for the month included 347 business loans for $17.5 million and 164 disaster loans for $1.4 million. The balance was divided between local development companies and small business investment companies.

Twelve of the business loans went to new enterprises. SBA loans to local development companies created an additional 260 new jobs.

FEATHER RIVER WATER...

A SHIFTING OF LAND VALUES IN SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

THE FACTS

- Nearly two billion dollars is being spent to bring Feather River water to Southern California
- An additional 8,000,000 people are due to arrive in the next few years
- Residential land in Orange County is now selling for $32,000 per acre

Don't these facts suggest that low-priced, semi-arid lands in Los Angeles County are about to come into their own?

A very interesting treatise on the Feather River water project has just been released. Available to land investors without charge.

Southern California Mountain-Ringed Recreational Retreat . . . for Discriminating Buyers

Close-In Location—Two hours, twenty minutes from Los Angeles over freeways and excellent roads to "Old West" enclosure and charm. Historic gold rush area in beautiful natural basin is protected by surrounding mountains. Accessible by three roads—and no snowplay on the roads.

Lush, Growing Land—In Walker Basin, an area of working ranches with lots of trees and grass vegetation, the property is rich in history. On it the famous old Joe Walker gold mine was dozed, other water came in faster than it could be pumped out.

Fabulous Climate—At the 3500-foot level it is definitely cooler in Summer, enjoyable all year. Four seasons, blue skies, good rainfall, warm days, cool clean, clear mountain air make this a wonderful vacationland all year.

Water and Utilities—Fed by runoff from surrounding mountains, the water table is reportedly good. A 48-foot well sunk in 1963 tested 240 gallons per hour. Electricity is available, and telephones are now in.

A Great Playland—Surrounded on three sides by Sequoia National Forest and overlooked by towering peaks to 8,000 feet, this is Nature's country. Ideal for horses, it provides practically endless miles of adventure on horseback. Just 18 miles north you can fish, swim, boat and water ski on Lake Isabella. Another 15 miles is Shirley Meadows, with good snow, ski-runs and rope tows. Wildlife Paradise—Excellent hunting, easy limits on a variety of game birds, and one of the largest deer herds in the state. Acreages—There are nine spacious spreads—10 acres and larger. Once a working cattle ranch, had pleasantly existing quarter horses, this is scenic land with oaks, rock formations, stream beds, hillsides and rolling hills. Each parcel has a choice of several sites for building that hideaway home. Plenty of land is available for you to divide and retain a view site for yourself.

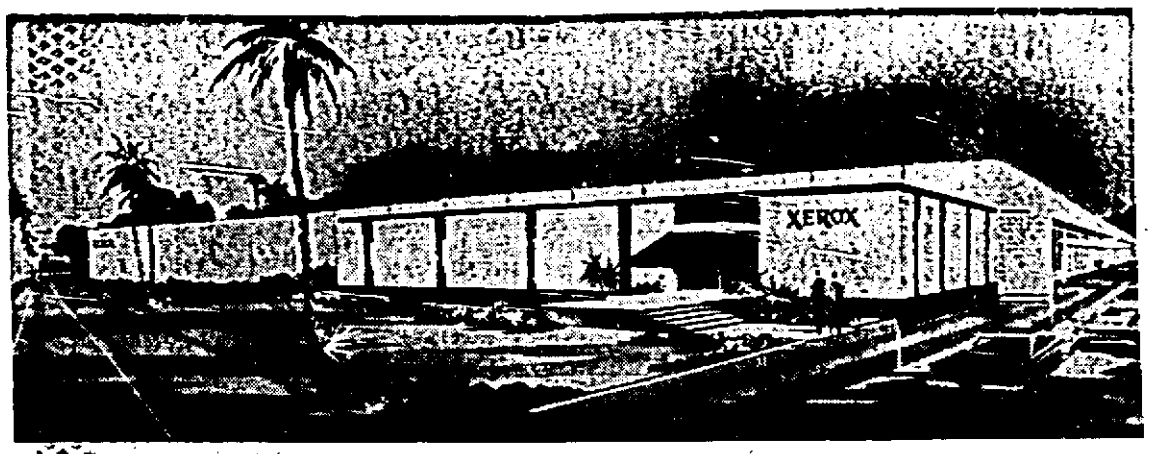

Not a Cheap Speculation—As $10 down and $10 when you catch our promotion—and not decent land. This is good land at a fair price in an unspoiled high mountain valley setting, for those who hope to invest in recreational living. We insist you stand on the land and know what you are buying. Act first, mail the coupon today for additional information.

NAREB Head Talks in L.B.

we still must admit its existence and that it can be cured only by education which brings tolerance, understanding, and acceptance. The achievement of social consent will automatically solve any housing problem which may exist."

President John Webster of the Long Beach board presided at the meeting.

• • • •

IN THE ABSENCE of Mayor Edwin Wade of Long Beach, Mayor Mendenhall of Signal Hill presented Long Beach's key to the city to his brother.

Also present and representing the national association were Reg F. Dupuy and Clive Graham, and Al Skyes, regional vice president of the 22nd District in California. Others invited from neighboring realty boards attending were: Bea Axton, president of the Downey Board of Realtors; James Hartley, past regional vice president; Paul Williams, President of the Bellflower Board of Realtors and Robert Allred, junior past regional vice president of CREA.

• • • •

MELVIN L. MOULD, past president of the local board and now serving on the Brokers Institute as local representative to the national association, also was introduced.

Barbara Moss, local Realtor, and past national president of the Executive Officers Council of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, introduced Mendenall.

After the meeting Mendenhall paid a surprise visit to the Long Beach City Council and was recognized by Mayor Wade.

Santa Fe Springs Plant Readied for Xerox

SANTA FE SPRINGS — Xerox Corporation, manufacturer of graphic communications equipment, soon will occupy a new $1 million West Coast distribution center here.

The fully air-conditioned building is scheduled for completion about mid-year, at which time it will serve to speed parts and supplies to customers in a 10-state area, according to Alex N. Telischak, vice president, procurement and distribution.

• • • •

THE NEW CENTER will occupy $100,000 square feet of a 10-acre area near the Santa Ana Freeway. It is located along the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe railroad, is equipped with adjustable elevators to facilitate truck loading and will contain such features as automatic conveyors, engineered packing stations and floor to roof space utilization.

Xerox, which has branches in Anaheim and El Segundo, which was founded in 1906 as The Haloid Co., moved into the spotlight with its post World War II development of a dry copying process known as xerography, a feature of which is that it permits copies to be made in seconds on ordinary paper.

The Santa Fe Springs building is being constructed by the Noyes Roach Co. of Los Angeles and will be leased to Xerox upon completion by Arthur Gilbert & Associates, Beverly Hills real estate developers.

Contract Let to Hawthorne Firm

HAWTHORNE — The Cosmodyne Corp. has received the contract for fabrication and installation of the high-vacuum piping system for Stanford University's linear accelerator, Cosmodyne President James L. Bartlett Jr. announced last week.

The contract, placed by the Stanford Linear Accelerator Center as prime contractor to the Atomic Energy Commission, is approximately $800,000.

Cosmodyne also will install all of the high-vacuum pumps for the electron gun. Work on the contract will begin immediately, with completion scheduled towards the end of 1965.

Students to Vie in L.B. Realtor Essay Contest

Barbara Moss, chairman of the Education Committee of the Long Beach District Board of Realtors, has announced the board will conduct an essay contest again this year.

Purpose of the annual contest is to stimulate a deeper appreciation of the importance of home ownership to the national security.

The contest is open to students in the 9th, 10th, 11th and 12th grades.

Deadline is May 15, so interested students are urged to start working on their essays at once.

The subject is—"The Home Is The Heart And Hope Of The Nation." Each entrant is required to submit a statement that it is his (or her) original work. Essays should not exceed 300 words in length.

Prizes and awards will be presented winners and one essay from each board will be entered in a statewide contest. Winner of the statewide contest and his parents will be taken to the state convention at the expense of the California Real Estate Association.

Realtors to Hear County Counsel

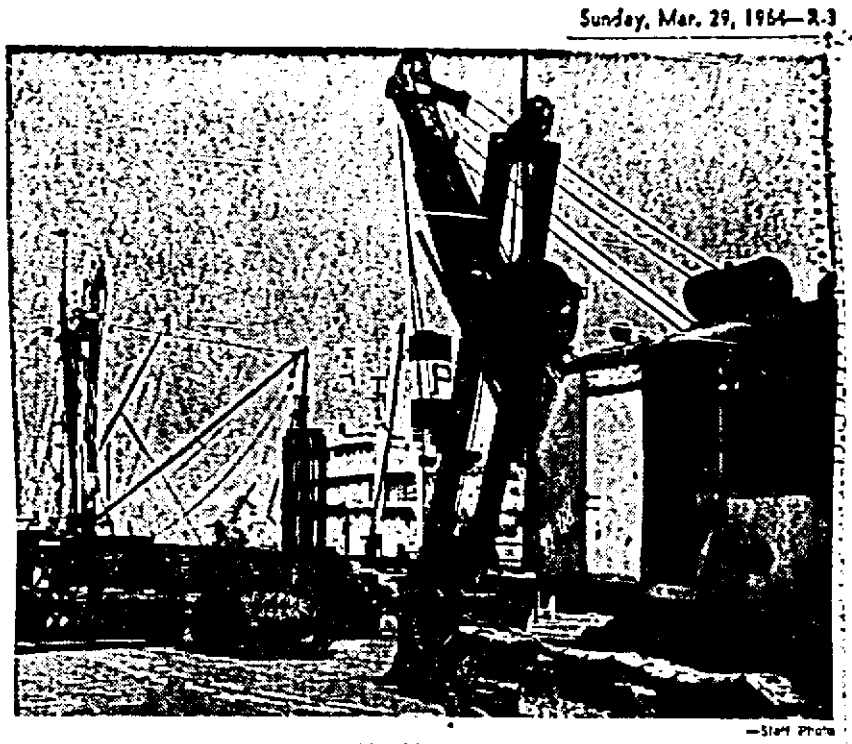

County Counsel Harold W. Kennedy will be guest speaker Tuesday morning at the Long Beach District Board of Realtors breakfast meeting.

He will discuss recent and important developments affecting Los Angeles County.

Special guests will be Supervisors Burton Chace and Frank Bonelli. The breakfast is at 7:15 a.m. in the Crown cafeteria.

Increase Shown by Airport Taxis

NEW YORK (UPI) — Air taxi traffic in the United States in 1963 ran 10 to 15 percent ahead of last year when the country's 180 air taxi operators carried 56,499 passengers to and from airports, the National Air Taxi Conference reports.

'SURPLUS' SHIPPED TO GUAM

More than 400 tons of surplus equipment ranging from six-ton trucks to giant cranes covers open area on Pier A. Equipment, gathered from Arizona and California, was shipped last week to Guam and the Philippines aboard the SS Longview Victory. Equipment will be rebuilt and used in construction projects in Pacific. It is believed to be the largest surplus equipment movement on the West Coast since World War II.

'How Does Your Garden Grow?' Realtors Ask

COMPTON — The Yard Beautiful Contest sponsored annually by the Sales Clinic of the Compton-Lynwood Board of Realtors as a part of its Realtor Week Observance was announced recently by Jerry Petry, general chairman of Realtor Week, May 24-30.

Any resident of Compton or Lynwood is eligible to enter, but only front yards are considered.

Charlie Strohl and Ted Vian, associate members of the board, are in charge of the contest.

Awards will be made to first, second and third place winners from each city, and will be presented at an open house tea to be held at the Board Annex on the opening Sunday of Realtor Week.

Leah Stevens, also an associate member, is chairman of this portion of the contest. Assisting in the entire event will be other members of the Sales Clinic.

There still is ample growing time for those who have not yet started their planting. It is hoped that many home owners will help beautify our community through participation in the contest.

Register, Vote Drive Pushed by Pioneer Savings

Pioneer Savings & Loan Association again this year is conducting an intensive "Let's All Register, Let's All Vote" program in cooperation with the American Heritage Foundation.

As part of the program, all Pioneer offices are supplying information on registration and voting.

The firm also will utilize newspaper advertising space to urge more Southern California residents to go to the polls this year.

Robert R. Sprague, president of Pioneer and National Finance and Industry chairman of the American Heritage Foundation, said that his firm is working closely with several local organizations to help increase the number of people who vote.

In addition to local groups, Sprague is working to get all 6,000 savings and loan associations across the nation to tie-in and run similar campaigns.

McFarland, Sales Spectacular Speaker Hailed as 'Spellbinder'

"Spellbinding, intriguing, stimulating and personally challenging" are the describing words given to the impact to be experienced at the Annual Sales Spectacular, 7:45 p.m. Municipal Auditorium, Tuesday, when the Sales and Marketing Executives of Long Beach will present Dr. Kenneth McFarland in an address titled "Who Bites the Bountiful Hand?"

Named America's foremost public speaker by a nationwide survey; honored by Capt. Eddie Rickenbacher as the nation's No. 1 air passenger; 1957's outstanding salesman of America; and long prominent nationally as educator, businessman, industrial adviser, civic leader and authority on governmental and economic affairs, Dr. McFarland is the "riveter to seats" type of speaker to appear before this annual presentation by the association, according to James E. Miller, S&ME president.

Marshall Cram, will emcee a program of stage entertainment featuring the rhythms of his "Society West" quintet; vocal stylings by KTTV's songstress-commentator Teri York; and a sparkling new beachwear review from Rose Marie Reid, California swimsuit creator.

The Sales Spectacular was a sell-out last year, according to Miller, who said it is most important to make advance reservations for tickets by phoning their local office, 427-0804, or in Orange County, KE 5-2823.

Withholding Tax 'Comes of Age'

CHICAGO (AP) — It's the 21st birthday for the deduction of income tax from pay checks.

It began in 1943. A 5 per cent "Victory" tax was imposed to help siphon off excess purchasing power produced by full employment during the initial stages of the war.

The withholding rate was boosted to 20 per cent in mid-1943, and employers regularly deducted the tax from pay checks.

The rate was reduced in 1945 to 18 per cent. Take-home pay was again boosted in 1948 when the withholding rate was reduced to 15 per cent. It was boosted in 1950 to 18 per cent; then set at 20 per cent to run to 1954 when it was leveled at 18 per cent.

Now the new 14 per cent rate represents the first reduction in withholding tax in 10 years.

L.B. Baseball Rookie Invests Part of Bonus

A Boston Red Sox rookie from Long Beach who was signed last fall for a $20,000 bonus, already "plays like a pro in the investment league.", according to a recent story in the Boston Herald.

The Herald article reports that Syd O'Brien, 19, who has been playing winter ball with the Anaheim Red Sox farm team, has invested part of his bonus in mutual funds.

O'Brien, it said, was influenced by a family friend, Joseph Reed, who works for the Long Beach investment firm of Halbert, Hargrave & Co. Young O'Brien, the Herald said, put $5,000 into investments.

O'Brien said he realized he had limited years of earning capacity from baseball, so wanted to safeguard his financial future.

HOW NEW EMPLOYMENT OFFICE BUILDING WILL LOOK

NEW QUARTERS TO BEBUILT

L.B. Employment Service Will Move to 1350 Locust

A groundbreaking ceremony was held Friday for a 12,200 square foot building which will be occupied by the State Employment Service offices now located in Long Beach at 1313 Pine Ave.

The new structure, to be erected at 1350 Locust Ave., will be one story and of concrete block construction. It will be air conditioned and there will be a 18,160 square foot parking lot. It is being built by Mr. and Mrs. Russell F. Dansby and will be leased to the state.

• • • •

CONTRACTOR is R. S. Best of Long Beach; and plans were drawn by Palmer W. Palmer and Delma J. Daniel Jr., architects, A.I.A., also of this city.

The local employment office, with a staff of about 60, is managed by George Toll. They will move as soon as the new building is completed.

Toll has been manager here since 1943 and has been in the Public Employment Service 26 years.

• • • •

IN COMMENTING about the groundbreaking, Toll noted that the Employment Service here had made numerous moves over the years.

Locations and the years the offices were moved there have been as follows:

1921 Municipal Auditorium.
1933 645 W. Anaheim.
1933 First and Magnolia.
1935 2000 American.
1936 319 W. Broadway.
1938 324 E. 4th St.
1940 416 Pine Ave.
1946 600 Alamitos.
1951 1313 Pine Ave.

About two years ago Employment Service and Unemployment Insurance were separated. The Employment Service operations in Wilmington and San Pedro have been added to the Long Beach office under Toll's jurisdiction and his office now serves the Harbor area.

Unemployment Insurance offices in the area are managed by Vickey King, Long Beach; Larry Sherman, Wilmington; and Gerry Baillio, San Pedro.

L.B. Ad Club Will Hear Famous Voice Thursday

"The voice heard around the world" in such productions as Walt Disney's "Lady and the Tramp" and "Sleeping Beauty" will be heard in the Panorama Room, Lafayette Hotel, when William H. (Bill) Thompson appears before the Advertising Club of Long Beach at its Thursday luncheon meeting.

Thompson, manager of Community Service for the Union Oil Co., was the creator of the "Mr. Wimple" and "Old Timer" characters on the Fibber McGee and Molly radio show.

• • • •

HE SPENT 10 years with Walt Disney as an actor-writer in many cartoon productions including such features as "Alice in Wonderland" and "Peter Pan" as well as those mentioned above, and also has been in advertising and sales promotion for more than 25 years.

He assisted in many sales promotion approaches while with Johnson's Wax and N.B.C. and has done similar work in recent years with the Union Oil Co.

• • • •

THE INDIRECT approach and the "soft-sell" are part of the philosophy as has advocated in approaching the public. He will speak on "Sales Promotion Aids Disguised."

Larry Laraway, chairman of the day and a past president of the club, is an account executive for the Mail-Well Envelope Co.

Perry Griffith, club president, will preside. Guests are welcome and may make reservations by calling Advertising Club executive secretary Helen Perkins, manager of the Independent, Press-Telegram Engravers, HEmlock 5-1161, extention 267.

Plant Under Construction in Gardena Area

Construction now is under way on a new $1,000,000-plus building to house the offices and manufacturing facilities of Premiere Aluminum Products Co., one of Southern California's largest manufacturers of aluminum windows and sliding doors.

The new building, according to Jonas Bienefeld, president, will be located on a 15-acre tract at 182nd and Hoover Streets in the Gardena area.

ALPHA BETA OPENS 109TH STORE

Grand opening was held last week for 109th store in Alpha Beta chain. The 21,500 square foot market is located at Ball Road and Valley View Avenue, Buena Park. From left in picture are William Weinberg, developer; Frederic S. Cantrell, Alpha Beta retail operations manager; Wayne L. Sheppard, president of the Buena Park Chamber of Commerce; and Larry Hight, store manager.

Pacific Coast Sports-Trailer-Boat Show Will Be May 1-10 in Arena

One of the West's most successful outdoor shows will go indoors at Long Beach, May 1-10.

The fourth annual Pacific Coast Sports-Trailer-Boat Show will be held in the $8 million Long Beach Arena.

The show, previously held outdoors at Pierpoint Landing, has drawn attendances in excess of 100,000 persons.

• • • •

"WE THINK we'll do just as well indoors," says Fred J. Taylor, show producer. "The Arena is one of the finest exhibit halls in the world and we have splendid exhibits and special attractions planned."

Mamie Van Doren, currently starring in a riotous motion picture comedy, "Three Nuts in Search of a Bolt," will act as official hostess of the show, according to Taylor.

The show also will feature more than 250 individual exhibits including a full line of trailers, boats and surfing equipment.

"Virtually anything associated with vacation life and outdoor recreation in the west will be represented in the show including the latest models of boats, motors, campers, trailers and motorcycles," explains Taylor.

• • • •

SPECIAL EVENTS under consideration include flycasting, fly-tying, judo, boating and surfing demonstrations. Also being considered is an all outdoors western art show which would feature works of artists throughout the western U. S.

"We plan to present a show which will have appeal to the varied interests of the outdoors minded people of the Southland," asserts Taylor.

Taylor's brand of showmanship has been noted for headline catching gimmicks such as the 1957 attempt to set an underwater record by an aqualung diver.

PREVIEW SHOWING

Preview Oceana Series of Homes

Preview showing is being held this weekend on the new Oceana Series of Springdale South homes in Huntington Beach, according to Sy Bram, executive director of Sunkist Plaza Builders, the firm that built and developed the new community.

Bram remarked that this showing is being held ahead of schedule and is due to the rapid sellout of the Pacifica Series of Springdale South. "From the pre-opening enthusiasm shown by prospective homebuyers in our new unit, we expect the Oceana Series to follow closely in the footsteps of its predecessor," Bram added.

• • • •

A LEADING FACTOR in the popularity of this development, Bram added is the inclusion of a complete array of built-in appliances by Waste King-Universal, one of the leading appliance firms in the country today.

These include built-in range and oven in color, waste disposer, Modernaire range hood and fan in matching color.

The quality built three and four-bedroom homes with family room and two baths are priced from $18,250. They are offered on terms of no money down to all and all that's needed is $100 total costs.

• • • •

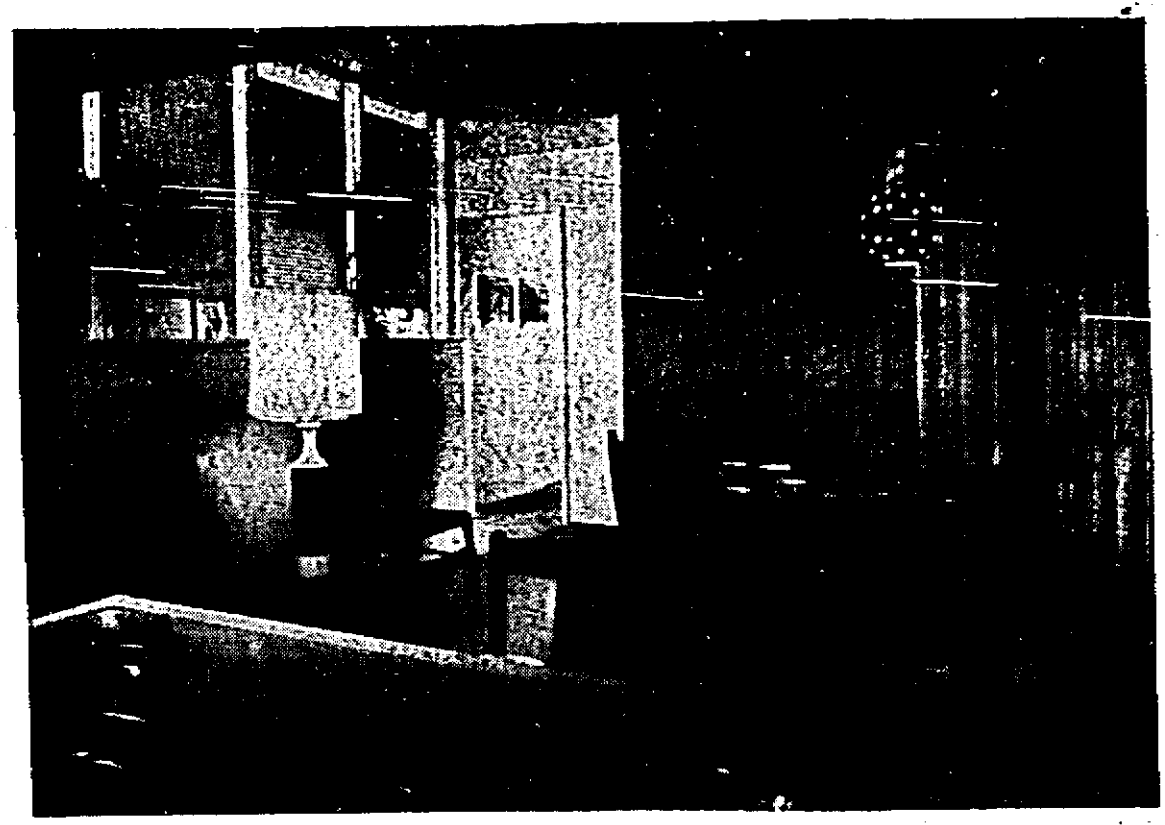

ADDITIONALLY, they feature sleek formica counters, natural ash cabinets, separate utility rooms vinyl asbestos floor tile, Custom-Aire forced air heat, sliding glass doors and custom lighting fixtures.

The Oceana Series of Springdale South Homes is located on Edwards Ave. just south of Westminster in Huntington Beach. Drive east on Garden Grove Blvd. to Golden West; right to Bolsa and right on Bolsa to Edwards and the models.

Vet Needs No Cash for Home

Qualified veterans are eligible for a big assist in the purchase of a new home at Lake Park, the $40-million, 2,000-home community near Lakewood, sales manager Don Hermanson reports.

Hermanson said the ex-GIs may move in free at some of the Lake Park models, with the developers paying all costs and impound fees.

Also available is low down payment FHA financing at Lake Park, which features the lowest priced two-story homes in Orange County, Hermanson added.

• • • •

LAKE PARK homes are priced from $17,750.

All models feature a central entry hall and two-car garages, and some models include a den or family room.

To reach Lake Park from the Long Beach-Lakewood area, drive east on Carson (which becomes Lincoln Boulevard) to the model homes just east of Moody.

Garden Park Estates Location Outstanding

A GARDEN PARK ESTATE
This spacious two-story home is offered in Garden Park Estates. Officials say community is in an ideal location. They are priced from $19,225.

A superior location is one of the many marked advantages offered with residence in Garden Park Estates, the officials say.

Located on Knott Avenue in Garden Grove, residents are within minutes of the Southland's beaches and marinas; schools of top rating are close; a variety of huge suburban shopping centers are convenient, and nearby major arteries and freeways connect Garden Park Estates' commuters to all important work centers.

Quality keynotes each of the one and two-story homes, and they are available with three, four and five bedrooms and two baths.

• • • •

THE HOMES HAVE red cedar shingle or crushed rock roofs, with shake roofs optional on some; exterior vinyl stucco paint; sliding glass doors and sliding aluminum windows—guaranteed weather tight; lawns seeded in front, sides and rear.

The kitchens have large built-in ovens and range tops with matching hood and exhaust fan.

Sensibly priced from $19,225, veterans can move in with nothing down except costs and impounds, with monthly payments starting from $106.17. This includes principal and interest. Non-veterans are offered lowest FHA down on 30- and 35-year loans. Conventional and Cal-Vet terms are also available.

From Long Beach drive east on Seventh St. to Knott Avenue in Garden Grove. Watch for directional signs.

Payments Delayed Until Next January

A spokesman for Mesa Realty, sales agents at the Fountainhead development in Fountain Valley, said that stepped up sales this past weekend were due in great measure to the announcement that buyers would not have to make any monthly payments until Jan. 1, 1965, on plans 503 and 504.

Deferment of payments proved to be extremely popular with a great percentage of home-buyers visiting the 250-home Fountainhead development. The new method of payment, which requires 10% down, but defers all monthly payments until next January, was announced for the first time a few days ago. Evans Building Co., developers of the 65-acre tract in Fountain Valley, in announcing the new financing said that by offering home buyers two entirely different methods of financing their new home, it would make it possible for everyone who wanted a Fountainhead home to have one.

• • • •

BUYERS MAY PURCHASE their Fountainhead home either through the new plan or by making a down payment of only $495, with regular monthly payments beginning at close of escrow. The two methods of financing plus the fact that the homes at Fountainhead sell from $1,000 to $2,000 less than comparable homes in the area, have made the development one of the most successful in Fountain Valley.

Designed as a family community, the builders included many, many features that appeal to today's active families. Each three or four-bedroom home is situated on an extra large lot; back yards are fenced, front yards are planted and landscaped; a sprinkler system is installed; carpeting and drapes are in. Also with the active family in mind, kitchens are completely built-in, including a dishwasher; storage and closet space is designed for the larger family; baths are spacious and beautifully designed; family rooms, covered patios and entry ways add to both indoor and outdoor family pleasure.

Located at Warner and Cannery in Fountain Valley, Fountainhead Homes are priced from $20,950.

Paramount Factory Turns Out Powered Edgers by Thousands

The parking strip in front of McLane Tool and Die Co.'s new 40,000-square-foot manufacturing and sales building in Paramount is probably the best manicured turf in an industrial area.

This is where the company's sole product, a gasoline-powered lawn edging tool, called Trim 'n Edger, is demonstrated to homeowners and prospective dealers.

Combining a manufacturing-wholesaling-retailing function is not unusual for Jim and Frank McLane. "We've been in one phase or the other in our 17 years in business," says Jim, "so we just decided to use all our experience."

* * * *

AS A MEASURE of their wholesaling success the McLane brothers last year sold over 13,000 units throughout the western and southern regions of the United States. This volume is due in part to the insistence of Frank, the production expert, that the Trim 'n Edger be of all-steel construction. As a tribute to this philosophy and the company's manufacturing ability, not one frame in the last 100,000 Trim 'n Edgers sold has been reported broken.

The frame, including the motor support mount, is all fabricated from one and one-quarter-inch thick steel flats quarter-inch thick steel flats rolled at Bethlehem Steel Company's nearby Los Angeles plant. Bethlehem also supplies steel rounds from which pulleys are made.

All component parts, except rubber tires, are manufactured in a 40,000-square-foot production area behind the showroom and office space. All dies used to form steel flats into component sections are designed by Frank McLane. Production machines are also custom built to meet rigid manufacturing standards.

* * * *

DESIGN OF the new building was controlled by the steel-minded McLane brothers. Virtually column-free manufacturing areas were made possible by tapered steel roof beams. A structural steel framework, fabricated from Bethlehem's wide flange sections provides a generous 105-foot clear span of glass for display windows. Second story office space, for future expansion, cantilevers 12 feet on steel beams over the front entrances. As Jim McLane says, "it's quite a change from our little 10x12 foot shack where we started."

McLane Tool and Die had its beginning in 1946 when Jim was in the Navy. Frank decided that with his tool and die experience he could supply component parts for tricycles. From this three-wheeled beginning the fledgling business moved into production of training wheels for bicycles. It was then that the brothers' retail store supported their manufacturing efforts. Nearly 80 percent of the business was concentrated in selling bicycles and accessories.

When their training wheel customer went out of business Frank and veteran Jim were left with a lot of wheels. From this stockpile of wheels came the idea for the first Trim 'n Edger. Since then the retail and manufacturing functions have changed positions of importance.

ON PRODUCTION LINE
One-position assembly at McLane Tool and Die Co. permits one employe to check each part as it is installed. The Trim 'n' Edgers are held in a pneumatic clamp so that each part is positioned accurately.

Trim 'n' Edger demonstration by Jim McLane on parking strip in front of building is often the clinching sales argument. The trouble-free unit is a commerical quality product. Patented feature permits the edger to travel atop the curb.

Somerset Homes Offer Charm

One of the few remaining "islands" of rural charm in the Southland is Somerset, a limited group of homes midway between Long Beach, Lakewood and Los Angeles.

The skylines of the big cities rim Somerset's horizon, but estates, Los Alamitos golf course and the race track are its more immediate neighbors.

The new one and two-story Somerset Homes are attracting thousands of home seekers with a grand opening celebration. There are prizes for everyone ranging from salad and glassware sets to folding overnight bags. Beautiful consolation prizes are given everyone who comes.

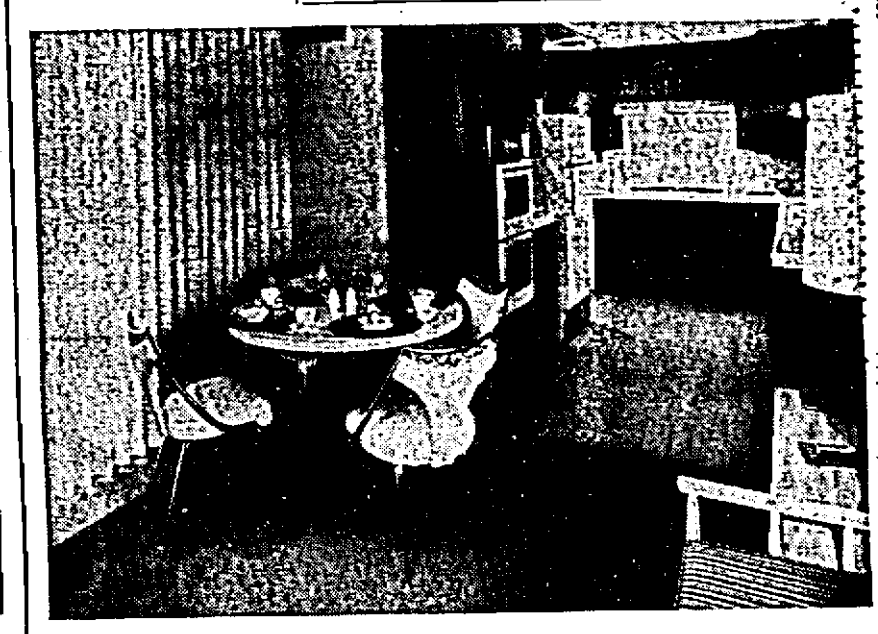

"THOUSANDS OF families have now toured our four model homes after trying their luck in our Treasure Chest game," reported Robert Richards of the Twaits-Wittenberg Company, builders.

Grand prize is a GE stereo set with AM-FM tuner and record player. The drawing for this prize will be held next Sunday, Richards said, adding that "Other prizes are available immediately; the ones already described, plus such attractive items as carving sets and pocket secretaries."

Satisfied Home Buyers Finest Salesmen, Says Builder Grant

Results of a recent survey taken by Robert H. Grant & Co., builder-developer of Stardust Homes, showed that nearly 50% of its new home sales were to people who had been advised and directed to the models by former customers.

To show prospective buyers that Grant isn't boasting when he claims "My best salesmen are my satisfied home buyers," the company prepared a unique testimonial brochure titled "An Interesting Report On Family Living In Prestige Communities Created by Stardust Homes."

The six-page publication features more than 45 personal testimonials (with photographs) on what it feels like to own and live in a Stardust Home, popular model exteriors from two current developments, and a statement of company policy from Grant.

* * * *

THE TESTIMONIAL brochure is the second of several projects in Grant's new merchandising program stressing the "human element" in selling its medium-priced (from $21,200) homes. The first was the establishment of a community newspaper known as "Stardust News." The publication tells purchasers and prospects of the many programs and events that await them at Grant's Fairway Park development of 1000 homes in Cypress.

"As a pre-selling tool, the testimonial brochure contains more than its share of psychological sales value," says John May, vice-president, sales for Stardust Homes. "It affords my salesmen tangible opportunity to extend an invitation to prospects interested in our new homes to indirectly 'ask the one who owns one'."

Grant has demonstrated his versatility in the real estate development field by building more than 5,000 new homes in Southern California during the past ten years, and ranks as one of the biggest builders in Orange County.

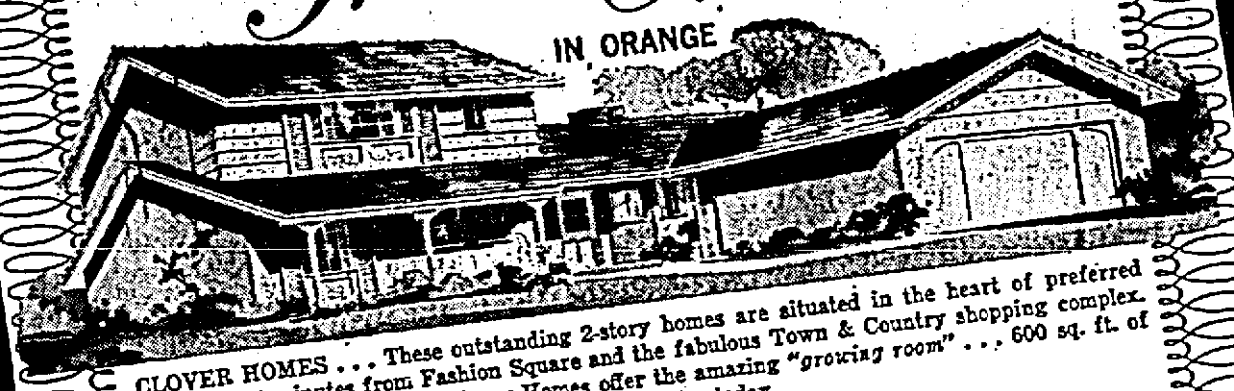

Copies of the testimonial brochure may be obtained from Stardust Homes, 1665 S. Brookhurst St., Anaheim.

A SHOWCASE HOME
Shown is one of the many models now on display at Showcase Homes, Unit 2, a residential development by William Krueger, builder and developer, located on Hazard Avenue just east of Highway 39 in Westminster.

Spacious Showcase Homes Designed for Luxury Living

Located in a quiet residential neighborhood near schools, shopping centers and churches in the Showcase Homes development gives the owner an atmosphere of gracious living and a feeling of spaciousness and privacy with each home having the rear yard completely fenced and the front yard landscaped, stated William Krueger, the builder and developer.

Krueger further stated that the two-story home may be secured for the price of a single-story, in that the lower level has approximately 1,500 square feet and is in itself a complete functional home consisting of three bedrooms, two baths and family-dining room.

• • • •

PRICED FROM $22,750, these two-story homes feature a growing room which can be finished with five or six bedrooms and three baths or can be used as a spacious one-room family activity center. The builder supplies three different blueprint plans which may be used by the owner in the future to finish off this room as desired to meet his particular family's needs.

Showcase Homes exteriors are enhanced with stone, used brick, and colonial brick. The attractive interiors have slate entry halls, wall-to-wall carpeting, fireplace, marble pullmans in baths, ceramic tile in baths, and oversize linen closets.

The all-electric medallion kitchen is equipped with built-in range, wide oven, automatic dishwasher, garbage disposer, breakfast bar and ash cabinets.

Sunkist Treasure Series Attracts Attention

Anticipation for the grand opening of the Treasure Series of Sunkist Plaza Homes in Huntington Beach is running high, based on the success of the recent preview showing, according to Sy Bram, executive director of Sunkist Plaza Builders, the firm that built and developed the residential subdivision.

"From indications of the homebuying public who attended our preview," Bram remarked, "the new Treasure Series is expected to follow closely in the footsteps of the Buccaneer Series, its predecessor," that series sold out rapidly.

The Treasure Series of Sunkist Plaza Homes comprises a 72-home development on Springdale St., just south of Westminster Blvd. near vast stretches of ocean in Huntington Beach.

The promise of accelerated sales is attributed to the inclusion of quality materials and workmanship not usually found in homes of this price range.

• • • • •

THE EXTRA VALUE built into the homes has propelled the Sunkist Plaza firm into the upper echelon of the homebuilding industry. They have built thousands of quality residences in various locations of the Southland.

And due to this voluminous operation, the firm has acquired a mass purchasing power that enables it to make the residences available with a minimum of outlay. An example is the fact that the homes sell for no down payment-only total costs of $150. All are priced from $19,750.

The new Treasure Series, one of the best home values in Huntington Beach," Bram stated, will incorporate three basic floor plans that can be incorporated in a selection of 18 exteriors of nearly every motif available.

This, coupled with the development's location, are reasons why it has been termed furnished models.

To reach models, drive east on Garden Grove Blvd. to Golden West; right to Bolsa; right to Springdale; turn left and follow the signs to the

Home Traffic Plan Important

LINCOLN, Neb. (UPI) — Careful planning of entryways can add to the comfort, convenience and pleasure members of a family derive from their home, a housing specialist at the University of Nebraska says.

The specialist, Mrs. Jerre Withrow, said function is the first thing to consider in successful planning for any area of the house. She described the entryway as the control center for circulation throughout the house.

From it, she said, family members or guests should be able to reach all areas of the house without interfering with activities in any one room. Location is the important factor in channeling this flow.

Americans Go on Record Travel Binge

Hawaii will lure more travelers than any other spot in the Pacific. Olympic Games will bring a surge of visitors to Japan in October.

By Fred Taylor Kraft
Travel Editor

AMERICANS are about to take off on another gigantic travel binge, easily the biggest in history.

An estimated 2¾ million will venture abroad, an increase of 10 per cent over 1963. These include cruise passengers — an ever-growing segment of travel—but do not include visitors to Canada and Mexico.

On the other side of the ledger, about 750,000 to 800,000—some sources put the figure as high as one million — overseas visitors are expected to come to the United States this year, compared with approximately 710,000 in 1963.

These estimates were compiled from reports submitted from more than 400 offices of American Express—one of the most honored names in travel —in 34 countries.

This and other surveys attribute the upward trend to these factors: rising discretionary income, lessening of world tensions, reductions in transatlantic air fares, and a multitude of special events of touristic interest.

OF THE TOTAL traveling abroad, 1¼ million will visit Europe. This is an increase of 15 per cent over the new record set in 1963 when, for the first time, more than one million Americans traveled there.

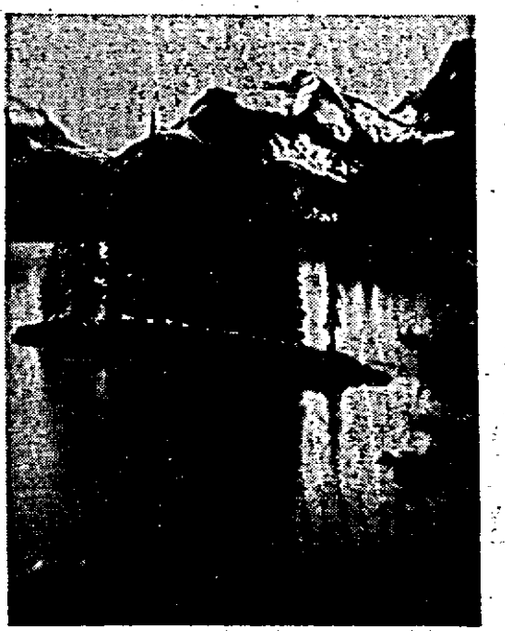

Europe, it is pointed out, reaps the major benefit from Americans making repeat trips abroad. Moreover, the frequency pattern has changed. Where in the past the traveler might make a return trip once in four or five years, the time interval now is more nearly 2½ years.

A big incentive this year, naturally, is the reduction in air fares which go into effect Wednesday. For instance, between Los Angeles and Paris, first class round-trip fares will be slashed by $190, from $1,266.10 to $1,076.10; economy class, from $820.20 to $719.50 for the period from April 1-May 21, and $805 May 22-Aug. 3; for the remainder of the year, $719.50.

Millions of Americans will be attracted to Canada's majestic forests, lakes, streams and mountains.

These fares affect all major airlines flying the Atlantic that are members of the Inter-Air Traffic Association.

IN ADDITION, a new excursion fare, even cheaper than economy, will be offered at selected times before, during and after the summer season: eastbound, to June 11, July 13-Aug. 6, and Aug. 31-Nov. 5; westbound, to June 4; June 29-Aug. 20, and Sept. 15-Nov. 5. These excursions may not begin between 7 a. m. Fridays and 7 a. m. Mondays, and the traveler must stay away at least 14 days and no more than 21 days.

But air fares are only part of the inducement to go junketing to Europe. There are literally hundreds of special events billed this year (see Page 6). Among the really important ones are the Shakespearean festivals throughout Europe and particularly in England (Page 12), and the Swiss National Exposition, the Continent's largest 1964 event (Page 10).

THE PACIFIC — particularly the Orient—is growing more rapidly as a tourist attraction than any other area in the world. Japan will reap a tremendous tourist harvest this year. The 18th Olympic Games (Page 13) opening Oct. 10 will spur this influx although the Land of the Rising Sun is fast becoming one of the most popular travel destinations on the map.

The South Seas, with emphasis on Tahiti and Bora Bora, is on the itineraries of many, many more gadders this year than ever before.

However, as has been the case for years, Hawaii will continue to lure more vacationists than any other spot in the Pacific. Reduction in air fares from the West Coast will account for many new visitors as well as regulars.

Alaska, too, is set for a travel boom far larger than any it has ever experienced.

Altogether, says F. Marvin Plake of the Pacific Area Travel Association, visitors to the Pacific area will increase 18 to 22 per cent over a year ago.

CRUISE SHIPS, naturally, will get their share of the tourist dollar in the Pacific. Their luxury appeals to those who have the time. And everyone enjoys being pampered the way they are pampered on modern liners such as those of Matson Navigation Co., American President Lines and P & O Orient Lines. But those who plan to travel by sea should be thinking about their reservations; bookings are heavy, even for March.

There is scarcely a corner in the world, however remote, that Americans—passports and cameras in hand—won't be poking into. Spots overlooked almost entirely a few short years ago now are focusing clearly into the travel picture.

Take Africa: Fed by twin streams of trade and tourism, the Dark Continent is surging forward. Early bookings, with a heavy demand for tour packages, was noted the first three months of the year.

The Middle East will share thousands who are going to Europe or Africa, or both. Egypt, Greece, Turkey, Israel and Jordan are on most itineraries.

TRAVEL to South America and Central America is gaining but is still below its potential. One expert pointed to continued unrest in some Latin countries, fed by communism. This is a pity, because attractions throughout this vast land are endless. The Caribbean area is booming.

Vacationists do not have to venture abroad to see either of our nearest neighbors, Canada and Mexico. As a result, millions will visit these pleas-

Instant World Vacation

Astral Fountain, one of several at Fair, spouts 70-foot column of water in open-work cylinder, studded with stars rotating in framework of jetted water spouts.

By Mary Ellis Carlton

JUST 24 DAYS from zeroing in the world's greatest vacation extravaganza is the electronic countdown clock at the flat-roofed headquarters of New York's World's Fair.

For the past several months the time-measuring device (fair staffers call it the "ulcer machine") has been ticking off the frantically hectic seconds, minutes, hours and days before the long-awaited April 22 opening.

In January (while covering the New York spring-summer fashion showings), I had dinner at the Top of the Fair Restaurants housed in the heliport at Flushing Meadow Park, the world's most glamorous ex-dump.

Then, with the clock showing only 104 days to go, the grounds looked very much like the picture at left.

Some structures were nearing completion, others were only steel girders sprouting in the expanse of reclaimed swampland a quagmire of mud and melting snow. It seemed an impossible deadline to meet.

BUT ROBERT MOSES, the fair's articulate and forceful president, said then, like the Moses of Biblical days, that he would lead his people into the promised land.

And lead them he will — on schedule.

At twilight on April 22, a one million-candlepower beam of light—visible, weather permitting, from New Haven, Conn., to Atlantic City, N.J.—will shoot skyward.

Simultaneously, the world's largest fountain will burst into a brilliantly synchronized symphony of water patterns, color, music and fireworks; a 610-bell carillon will trill "There's No Business Like Show Business."

And, by midnight, despite probability of the greatest traffic snarl in history, it is believed some 500,000 of a predicted 70 million visitors will have clicked through the fair's turnstiles.

WHAT THEY will behold is the costliest ($1 billion), the most expansive (646 acres), the most controversial, most commercial and probably most successful moneymaker since Prince Albert masterminded the first world's fair at London's Crystal Palace in 1851.

No world exposition, say officials, ever had so much to offer each member of the family. A visit to the fair, they promise, "will be a vacation, an education, an inspiration."

Fair goers can discern and learn, gape and ache through 200 pavilions and exhibitions representing 51 countries, 24 U.S. states and close to 350 American firms.

To take in everything — from the House of Good Taste to the Mastro Pizza exhibit —would take average mortals 12 days, according to a promotion man for the fair.

THE FORTHCOMING Flushing frolic has been described by 75-year-old Moses as "everything for everybody from everywhere."

There are temples of religion, wonders of states, industries and new nations, pageants, Olympic Games of Progress, the space age, Ring-

How to visit Britain in the sparkling Spring for less than $100 a week

This Spring, you can explore Britain by car and catch the opening events of Shakespeare's Year without spending more than $100 a week. Clip coupon for free 5-piece Shakespeare's Year Travel Kit. Meanwhile, here are a few facts to help you plan your trip.

Where to stay. Bed and breakfast at country inns cost about $3.75. Inns are uncrowded in Spring—so you seldom need reservations.

How to get around. You can rent a small car for $35 a week—including insurance and mileage. Or buy a Rail Guest Pass—seven days of unlimited train travel for only $29.50 (second class). Get a Pass from your travel agent before you leave.

What's going on in Shakespeare's Year? This Spring, you can travel around Britain and catch the special celebrations of Shakespeare's 400th anniversary.

In London, Sir Laurence Olivier plays Othello. And the Aldwych Theatre is host to seven international companies [March through June].

In Scotland, you can see Shakespeare performed at Pitlochry's tranquil "theatre in the hills" [April through September].

In Stratford-upon-Avon, the Shakespeare Season of Plays runs from April 24 for seven months. Tickets from 70 cents.

How to see Britain on $100 a week—without skimping

Two nights in London hotel (breakfasts included)	$12.00
Five nights in country inns (breakfasts included)	18.75
Lunches and dinners	28.00
Unlimited train travel	29.50
Two visits to London theatre	4.00
Visit to Stratford theatre	.70
Visits to stately homes	.90
Miscellaneous	6.00
TOTAL	$99.85

See box above for examples of low British prices. Then clip coupon for your free 5-piece Shakespeare's Year Travel Kit—including a 16-page illustrated booklet about the celebrations. Skim through it, then see your travel agent.

Experienced travelers describe the Oregon coastline as the world's most beautiful.

Melody of Color

AS ALWAYS, the accent will be on color in Oregon this year. No state can boast greater beauty, from its spectacular coastline to its forests and green mountains.

For travelers arriving in the next few weeks, multi-colored masses of wild azaleas will brighten the landscapes in the coastal areas of southern Oregon. Rhododendrons will be in bloom for weeks, starting in May in the lowlands and then blossoming progressively in the higher mountain areas.

Splashes of golden yellow will be seen where bushes of gorse, Scotch broom and Oregon grape (the state flower) dot the roadsides anad blanket open hillsides. White dogwood and red currant blossoms offer contrast along the edges of wooded areas while lavendar irises, yellow buttercups, blue lilies, violets and lupine will add to the melody of color in the open fields and mountain meadows.

But there is more than flowers to be seen in Oregon. The Pacific coastline has been described by experienced travelers as the most beautiful ocean coastline in the world. It varies from wide, sandy beaches to rugged headlands that plunge headlong into the sea.

THE MOUNTAINS of Oregon are equally popular with visitors. At the northern end of the Oregon Cascades is Mt. Hood, looming high over Portland and the famous Columbia River Gorge. U. S. Hwy. 26 crosses the south base of the mountain, offering many views, flashing streams and rainbows of wildflowers. Hood River Valley draws its share of tourists and for the outdoorsman, the jagged Wallowa and Blue Mountains of northeastern Oregon offer the chance to "get away from it all." Hell's Canyon, on the Snake River, is famous for boat trips and fishing. But, for that matter, hundreds of mountain streams and lakes afford excellent angling.

Truly, Oregon is a place to "Relax . . . in a state of excitement."

Americans Go

ant countries this spring, summer and fall.

And, of course, many more Americans will see more of their own country. They will thrill to the marvels of the West, the Midwest and the South and the East. But No. 1 attraction on the domestic scene, and one of the greatest anywhere, will be the New York World's Fair (Page 5) opening in April.

It will matter little where travelers go this year, hotelwise. They are springing up in every corner of the globe, more modern and more comfortable than most dare to expect.

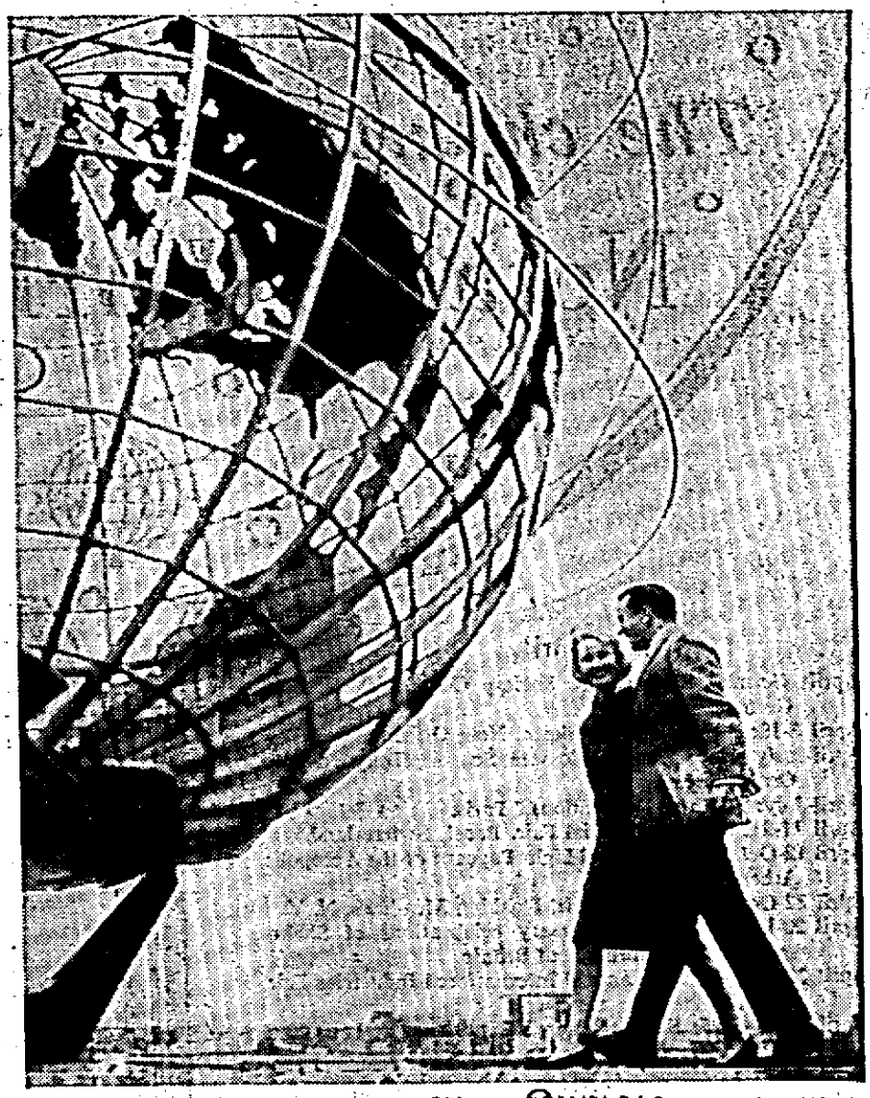

Some tourists prefer to travel alone. Others enjoy the camaraderie of group junketing. Travel agents have literally hundreds of tour packages up their sleeves for either kind, and they know a tour bargain when they see one. Travel agents are the best people in the world to know when planning a trip.

Tours to Fair

Five days in New York City during the World's Fair will be included in both Random Tours' spring and summer transcontinental full-escorted rail tours leaving Los Angeles April 23 and June 21.

Each of the three-week cross-country excursions will be conducted on modern, streamlined trains. Passengers will have deluxe Pullman accommodations and enjoy the comfort of Vista-Dome, private lounge and dining cars.

Overlooking the Han River at Seoul, South Korea, are the hotels of the multi-million dollar Walker Hill Resort.

Korea, Anyone?

By Jack Baldwin

IF Tokyo's Olympic Games are on your touring itinary this summer, consider rounding out your visit to the Orient with a flying side trip to the teeming, bristling city of Seoul — capital of South Korea.

The Korean government has joined hands with private enterprise in a $19 million tourist-attraction program including the recent construction of the multi-million dollar Walker Hill Resort complex.

Walker Hill is a galaxy of 26 modern buildings offering the latest inovations in Western accommodations mixed with the traditions of ancient Korea, the facilities range from a single room to secluded villas—some with individual chefs!

FROM TOKYO the flight to Seoul is a two-hour flight by either CAT — Civil Air Transport, the line of the Mandarin Jets, or by Northwest Orient Airlines. The fare is $30.

Upon arrival at one of the five, three-story satellite hotels dotting the 156-acre hillside site, the graciousness of oriental hospitality becomes immediately apparent.

Most of the hotels' outside rooms present a panoramic view of the wide Han River Valley and the meandering river winding eastward toward the Yellow Sea.

All five hotels, each with its own dining room and bar, plus the 12 private villas, are linked to the main building by fast, free taxi service.

HUB OF ALL Walker Hill activities, both daytime and nightlife, is the four-story main building. Facilities include an indoor swimming pool, Turkish baths, a three-hour photo-finishing service, foreign banking exchange service, a lavish night club—plus the commonly-expected tourist shops.

While strolling through the halls of the main building visitors can — and frequently do—try their luck with the gleaming "one-armed bandits" which line the hallways.

Entertainment in the Clover Club with its clover-shaped rising and lowering floor include such western favorites as Louis Armstrong who opened the dining and dancing club at the beginning of the 1963 tourist season.

PERCHED high atop a hill is the achitecturally unique W-shaped Hilltop Bar.

Styled in the tradition of the country is the colorful Korean Mansion featuring exotic Korean cuisine. Folk dancing and ancient music presented while dining makes the rendezvous with the old world complete.

Accommodations are reasonable — $7.69 for a double to $13.85 for a suite. Private villas vary from $12.50 to $24.16 a day. Rates include a 10 per cent gratuity.

Recreational activities include water skiing, tennis, badminton, archery, boating, billiards, fishing, cycling, golf, hunting in season, and naturally—sight-seeing.

Japan Hotels

Japan Travel Bureau International has been named North American representative for seven of Japan's leading hotels.

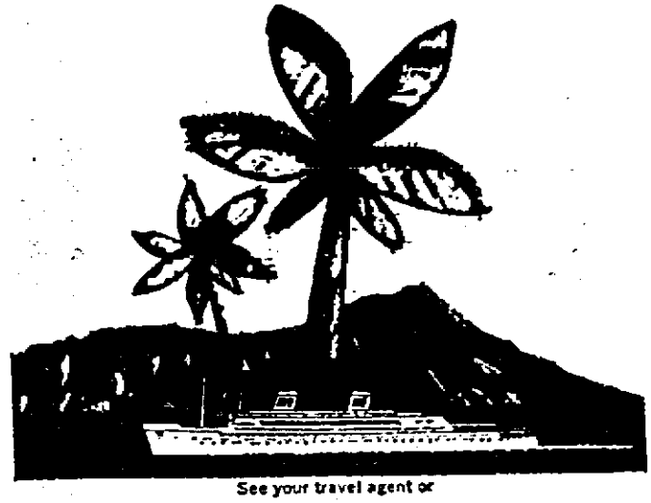

Effective June 1, travel agents, airlines and steamship companies will be able to obtain immediate confirmation of rooms at the Imperial Hotel (Tokyo); Kyoto Hotel (Kyoto); Fujiya Hotel (Hakone); Kanya Hotel (Nikko); the New Osaka and Osaka Grand Hotels (Osaka), and the New Grand Hotel at Yokohama.

Orient travelers are reminded by Nobuo Yokoyama, JTBI manager in Los Angeles, to make requests for hotels at the time they make their travel arrangements either with a travel agent, airline or steamship company.

Additional first class hotels in other areas of Japan will be added to the JTBI-represented hotel list, according to Yokoyama.

Sun Valley Fun

THERE are few double-gaited resorts in the West. Mountain dude ranches don't flourish until their desert counterparts have closed on summer's heat. At the same time, ski country habitues move to the beaches. But up in the Sawtooth mountains of Idaho, Sun Valley makes an effortless change from skiing and sleigh riding to an even broader span of activities than that offered in snowy months.

From June through August this mountain playground's guests will be golfing on a recently expanded 18-hole course, fishing in the nearby famous rainbow trout steams, riding over rolling foothills through pungent sage and bright wildflowers.

Too, they can enjoy swimming and the novelty of skating on an outdoor ice rink, both of which are also winter fare here. And there's tennis, bowling, hiking and rock climbing and trap, skeet, rifle and pistol shooting. Expert instruction is available for every sport.

A SUMMER switch on Trail Creek cabin's dinner parties reached by sleigh in winter are its post-sundown, outdoor barbecues with hayracks for transport.

Contrasting with the after-ski lager fest in the Tyrolean style Ram is the mint julep hour on the Lodge lawn with music by the Sun Valley trio. Hap Miller's seven-piece orchestra plays for dinner on the Lodge terrace at the edge of the skating rink.

Menus range from New York steaks and trout almondine at the Lodge to a buffet array at Challenger Inn.

Hawaii to Celebrate

Hawaii's early-November special attraction, the Whaling Spree at Lahaina on the Island of Maui, will be supplemented this year by a one-day Makahiki, or harvest celebration and welcome to winter at Hilo on the Island of Hawaii and on the Island of Kauai.

The Kauai program is scheduled Nov. 6. The annual Whaling Spree on Maui will cover the weekend of Nov. 6-7-8. It is one of Hawaii's major special events and is in its third year. The program at Hilo will be on Nov. 8. There also will be a special program in Honolulu, Nov. 5. Another major November event will be the annual Festival of the Pacific held in Honolulu, Nov. 14-21.

The Lahaina Whaling Spree marks the return of the whales to the Lahaina Roadstead for the winter season, and also reenacts the days of the last century when the historic Hawaiian town was the winter headquarters for the whaling ships and their boisterous crews.

Man to Know

If you need help planning your vacation itinerary, consult a travel agent. Travel agents not only have the latest information about travel all over the world, but they'll make your travel and hotel reservations, too, even for layover and side trips and any specific event you might wish to attend. Because there is no charge for normal services such as these, the travel agent is a good man to know.

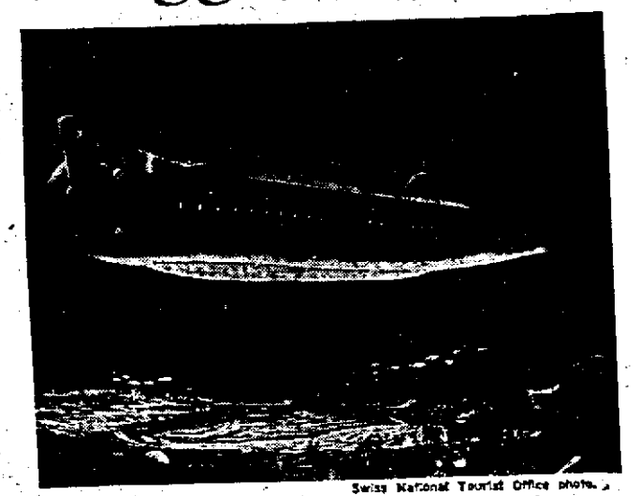

Europe's Biggest Event

THOUSANDS of Americans who sail or fly to Europe this year will visit Switzerland not only for its spectacular scenery and world-renowned hospitality, but also for the Continent's biggest event of 1964—the Swiss National Exhibition at Lausanne.

Held only every 25 years, the exhibition opens April 30 and continues through Oct. 25 with the entire Swiss nation on display. Housed in 12 futuristic buildings covering more than 6 million square feet will be exhibitions on Swiss history, political, economic and social customs and institutions.

Among the exhibitions will be a Circarama, a movie played on nine screens making a complete circle, showing trains of the future, advanced developments in telecommunications, highways, and air and sea transportation.

A UNIQUE attraction will be the first submarine designed expressly for sightseers. Built by the late Auguste Piccard and his son, Jacques, internationally famous scientists, the submarine will make hour-long trips to the floor of Lake Geneva.

Vacationing in Victoria

Victoria, B. C., and Vancouver Island offer exceptional opportunities for the traveler, for the investor, and in all fields of business and industry, according to Geoffrey I. Edgelow, Victoria alderman, in the Southland on a "get acquainted" tour last week.

Sponsored by the province of British Columbia and by Western Air Lines which arranges many trips to British Columbia, Edgelow pointed out that his fellow citizens vacation in Southern California in winter and that more and more Southland residents are spending their vacations in the Victoria area.

"And why not?" he asks. "Summer days rarely are warmer than 75 degrees. And our winter temperatures governed by the Japanese current, range between 45 and 65 degrees. Besides offering some of the finest scenery in America, we have wonderful fishing and water sports, we play golf the year around, and we're uncrowded."

British Columbia, twice the size of California, has only 2 million residents. Victoria (as we're expanding while Southern California is exploding") has a population of 125,000."

Jamaica Tourist Board photo.

Lovely Jamaican miss offers enticing smile with distinctive hat at one of many craft markets in Jamaica.

KINGSTON, largest and most important city in the West Indies, is fast becoming a favorite stop for vacationists in the blue, blue Caribbean.

That's because the capital of Jamaica (about the size of Long Beach) is a trove of the unusual—offering sunny relaxation, a variety of sports activities, spectacular scenery and places of historic interest dating back to pirate and slave-running days, top hotels and restaurants, exotic night spots with calypso and other dances of the islands, a great assortment of native bazaars and modern shops, free-port shopping, and, best of all, a friendly foreign flavor.

Only a stone's throw from Kingston's modern Palisadoes Airport are the ancient remains of romantic Port Royal—one-time wickedest city in the world—and later a bastion of British naval might.

WITHIN a half-hour's drive from Kingston lies Spanish Town, the capitol of old Spanish Jamaica—with a history of more than 150 years preceding the arrival of the British in 1665—a spot also favored by vacationists, particularly photographers. Hope Botannical Gardens also is popular with visitors. Scores of other points of interest, fairly bursting with flowers, flowering trees, the luxuriance of banana fields, coconut palms and sugar cane, all are a part of Kingston's magical spell.

Offical center of the city is Victoria Square, where Kingston's main thoroughfare, King Street, opens into a broad plaza. This general area teems with shops, theaters, restaurants and night spots; the offices of the Jamaica Tourist Board (80 Harbour St.), the Institute of Jamaica, museums, and other interesting spots.

AT THE FOOT of Kings St. is Victoria Crafts Market in which is concentrated the island's greatest array of native handicraft. World-famous Jamaican rums also are sold here, probably the largest native market in the Caribbean.

Like other Jamaican resorts, there are numerous free port shops. In these, special categories of imported goods as well as native-made products may be purchased tax free.

Perhaps one of the best nightclubs is the Glass Bucket, which serves fine meals and drinks and offers dancing, native and foreign floor shows, and orchestra and calypso music.

KINGSTON is particularly well known for its climate, being cooled by trade winds by day and breezes at night from the mountains at its back. Sportsmen like its superb golf courses and availability of water cruising and abundant fishing.

One of the newest hotels is the Sheraton-Kingston, a low lying hotel "village" in tree-shaded grounds. The Myrtle Bank, previously mentioned, also is modern with air-conditioned rooms. Spacious grounds set it apart from the bustle of the downtown waterfront.

The best way to see the Kingston area is to rent a car and have your hotel help you arrange your tours. Of course, guided tours also are available. Either way, you'll find Kingston a happy stop in your Caribbean adventure.

Search for Shakespeare

WHERE do you find the Bard in Britain?

That's a fair question for 500,000 Americans preparing to visit during Shakespeare's 400th birthday celebrations this year.

The answer is — nearly everywhere — but some places more than others. Counting the more than 30 cities which are holding Shakespeare Festivals or celebrations, plus those towns appearing in his plays, and those connected with his life, a Shakespeare Tour of Britain can be a matter for two days or two months.

But two towns are essential to any list. In Stratford-upon-Avon, April 23, in a house still standing on Henley Street, William Shakespeare was born. His father, an alderman with a glove shop in the same house, had him baptized in the Church of the Holy Trinity a few days later. You may look at the entry "Gulielmus Filius Johannes Shakespeare" (William son of John Shakespeare) in the parish register. Across the fields in Shottery is the thatched cottage where the poet's future wife Anne Hathaway, had her home.

A GIANT "Shakespeare Exhibition" is to open on the poet's birthday and be on show beside the swan-bedecked Avon all summer. It is a hundred yards from the Royal Shakespeare Theatre, which is planning a season of the complete "historical plays" with an outstanding cast. A festival of Shakespeare music and arts will go on all summer, presenting Yehudi Menuhin, the Bath Festival Orchestra, and dozens of other famous artists.

London is the second indispensable town on any Shakespeare tour. On the way there —or from there as the case may be—halt a while at Oxford. Amidst 800 rich years of history, there is an inn, the Crown, which has the one room in England where Shakespeare is known to have lodged.

At Windsor, inspect the awesome royal castle and the Chapter Library adjoining St. George's Chapel. It was once the School hall of the chapel choir boys and saw the first performance of "The Merry Wives of Windsor" for Queen Elizabeth I. She wanted to see Sir John Falstaff in love, and Shakespeare wrote the play in 14 days especially for her. Have a pint of beer at the Star and Garter Inn, where Falstaff lodged. Bardolph was apprenticed in the kitchen.

LONDON is to be a paradise for the theatergoer from now to November. Six famed national theaters will present a festival at the Aldwych branch of the Royal Shakespeare Theatre, through May. Sir Laurence Olivier will play "Othello" for the first time in his career.

For a real Elizabethan evening in a historically accurate setting with a good time, good food and rollicking entertainment, visit the "Elizabethan Room" of the Gore Hotel. This year a four-room Shakespeare exhibition will be added to help visitors feel a truly 16th century atmosphere.

Or take England's richest literary highway south, through Rochester to Canterbury and Dover. Chaucer's pilgrims passed here, and Falstaff held up Prince Hal on Gad's Hill, where Dickens built a house.

Dover has a site described in "King Lear," where from Shakespeare Cliff "the fishermen that walk upon the beach appear like mice." You can confirm that they do. Also, a pageant of Shakespeare scenes will be given in historic Dover Castle, July 8-18.

DRIVE WEST to Salisbury, which has some claims to be the finest Elizabethan town surviving in Britain. Shakespeare acted Adam in "As You Like It" at stately Wilton House nearby.

Proceed to Bristol, where a Shakespeare Festival including the Bristol Old Vic, is scheduled through May 16. From there visit Berkeley Castle, Gloucester, and Tewkesbury, all great names in the history plays. Visit Warwick, and Kenilworth Castle, where Shakespeare probably saw his first plays when the Earl of Leicester entertained the Queen in 1574.

Drive North for Scotland and that highland grandeur so mystically suggested in "Macbeth." You may visit Glamis, Forres, Cawdor and Inverness. Perhaps from the summit of Dunsinane Castle you can see Birnam Wood (it moved in the play).

Photos by British Travel Association.

Swans still glide on River Avon by the Royal Shakespeare Theater just as they did in Shakespeare's time.

Hotels Speeded in Japan

THE JAPANESE believe that one of the best ways to give visitors an impressive image of their beautiful country is to make their stay as comfortable as possible. Accordingly, they are in the midst of a Gargantuan hotel-building program, not only in Tokyo where the 18th Olympic Games open Oct. 10, but throughout the islands.

The first of these new hostelries — each an elegant palace for the travel worn — already have opened. Others will swing open their doors next month and throughout the summer. By fall, thousands of new rooms will greet the tourist bandwagon.

Largest of them all, and one that the Japanese are pointing to with understandable pride, is the Otani-Sheraton which begins operations in August. With 1202 rooms, it will be capable of accommodating 2,007 guests.

Opening the same month will be the 592-room Tokyo Prince.

THE 76-ROOM Ueno Kokusai Kanko opened in January, followed by the 222-room Hotel Takanawa in February. The 110-room Fairmont begins operations next month and the Western-Japanese style Daiei Kanko will take its first guests in September.

Americans won't have to go to Tokyo to enjoy the luxury of clean, new hotels. In Osaka, the 753-room Shin Hankyu opens in August, followed by the 769-room Shin Osaka Hotel Annex in September.

In Kobe, near Osaka (where new super-express trains will speed Olympics visitors to the capital at 120 mph) the 142-room New Port opened this month, and the 201-room annex to the Oriental Hotel begins business in August.

Nagoya, in the same general area, opens its 261-room Nagoya Kokusai and the International Hotel Nagoya in April.

OTHER NEW hotels include the Hotel Royal, Sapporo, 94 rooms, opening May; Hotel San-ai, Sapporo, 225 rooms, July; Sendai, Sendai, 89 rooms, May; Kawasaki Nikko, Kawasaki, 60 rooms, May; New Fujiya, Atami, 294 rooms (100 of them Japanese-style), May; Toba Kokusai, Toba, 63 rooms, this month; Grand Hotel Gifu, 69 rooms, April, and Kakata Station, Kakata, 124 rooms, this month. There are many others.

All this construction does not mean that there will be no difficulty in obtaining accommodations during the late summer and early autumn. Certainly, these new hotels will add to such hostelries as the Tokyo Hilton opened in 1963, the posh Hotel Okura and a host of other hotels that were available, but it must be remembered that the influx of tourism in Japan will be the greatest in the nation's history.

THE NEW hotels range from luxury establishments providing the ultimate in comfort to the inexpensive for visitors of moderate means. And not all are western style: The Ryokan, whose mood is completely Japanese, is immensely popular with tourists, is available everywhere.

But Western Style or Japanese, vacationists will find that the tradition of gracious service has not been forgotten.

Around the World With DELAPLANE

"Could you tell us the best months to visit Tahiti? Hotel costs? Any other facts that would be helpful."

BEST time would be starting next month — the rainy season is ending. The most popular month is July. These French islands celebrate July 14 Bastille Day for a full month. All the outlying islands people come into little Papeete town. And nobody goes to bed.

Last letter I got from Tahiti said some thousand Foreign Legionnaires are now based there, waiting for France to test a new atom bomb in the Pacific. I gathered that the Legion wasn't doing much for the island. No Paradise.

Hotel costs: Hotel Tahiti is best at $12 to $17 single, $15 to $20 double. Mataval is about two-thirds that price. Best of the medium-cost hotels.

Pan American is now flying this route. So is TAI from Los Angeles — the French airline. (It recently changed its initialed name. But you can find it in the phone book under TAI still.) Flying costs to Tahiti are high enough that I don't think it is worthwhile unless you are going to go onward to Australia and New Zealand. Or stay at least two weeks.

"If we buy a car in Europe, could we put purchases in the trunk and lock it and send them home that way?"

YOU CAN. But you have to declare them when you enter the U.S. The rule is that you have to declare EVERYTHING you get overseas. Even if it was given to you.

A Guide to Fair Going

ling's circus, towering fantasies of glass and steel, predictions of things to come, re-creations of things past.

Exhibits are being executed through ingenious use of electronics, Cinerama, television, stereo, computers, Disneyisms and Hollywood showmanship.

HERE'S A GUIDE to New York fair going:

The fair runs daily from April 22 to Oct. 18, 1964, and from April 21 to Oct. 17, 1965. Gates open at 9:30 a.m., exhibits close at 10 p.m.; but many restaurants and nightclubs will stay open until 2 a.m.

Best days to avoid the big crowds: Mondays and Tuesdays.

Visitors can travel by taxi from Manhattan for about $4, by helicopter for $10, by special excursion boat, bus or train. But the city's three subway lines charge only 15 cents for transportation to the fairgrounds from any point in the system.

Admission tickets ($2 for adults, $1 for children) will be available at the gate. Although most exhibits will be free, fair officials expect the average adult to spend $7.20 a day on admission, meals, souvenirs, shows.

Cheap—at half price—for an instant, ready-mix world vacation.

Mexico's City of Silver

YOU AWAKEN to strange but pleasant music, the music of church bells tolling, cocks crowing, and burros braying. Remembering happily where you are, you breathe deeply of the fresh, clean air and go to your balcony to look down on the extraordinary scene.

Potted petunias and geraniums, wild orchids and bougainvillea splash their color across the red tile-roofed, whitewashed adobe buildings that pyramid up the terraced hills. The sounds move closer and on the narrow, cobblestone streets you see pigs and flocks of chickens scurrying out of the way of Indians with their burdened little pack animals, and sport-shirted tourists out for an early stroll.

You are in Taxco — 100 miles or so south of Mexico City—practically every American's concept of what a Mexican town should be.

TAXCO, pronounced TAHS-co, once the center of a vast silver mining district, is so beloved by the Mexicanos that it has been designated a National Colonial Monument. As such, the quaint cobblestone streets must stay and the construction of modern-style buildings is prohibited.

If you are staying at the Hotel Victoria, the Rancho Telva or one of the other comfortable hostelries in the center of town, you join fellow tourists for a stroll as soon as you have breakfasted. The silver shops for which the town is internationally famous already are open, and from the back rooms come the sounds of the silversmiths' hammers. You leave the narrow street to examine and exclaim over the artistry and variety of the products and, naturally, you barter and buy like crazy.

PRIOR TO the mid-1920s, Taxco was in a state of decay from its heyday as a community supported by the rich silver mines. Then William Spratling, a teacher of architecture at Tulane University, stumbled onto the place. He was so overwhelmed by its architectural beauty that he decided to stay.

It was through Spratling's influence that Taxco became a National Colonial Monument. But he did not stop there. The town needed to regain its former eminence, the natives needed jobs. Spratling revived the almost lost art of silversmithing. Today, a number of mines are operating nearby, and there are more than 100 silver shops in the town, many of them operated by his former employes.

One of the few level spots is the Central Plaza on which rests the Iglesia de San Sebastian y Santa Prisca which, because it dwarfs all other buildings, is the first thing you see when you enter Texaco. With its ornate spires and multi-colored dome, it is considered one of the most beautiful and probably one of the best preserved of the old churches in the Republic.

AS YOU EXPLORE the Plaza, you yourself are relaxed by Mexicans idling on benches under the laurel trees, artists in front of their easels, children making a pretense of selling inexpensive souvenirs.

You are in the midst of a world of make-believe that's very real.

Taxco was founded in 1520 by Hernando Cortez, the Mexican conquerer about the time the Spanish conquistadores discovered the rich mines. Later, a Frenchman, Jose de la Borda came to town—long after the first decline in mining—and discovered a fabulously rich lode of his own. This was in 1747.

From his original and succeeding strikes, Borda amassed a great fortune. In gratitude, he built at a cost of 8 million pesos the great church, completing it in 1758. Still not satisfied, he then rebuilt much of the town itself, which is why just about every structure in Taxco today belongs to the 18th century.

TAXCO was forgotten in the latter part of the 18th century when its mining industry took another nosedive. However, in 1876, the mines were reopened with the help of foreign capital and worked at great profit.

In 1920, when a modern highway connected it with the capital of the Republic—and William Spratling arrived—it shed its cape of isolation to become what it is to this day, a city of silver ringed by emerald mountains that never fails to delight tourists.

Tourist Card

If your visit to Mexico is not more than 30 days, the Mexican Government will issue your tourist card free. If your stay is to be one to six months, the card will cost $3. A $5 multiple entry card permitting you to come and go at will is valid for six months. The Mexican Emmigration Service will issue the cards for each member of your family; you can also get them from the Mexican Government Tourism Dept., 3106 Wilshire Blvd., Los Angeles, or from some of the airlines serving Mexico.

Lure of Alaska

FROM the colorful Gold Rush country of the Yukon to the fringe of the Arctic Circle, the lure of Alaska as a vacation paradise grows each year. The 49th State expects the greatest influx of tourists in its history during the coming season.

One of the popular ways of getting there will be sailings via the Inside Passage route from Seattle. In this one, the ship glides through serene and protected island-dotted waters, never out of sight of the panorama of lush forests, great mountains, tumbling waterfalls, silently-moving glaciers and picturesque Alaskan settlements.

Many tours are offered this year—by plane, cruise ship, ferry, rail and motorcoach—all of which your travel agent will know about. They visit the bustling communities of Anchorage and Juneau, retrace the steps of the miners of '98 to the Ester Gold Fields and old Yukon trails; take in memorable areas such as Mt. McKinley National Park, Lake Bennett, Alyeska (Alaska's ski resort), Matanuska Valley and Skagway.

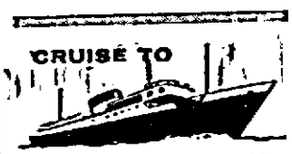

Some of the tours include side trips, including a two-day Nome-Kotzebue jaunt that reaches primitive Eskimo villages far above the Arctic Circle.

Fair Planning

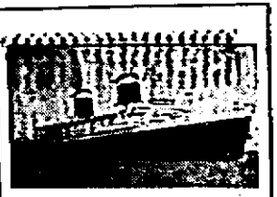

Special planning kits for the vacationer going to New York World's Fair or Hawaii this year have been prepared by United Air Lines.

Colorful, informative and up-to-date information on these popular travel locations are featured, along with suggestions on where to stay, scenic side trips, special services available, and what to see, are included.

The kits are available at $1 each from United Air Lines, P. O. Box 727, Garden City, N. Y., 11531.

Romance of the Easter Orchid

By Hoyt McAfee

EVERY woman who sports a lovely corsage on Easter Sunday will feel more in tune with the spirit of the occasion. Will it consist of roses, gardenias, carnations, orchids, or some other flower? It all depends upon her own preference, or the choice of the person giving her the corsage.

Generally speaking, in major cities across the land, roses, gardenias, and orchids seem to dominate the scene wherever women congregate. Tastes vary from one area to another. Large floral shops in metropolitan centers report, however, that they receive the greatest volume of requests for (1) orchids and (2) roses.

In that connection, one major floral outfit some time back conducted a survey on the subject. It established why such impressive numbers of American women favor the orchid corsage over any other nosegay. To quote some of their replies:

"THE ORCHID gives me a lift in spirit." Another: "It adds a certain chic touch to a woman's appearance." A third one: "To me, it's like a badge of distinction." A fourth: "I think of the orchid as the most glamorous and dramatic of all flowers."

She very definitely has a point there. From close association with two wild-orchid hunters, I know that to be so. They invade remote jungle regions of Central and South America in search of rare specimens. They even risk their necks and meet with hair-raising adventure to collect them.

Take the tropical Renanthera, for example. Uncounted thousands of American girls proudly wear it on Easter Sunday, as well as on other special occasions. Only a rare one among them realizes what a dramatic background it has.

EVEN GADABOUTS like Linda Christian, Ava Gardner, and Debra Paget admitted their knowledge of its history was "skimpy." This particular orchid has blossoms of a bright scarlet color. They always seem ready to burst into flame.

This variety of orchid may be preserved—even worn—almost a week. In the jungle regions of Colombia, Venezuela, Panama, Guatemala and Mexico, appreciative natives look upon this fire-colored orchid with a measure of reverence. In the Maya country of Northern Guatemala, they will stand in front of it for five minutes or longer: speechless with admiration.

My orchid-hunter friends have seen them step forward and stroke the Renanthera's petals gently, much like you'd treat a fond household pet. Latin gallants give the Renanthera only to that very special g'rl in their lives. "In-the-know" American men take it along as added "bait" when they are serenading a Latin cutie on her balcony porch.

A GIRL who attends a fiesta or a promenade with the Renanthera pinned to her blouse or dress becomes the magnet of admiring eyes. Other women, less fortunate, sigh enviously and comment: "What a thoughtful novio (sweetheart) she must have."

More than all else, an orchid corsage represents a man's tribute to a woman's femaleness. Some girls secretly feel that it sets them apart from the crowd. Men who bestow it as a gift, orchid experts maintain, have a keen appreciation of "the glamorous look."

—Richard Wallmeyer Drawing

Glamour and drama combine in the background of orchid, floral queen of the corsage.

To reach wild orchid country in Central and South American lands, requires tramping through jungle growth, fording swollen rivers, and fighting off the assaults of wild hornets. After hours of prowling in vain, muscles begin to ache and the quest begins to seem a wild-goose chase. But when despair sets in, suddenly something exciting happens.

There—just ahead and just beyond a tangle of jungle growth—looms a riotous profusion of wild orchids! Flame orchids with dove-shaped petals and other enchanting specimens—all of them washed and nurtured by a thousand tropical rains. Clusters of them entwined around old jungle trees.

THE DISCOVERY stirs the hunter deeply, weariness of bone and muscle are forgotten. Such was my response when I accompanied orchid-hunter friends into stretches of jungle in search of rare orchids.

Native guides responded to the find swiftly—by leaping forward, touching the delicate petals, and murmuring over their sheer beauty. In their view certain orchids possess a personality—even a soul! Hence the reason they exercise such meticulous care in handling them.

Wild-orchid hunters stumble across tiger and butterfly orchids frequently. Then there are specimens which some native tribes regard as "lucky." Still others which are thought to be afflicted with a curse.

Some orchids have disagreeable odors—lovely and enticing blooms from a distance, their stench upon close approach is gagging.

Additionally, there's a variety of jungle orchid with a fragrant scent. It expells a perfume more redolent than that of the gardenia. This one flourishes in hideaway areas of back-country Colombia and Venezuela.

AN ORCHID hunt across territory inhabited by primitive native tribes in Colombia can prove dangerous on occasion. Through an oversight, my two hunter-friends learned that the hard way. Down a long stretch of winding jungle river they ventured in their dugouts. Unfortunately, their native guides had paid that area of the country no recent visit.

In the meantime, an uncivilized tribal group—one adept in the use of poisoned darts and blowguns—had moved in and taken over. No one of them was in sight, however, when my friends arrived there. Led by their native guides, they alighted and hacked their way to a spot covered with fallen and crumbling tree trunks.

But what they'd discovered was a sight to remember. Beautiful orchids tumbled to the ground in masses and formed one far-spreading floral carpet! It seemed like a sacrilege to think of removing one petal—or orchid—from that magnificent mound of beauty. And when my friends and the guides did step forward, the move almost proved their undoing.

FOR SUDDENLY, native tribesmen of the area peered from behind jungle bush and poured out their "hot reception." They shot their poisoned darts and arrows in the direction of the unwelcome introduers. Fortunately, the aim of the tribesmen was erratic.

Genuinely frightened, my friends and their guides fled the scene, jumped into their still-intact dugouts, and made their escape down river. Some 30 hours later they reached a friendly village. By questioning some people there they were able to determine the magnitude of their blunder.

That spot a-wash with a riotous growth of wild orchids was, their informants deduced, in all probability a sacred burial ground. No wonder the enraged back-country tribesmen had declared "poisoned-dart warfare" on the hunters!

As women may fully appreciate at this point, the corsages they wear on Easter Sunday may well be spiced with a history of high adventure and romance.

Wood Carvings from Old Sweden

By Helen L. Gillum

LONG AGO in Stockholm, a young lad sat on the back steps of his home and worked with his small knife on a block of wood. His father was a wood carver by trade, and some day he, Eric, would follow in his father's footsteps. But now, for his own amusement, he plied his knife back and forth and in and out, fashioning a diminutive peasant farmer, and, from a similar piece of wood, the peasant's wife.

After his work was finished to his satisfaction, he proudly painted the little figures, adding yellow and red and white to the wife's clothing and sturdier colors in brown, blue and black to the small bearded farmer. Then he perhaps set the figures aside, and, as he grew older, and became more skilled in the woodworkers' art, completely forgot the tiny figures in the pride he took in creating larger and more pretentious works.

The little boy in Sweden of the 1890s never dreamed, of course, that many years later a grandniece in America would acquire and cherish his crude hand-carved figures, or that such humble Old World pieces as these would some day be considered highly desirable in the field of collectibles.

TWO MINIATURE figures, owned by Mrs. Clarence Bonesteel of 312 Smith St., Long Beach, are only 5½ and 5 inches high. But the smooth, yet plainly discernible knife marks, the rough dress and heavy work shoes of the quaint little couple, and the soft patina on the old wood and paint make them irresistibly charming.

A napkin holder owned by Mrs. Bonesteel and made by the same great-uncle several years later is also interesting. In contrast to the squat peasant and his wife, the holder is 12 inches high and is in the shape of a svelte young Swedish woman. The brighter colors and better workmanship are indicative of the advancing skill of the young wood carver. Narrow slits in the lady's skirts hold the napkins.

Miniatures of a farmer and his wife were carved from wood long ago by a great-uncle of a Long Beach woman.

An intriguing feature of the Swedish miss is her "jointed" arms and tiny leather hands.

On a kitchen wall in the Bonesteel home is an attractive arrangement of other woodcraft by the same great-uncle. Two 11½-inch-wide, circular plaques, or "bread-slicers", are gay with brightly-colored figures of young folks in Swedish national costume. Cut-outs of a dancing boy and a dancing girl in holiday attire decorate the wall between the two plaques.

LA REINA RULE

WHAT YOUR NAME MEANS

Send your name to La Reina Rule in care of Southland Magazine, 604 Pine Ave., Long Beach 12, Calif., for origin, meaning and brief genealogy, for reply only in this column.

DEAR MISS RULE: Please give brief data on BYNUM.—B.B., Lakewood.

B.B.: BYNUM was formed many centuries ago in Anglo-Saxon England from the words, "Binna-Ham" meaning "battle-standard carrier's meadow." This apparently referred to the home location of a retired warrior. No other data is accessible on Bynum.

DEAR MISS RULE: Please give data on JERNIGAN.—G.J., Long Beach.

G.J.: JERNIGAN traces back into the 11th century when its source was the old Teutonic "Gern-Wig" meaning "eager warrior." A century later when Gernwig had been introduced to France, it was spelled Gernigan; after usage in England it evolved as Jernigan. Ancestors in Britain include Walter Gernegan of Suffolks, 1273. The Jernegan shield from Norfolk is silver, emblazoned with three red, diamond-shaped belt buckles.

DEAR MISS RULE: May we have data on SCHUG.—P.H., Long Beach.

P.H.: SCHUG harkens back to its old German occupational origin and deciphers as a dialectical form of "Schuh" meaning "shoe." Many centuries ago a provincial German shoemaker artisan bequeathed his trade-name to his descendants.

DEAR MISS RULE: What is the background of MATA.—C.M., A.M., Long Beach; R.M., Wilmington

C.M., A.M., R.M.: MATA originated in medieval Spain and Portugal. This name can mean "thicket of bushes," but the old definition applying to the family name was "home at a grove of trees" or "home in an orchard."

DEAR MISS RULE: Could you analyze TACKETT.—R.T., Garden Grove

R.T.: TACKETT, English in background, had two sources. One was the syllable phrase "Tacco-et" for "little one born in the daytime," from the baptismal name Tacco meaning "day." Tackett also evolved from the old French-English "Taquet" meaning "a small good omen," referring to parental delight in the birth of a son.

DEAR MISS RULE: May we learn about ROOTLIEB?—D.R., Artesia

D.R.: ROOTLIEB is an American form of the ancient German warrior title "Hrodo-Leif" meaning "glorious hero." Gradual surname evolution resulted in changes from Hrodoleif to Rot-leif, then Rot-lieb and Rootlieb.

DEAR MISS RULE: What is the origin of ABBATE?—G.A., Long Beach

G.A.: ABBATE is one of several spellings of "Abate" which in Italian means "abbott" or "head of a monastery." This term was used as a surname in honor of an ancestor so nicknamed from his serious, benevolent bearing and manner, similar to a church prelate.

DEAR MISS RULE: May we have history on MAREZ.—H.M., Long Beach

H.M.: MAREZ is Spanish but was developed from the ancient Gothic given name "Mar" meaning "famous one." Following the Gothic invasion of Spain in the 5th century, A.D., "Mar" was used, combined with the Spanish descendancy suffix "-ez" with the complete surname meaning "son of the famous one."

DEAR MISS RULE: Would you publish data on SWORDS.—R.S., B.K., Long Beach

R.S., B.K.: SWORDS was first used by the son of a "Sweordere" or maker of swords. This ancient English surname can also be from a trademark sign over the doorway of a shop, a picture of a pair of crossed swords. It is strange but no coat-of-arms is available for Swords.

DEAR MISS RULE: May we have data on FORSYTH?—N.F., Long Beach

N.F.: FORSYTH had its origin in Stirlingshire, Scotland. This name is from the

Bronzed Muscle and Boiling Surf

Churning foam tops a wave rising toward its crest and propelling a surfer shoreward. Delicate timing and a sense of balance are a surfer's talents.

By Jerome Hall

THERE'S this dream, see, and it's a swinger. Every surfer has it. All the time. And it's always the same. These great, big waves. Twenty-footers, see?

Swingin'.

The waves come rolling toward shore with perfect rhythm and peel off against the beach. Ahead of each, just far enough ahead to keep from being swallowed in foam, is a lone rider.

By shifting his weight, he trims his board to a new angle, cuts sideways at 40 miles an hour along the swell of water as it reaches high, searching for a place to crash.

As the white water of the wave's advance rises and arcs ahead, it seems to envelope the bronzed surfer and his board, curling over the top of him and collapsing with the force of a thousand . . . nay, a million pounds.

But in the surfer's dream, see, the bronzed youth shoots through the tube of water and out from under as the wave crashes with a frightful roar and rolls down the coastline.

The surfer is hardly dampened by the spray.

That's the dream.

But the dream is turning into a nightmare.

Today surfing is a vast, uncharted world of sport that is gaining devotees in the manner of a tidal wave, causing a dangerous situation on the Southland's beaches.

"There are just too darn many people surfing," claims surfer Ron Maury, "who do not know how to surf." Maury is qualified to criticize, since he is a native-born Hawaiian, and co-founder of the Long Beach Surf Club.

The 100 member Long Beach club is the current international champion, a status recently acquired along the shores of Makaha, the magic Hawaiian word in surfdom. The Long Beach club sent 15 members to the international championships last month and its delegates won first place in four of the six categories, a performance that was startling if not astounding.

THE LONG BEACH club, which has members ranging in age from 16 to the 50s, is being used as a model in surfing. Those who are interested in advancing the sport, clearing its clouded image, are convinced that surfing clubs are the only answer.

"Surfing is out of hand now," says Maury, who began riding boards through the Hawaii breakers as a small boy 30 years ago. "Any kid with the price of a board can give the entire sport a bad name. But people are beginning to get a better impression of surfing even though it gets more crowded and the situation keeps getting worse."

Just how bad the surfing situation will become is anybody's guess. The sport has emerged from its initial growing pains and taken on an aura of glamour, has acquired status. With status will come a new tidal wave of devotees. This summer it may be The Boiling Surf.

One who has done much to boost the image of the sport is 16-year-old Corky Carroll of Surfside. Corky is international paddling champion, an appellation earned against men with many years of experience in the one phase of surfboarding that depends more on muscle than tip-toe balance.

THOUGH CORKY has the physical dimensions of most any 16-year-old, "he will be the greatest paddler in history," in the estimation of Maury, who has known all of the good ones in the past quarter century. "He's close to it right now. He'll be champ for the next 100 years. Nobody will touch his records."

In support, Maury tells the story of Corky's entry into the international meet last month. The young fellow wasn't going to compete because he did not have a racing board, a specially-built board that costs about $1,000 compared to the $75 average cost of an ordinary board.

But Maury convinced the lad he should do it for the experience. Twelve entered the three-quarter-mile race wherein the contestants kneel on the boards and paddle with their hands. Four of the 12 had the expensive racing boards. Corky finished ahead of three of the specially-built boards to win the stock-division championship.

"Finishing second under those circumstances is about like a high school kid borrowing his dad's station wagon and finishing second in the 500-mile race at Indianapolis," says Maury.

THE OTHER three championship trophies won by Long Beach Surf Club members went to Mike Doyle in the open-class Diamond Head race (he finished ahead of Corky on a racing board), to Nancy Nelson who won the women's all-around title and to Doyle paired with Linda Merrill in the tandem class. Doyle, a Long Beach State College student, resides in Surfside, Miss Merrill and Miss Nelson in Capistrano.

In the tandem event the two ride a single board and perform acrobatics while the wave sweeps them shoreward. They encounter about the same problems as a circus high wire act trying to perform in a hurricane.

Surfing is a dangerous sport, make no mistake. "It's like fighting the bulls, in some ways," says Maury. "There's a moment of truth, waiting for that wave." But in 30 years he has been clapped in the head only once. That accident was a recent one, caused by a crowded beach.

When a rider loses his board, it becomes an unguided missile tossed about by an ocean that has more raw energy than all the rockets and bullets and TNT at man's command. There have been deaths on Southland beaches in recent weeks from such accidents.

THERE IS TWO-FOLD danger in a "wipeout." If the fallen surfer is not hit by the board, he is almost certain to be struck by the force of the wave. The water churns beneath the surface as well as above it and when it catches the surfer it tosses him toward the ocean floor.

He must then struggle back to the surface, timing himself so that he does not come up too soon, for he would be caught in a foam so thick that he could not breathe.

Too, he must remember that there is another wave right behind which might send him hurtling back to the bottom with lungs empty.

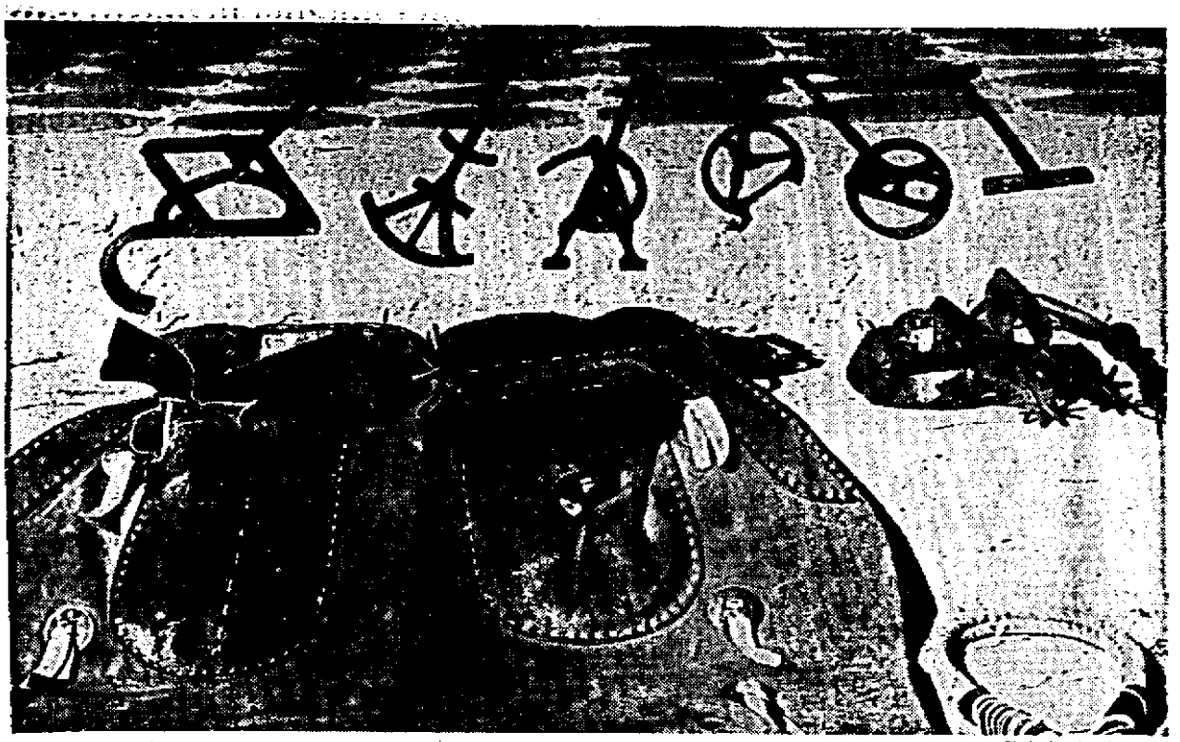

"The first thing we try to teach," says Maury, "is to have respect for the ocean even though you're only a few yards from shore. But some of these young fellows just won't learn

Accoutrements of western pioneer days—chaps, spurs, branding irons—gain new interest in these days of television westerns. Above, some of the branding irons that have come down from the dons to the present on Bixby Ranches

Cattle Brands of the Dons

By G. J. Salzer

IN THE DAYS of the great ranchos, cattle brands were important to every ranchero, his associates and his hirelings, and so it was in the Long Beach area until time and exploding population changed the ways.

But time and television westerns have altered the mood again and knowledge of the branding of cattle and of the brands used in this section become of interest. Of special note are those brands used before there was a city of Long Beach as well as those employed by Rancho Los Alamitos.

The use of brands goes back more than 4,000 years. Egyptian tombs indicate that cattle were branded as early as 2,000 B.C. The American custom of cattle banding was adopted from Mexico. The Mexican Dons branded their huge herds with their family coat-of-arms and, as the cattle industry moved northward into Texas, this method of indicating ownership was gradually accepted by the Americans.

Today, there are hundreds of thousands of cattle brands registered in the United States. At one time there were no fences in the vast West and even today much of the cattle area is open range. Cattle wander far in grazing, herds become mingled. The round-up permits separation of each owner's stock and because calves always follow their mother, the ownership of unbranded calves is easily determined.

The annual spring round-up has as one of its principal purposes the finding and branding of the past year's calf crop.

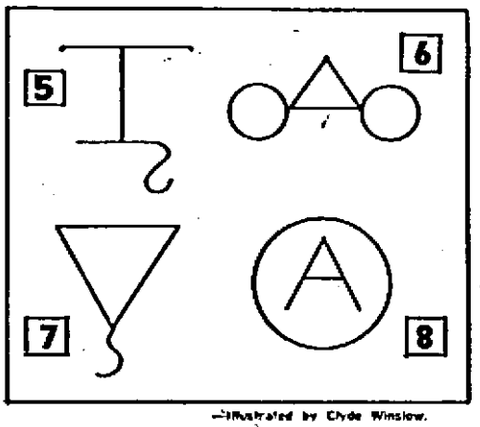

IN THE EARLY days of the cattle industry, ranchers used large brands that nearly covered an animal's entire body. Later, when cattle hides began to bring a good price, this practice gave way to the smaller, carefully forged branding iron that left a neat, easy-to-read mark—usually on the left hip or high on the left ribs.

The legibility of a brand depends on the cowboy applying it and on the type of iron used as well as the design of the brand used.

The best branding irons are made from high-quality metal, one-half to one inch thick with the face drawn and beveled to a width of about one-quarter of an inch. Letters and symbols are usually about four inches high and the handle about 36 inches long.

The brand is applied with a grey-hot iron, about the color of the branding fire ashes. A red-hot iron produces an overburned brand. This often results in sores which may become infected. Cattle are never branded when hides are damp as this causes a scalded or blotched mark.

In 1784, 15 years after Spain acquired California, a land grant was given to Manuel Nieto. This land grant covered about 156,000 acres.

—Illustrated by Clyde Winslow.

The brand used by Don Manuel Nieto is not found in any Registry Book.

WHEN DON Manuel Nieto died in 1804, his son, Juan Jose Nieto, inherited the Rancho Los Alamitos and his daughter, Manuela, the adjoining Rancho Los Cerritos.

On June 30, 1834, Juan Jose Nieto sold the Rancho Los Alamitos to Jose Figueroa, Governor of California, for $500, and the brand passed from Nieto's hands to those of the Governor. This brand was a triangle with a small line on top. (See Illustration No. 1.)

After this transaction, brands became a little easier to trace.

It appears that the original brand of Juan Jose Nieto that was acquired by Governor Figueroa was transferred to Don Abel Stearns. Don Abel purchased the Rancho Alamitos in 1842 and recorded two brands in 1853. (See Nos. 1 and 2.)

The records for both brands reads, "Abel Stearns comes and presents the foregoing brand and earmarks and proof of its transfer to him and the same is registered as his brand and earmarks this 15th day of April, 1853.—Wilson Jones, Recorder."

ANOTHER BRAND USED by Don Abel Stearns (See No. 3) was registered as follows: "Abel Stearns comes and presents for registry this counter brand, April 15, 1853.—Wilson Jones, Recorder."

Brand No. 4 was confirmed to Don Juan Temple, January 11, 1844, recorded by Don Felipe Lugo.

Brands Nos. 5 and 6 were issued to John Temple, May 15, 1852.

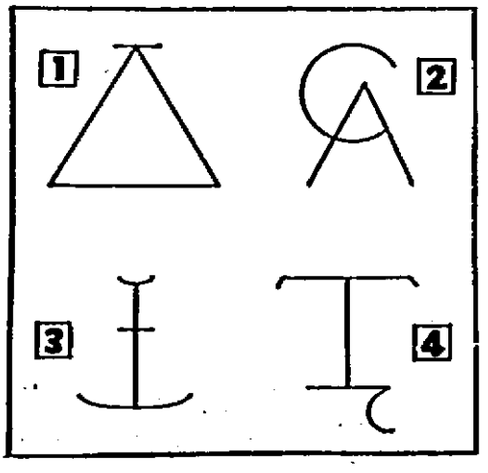

Brand No. 7 was first used by the Bixbys to stock Ranchos Alamitos and Cerritos. As shown in the Book of Brands, J. Bixby and Company inverted the triangle and added a tail to the old Nieto brand. Recorded June 28, 1870, by T. D. Mott, Recorder.

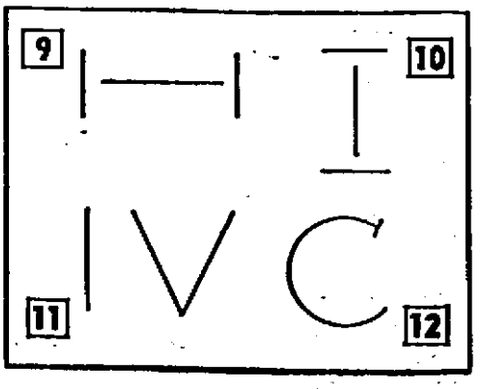

Circle A, a John Bixby brand (See No. 8), came into use shortly after 1880 and was handed down to Fred H. Bixby.

Since that time Mr. Bixby has used Nos. 9 and 10, known as the Three Bar Brand, and No. 11, known as the IV Brand. All these were made by a straight iron laid on the hide to form the different brands.

The C Brand (No. 12) is now used by the Fred H. Bixby Company.

In the accompanying illustration are shown thick leather chaps, homemade, which were worn to protect the rider's legs from chaparral and other growth through which he was compelled to ride in carrying out his duties. A gun in the patch holster at left center of the picture was carried to protect the herds. It is a .44 caliber mounted on a .38 frame—a Colts and carried for hunting game as well as protection.

The author of this article on early brands is assistant secretary of the Fred H. Bixby Ranch Co., operators of Los Alamitos Ranch; Long Beach; El Cojo and Jalama Ranches, Lompoc; Rowland, La Puente, and Shorb, Anaheim.

He's a Diamond's Very Best Friend

Diamonds, like humans, have "fingerprints." These are identifying marks that make each one distinguishable from others. Above photo, diamond in magnification, shows "butterfly" flaw below surface, an identifying item.

By Larry Allison

WHEN AN FBI agent retires at 50 after 21 years of carrying a revolver and working on cases ranging from World War II sabotage to capturing armed robbers, what does he do—go on with another form of police work, or take up a hobby?

Smiling, quiet-spoken George J. Nagel, who would never be taken for a special agent of the FBI, did neither—and yet he did both. Nagel, for 10 years the Bureau's senior agent in the Long Beach area, started a business of his own that smacks of both his FBI career and his favorite pastime—working with jewels.

Former FBI agent, George J. Nagel now operates a diamond appraisal service, making scientific gem appraisals and preparing documented positive identification of stones. He is shown with microscope used in detecting flaws, nicks and/or other clues that make up gems' "fingerprints."

An ex-rock hound who still cuts and polishes gems for the fun of it, Nagel now operates Long Beach Diamond Appraisers, which offers jewelers, jewelry owners and insurance companies what is probably the only service of its kind in the nation. Acting as an impartial observer interested in neither buying nor selling jewelry, Nagel makes scientific appraisals of value and in addition gives the jewelry owner something almost unheard of in the past—a document providing positive identification of the gems.

It is the identification system that hints at Nagel's former career. As an FBI agent, he frequently had to try to identify valuable stones recovered from thieves.

"SOMETIMES this is just about impossible," Nagel says. "The first thing a jewel thief does is remove the bigger stones from their settings. Once this is done, even a person who has had a diamond ring or bracelet for years rarely will recognize the loose diamonds."

If a large stone has an obvious identifying characteristic, the thief will cut the stone into smaller ones and peddle them.

Nagel's solution to this problem is to provide with every appraisal a precise, written description of the jewel based on a microscopic examination of its hidden flaws.

"The description furnished in an ordinary appraisal of a diamond," Nagel says, "could apply to 1,000 different stones of the same size. But actually, every stone is unlike any other—just like human fingerprints."

And, like fingerprints, descriptions of jewels can be filed and coded for possible future use. Nagel, who keeps records of all his appraisals, is building up just such a file now to protect his clients. Eventually, he believes, the file also will aid police in theft investigations.

THE "FINGERPRINTS" of a diamond or other precious stone are its inclusions, or flaws. When properly recorded, a gem can be identified by these characteristics even if it is later cut into smaller ones.

Types of flaws, which number in the hundreds, include carbon patterns (in diamonds), minute fractures and two and three-phase inclusions.

An emerald, which has a value about equal to a diamond of similar quality, has three-phase inclusions. These are tiny pockets containing liquid (which may be millions of years old), a bubble of gas and a speck of crystal. By examining the shape of the crystal contained in the pocket, an expert can tell if the emerald is from South America (square crystal) or from mines in Siberia (diamond-shaped).

Nagel's description of a gem also includes its type of cut, weight, and dimensions to a hundredth of a millimeter.

When it comes to setting the value of a jewel, Nagel again uses a scientific approach. A diamond, the gem most frequently appraised, is graded for weight, flaws, color and proportions, then its value is computed mathematically. Diamond prices are standard throughout the world because they are controlled by the South African cartel De Beers Consolidated Mines, Ltd.

BUT DON'T ASK Nagel what the going rate is for a one-carat diamond. "That's like asking what a two-door automobile is worth," he says. "It depends on many factors—its flaws, color, and whether it is cut to ideal proportions for brilliance." Prices may vary as much as 400 per cent between two stones of the same size.

Nagel's services are drawing good response from insurance companies, which need not only an accurate description of insured jewels but an appraisal without guesswork, and by jewelers, who mostly do appraisal work as a sideline they'd just as soon not be involved in.

Individual owners of jewelry like the scientific approach, too. "There's something about owning a diamond," Nagel says, "that makes a person wonder just how much it's really worth."

Nagel frequently does appraisals for people considering the purchase of a stone, and his clients come from as far as 200 miles. Some of them buy jewels as investments, and want an exact appraisal before they make a purchase.

Whether or not diamonds are a girl's best friend doesn't much concern Nagel. But, he says, in recent months they have been an excellent investment; in 1963 alone, diamond prices rose from 10 per cent for less valuable stones to 30 and 40 per cent for rare, high-quality ones.

"IT USED TO BE that American diamond buyers shopped in Europe," Nagel says. "Now it's the other way around; Europeans are putting their new wealth into jewelry, and the buyers are shopping in the United States. Scarcity of the better stones is forcing up prices."

Nagel, who retired a year ago, doesn't talk much about his experiences in the FBI except to say he never once had to draw his pistol. His family, accustomed to years of hearing little of his involvement in top-secret investigations, seldom ask about his former career even now.

Before venturing into his new work, Nagel studied at a gemological institute in Los Angeles.

Nagel, whose two daughters, Nancy, 19, and Patty, 18, attend Long Beach State College, runs his business in the Heartwell Bldg. at 19 Pine Ave. together with his wife, Jeanne. Mrs. Nagel, now learning how to use a microscope, is his secretary, receptionist and—quips Nagel—"the administrator."

Nagel's business suite, far removed from any sort of jewelry store, resembles more a lawyer's office except for his instruments and some replicas of famous stones he keeps on his desk.

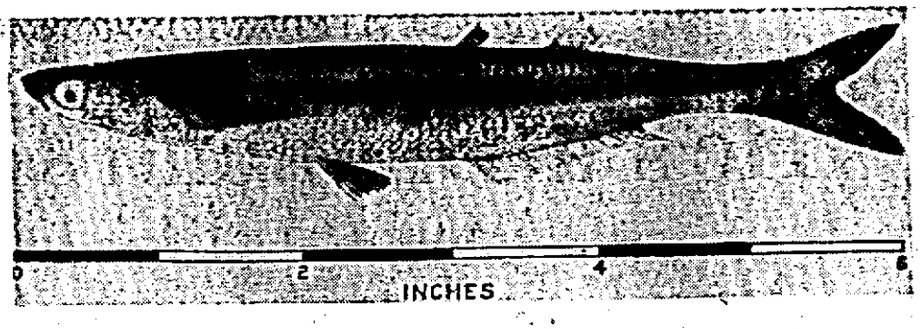

But on the walls are five surrealistic-looking oil paintings, done by Nagel, which give him away. On close inspection, each proves to be a microscopic view of a jewel—inclusions and all.

Ex-agent Nagel has no security problems with his business, because he never keeps jewelry in his office overnight. Nonetheless, he remains in touch with "the boys" of the FBI. "I was in the Bureau a long time," he says fondly, "and I still am. Once you're an agent, you always are."

Man-Nature Ritual by Moonlight

By Lou Jobst

EACH YEAR—starting in March and ending in September—Southern California goes grunion hunting, a strange man-nature ritual that is played only in the light of a full moon.

The newcomer to the region is likely to eye with suspicion his first invitation to hunt grunion, recalling the "snipe hunt" and other back east hoaxes, but the initiated will respond with glee to word the silverlings are running.

Grunion—for the record and the skeptical—are slender, silvery fishes, five to eight inches long.

IN MASSES of thousands, the grunion fling themselves onto sandy Southland strands about 10 to 15 times (see accompanying calendar) each year to mate and spawn. With equal ardor and since the turn of the century bands of beach roving hunters throw themselves on the fish, scooping them into gunny sacks and even clothing, in a one-sided orgy called "grunion hunting."

The grunion spawn, during the Spring and Summer, on three or four nights following each full or new moon. They come in only at high tide periods ranging from one to three hours.

During the time ashore the grunion mate, dig holes, lay their eggs and retreat back into the sea.

ALL RUNS, except those in April and May, peak spawning months, are open season.

The rules are few. The grunion can be caught only by hand and it's unlawful to dig holes, use nets or set traps. A $3 fishing license is required for all persons over 16. There's no limit.

Although authorities have closed the peak season they are not afraid the grunion will be decimated, the fish are too prolific for that.

Marine biologists say a single female will spawn four to eight times a year, producing 1,000 to 3,000 eggs every 15 days.

The grunion, to be eaten, should be scaled, rolled in meal and fried.

Grunion Hunt Schedule

Day of the Jokers

By Enole Chamberlin

IT IS THE morning of April First—just any old year. What a wonderful day it is! A day when you can play pranks and jokes from sun up until midnight and no one gets mad. Or they are not supposed to, anyhow. Your mind darts here and there like a swallow after a flying insect. You are trying to think of whom you will tackle first. Then right in front of you on the ground you see the cap you lost yesterday. The one you had to take a scolding about. Hah! You'll get it and April fool Mother. You reach for it. Wham! It goes snapping over behind a hedge, jerked by a string. Laughter is salt on an open wound. Words jar against your ears.

"April Fool!"

You set your teeth. What a horrible day this is. There should be a law against it. But really you know there is nothing the matter with the day. To the boys who pulled the joke on you, it's a glorious day. And to you, when you have pulled off a good fat joke, it will be a glorious day, too. And that's how it has been for many a year, and will probably continue to be. For everyone likes a joke—when it's on the other fellow. And this whole April Fool business is a joke on all of us for no one seems to know just when or where or why the bit of tomfoolery started. There are many suppositions as to its origin but no real knowledge. However, there is one opinion about it which has a more likely sound than any of the others. To understand why we must consider the calendar.

YOU KNOW, of course, that in 46 B. C. the Julian calendar came into existence with March 25 being the first day of the year. This New Year date was celebrated as we celebrate New Year's today, only more so, since the festivities lasted for a week. The fun-making reached its height on April 1 when friend visited friend exchanging gifts much as we do at Christmas time today. Then, in 1564, the Reformed calendar succeeded the Julian. France was the first country to lay away the old and start using the new. This calendar set the New Year back to January 1, as it is today.

So, keeping up an old custom but doing it in the spirit of a joke, people exchanged mock gifts. They made elaborate visits to friends for the sole purpose of making fools out of them if by chance they had forgotten the changed calendar. Once started, the custom of trying to fool people was, as it is today, too good a thing to discard. So it was continued even after its origin was forgotten.

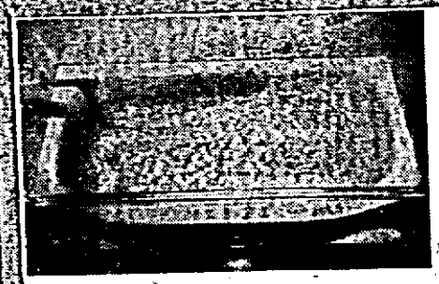

SOME TIME passed, perhaps, before the April foolishness spread to other countries. After all, it was some years before some of the other nations adopted the changed calendar. Besides, communication was slow and uncertain in those days. But spread the custom did until today even the Oriental people have taken it on. They send friends on fruitless errands, to the market to get something which does not exist, macaroni seed, for instance, or to carry a message to someone who isn't at home. College students in England make a big production out of the Fool's Day. They spend much time thinking up pranks which sound so honest that people do not think of them as jokes at all—until it is too late.

In America, April 1 is a day of merriment. So, if you have a prank played on you while you are trying to think up one to play on someone else, take it in good part, laugh it off, and just keep on planning how you are going to even the score and a little more. Always, of course, in a manner which is not rough, unmannerly or dangerous. For this day should be a day of laughter for both the joker and the victim.

SOUTHLAND HOMES

Substance, Beauty and Time-Matured

By Stella George

SEVERAL years ago Mr. and Mrs. Robert Williams built their house at 3851 Gundry Ave. in Bixby Knolls. The street is in the quiet, established residential area where the trees have had a chance to grow, and homes have the substantial, mature beauty that only time can achieve.

There is an inviting cordiality about the Williams home which has instant appeal. This is due to the good layout of the house, the furniture arrangement, and the excellent use of color throughout. Mrs. Williams is a professional interior designer, and her home reflects her talent in this calling.

Walls, carpeting, and drapes are of an oyster shade, a good neutral background color for the predominant blues and greens in the furnishings and accessories. The carpet is a thick, luxurious wool turf that always looks new and wears almost indefinitely.

TWIN turquoise sofas face each other in front of the fireplace. Another conversation grouping is placed across the way with a couch and peacock green chair. In front of a bay window is a dainty desk made of fine walnut—in reality it is one of the first cabinet sewing machines made, circa the late 1800s. Now, with the machine itself removed, it serves in a new capacity.

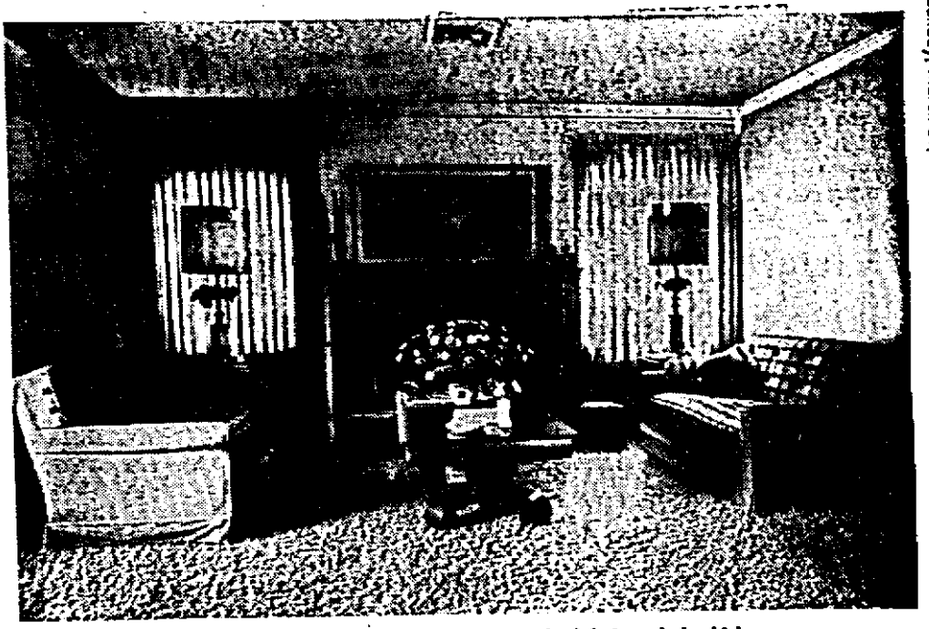

Originally, the dining room was formal, but in recent years the Williams opened up walls to combine the dining and family rooms into one large area, with an open kitchen adjoining.

Mrs. Williams has blended the old and the new with skill. The new dining room set is continental height. At the other far end of the room is a walnut rattan conversation group. Bookshelves line one wall, giving way for space at one end for a built-in gun rack. The wall decoration behind the rattan grouping is most original, designed and executed by Mrs. Williams. It is a three-dimensional tree which she carved from plywood, then painted with appropriate colors. Branches are realistic pieces of manzanita placed here and there with birds and butterflies perched, ready for flight. The tree covers the entire wall. The "something old" in the room includes such items as crystal pieces on a triangular corner

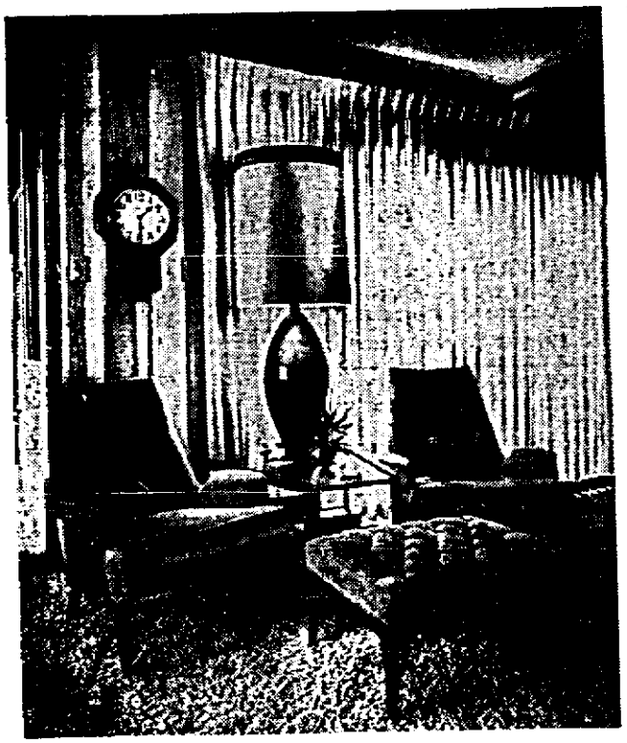

A pot-bellied little stove standing on specially built used brick pedestal is a unique bit of kitchen decor.

Of special interest in the window groupings at the left is a desk which was once the cabinet of an early-day console sewing machine. Above, furniture arrangement in living room is especially inviting for visiting. Carpet is thick wool turf.

Most used area in the home, perhaps excepting kitchen, the family room has this interesting grouping.

table, very old and decorative books, and other heirlooms.

THE KITCHEN is an Early American flower garden, that is to say, the decor is enhanced with flower displays in abundance. An interesting decoration in the kitchen is an old pot-bellied stove, black and very small in size, which rests on its own used brick pedestal. Nearby, is a comfortable rocking chair, conveniently close to a telephone. A dinette adjoins the kitchen on one side, a service porch on the other. The latter is as attractive as the large rooms, complete with flower arrangements.

The master bedroom is spacious, made even more so with a bay window. A tete-a-tete table and two chairs fit into the alcove. Blue is the accent color in the room. The second bedroom is now used as a den. Twin beds serve as large sofas which were indispensable when the room was used as a bedroom by a now-grown daughter, are very handy in the den.

The patio leads to a pool and rear garden. Shrubs and plants flourish in abundance.

Orange Tree Plant

One of many container-grown plants that can do double duty, indoors and out, is the orange tree plant. Select it in a sturdy clay pot about the height of the plant. Water enough to keep moist, but let dry out occasionally to let air reach the roots through the porous walls of the clay pot.

Sequoia of the Dinosaur Age

Earl Frothingham stands in front of his 40-foot Dawn redwood, a tree whose history goes back 100 million years.

By Irma McCall

WOULD YOU like to see a tree with ancestors that sheltered dinosaurs?

Pass up the palms, eucalyptus, and peppers, but stop at 4702 Village Road and on the north side of the front yard you will discover a Dawn redwood. The owner, retired forester Earl Frothingham, declares, "This sequoia is the prize of all my 60 different kinds of trees. A friend in Berkeley gave it to me in 1950 in a gallon can. Now it's at least 40 feet high.

"The Dawn redwood is unique, for its history goes back 100 million years. Scientists thought it had been extinct for 20 million years.

"BUT IN 1944 a Chinese forester working for his government discovered an enormous tree in a secluded valley in Szechaun. He had never seen one like it, so he took some needles and cones back to Nanking. An expert there was amazed! The foliage and cones were identical with fossil specimens of the Metasequoia which grew in the age of dinosaurs. Luckily peasants wanting land had never cut the forest in this hidden valley.

"Seedlings brought from China have done well in California."

When Frothingham retired in 1945 he wanted to find a satisfying hobby. He told his sister Frances, "I'm going to plant as great a variety of foliage on this lot as possible."

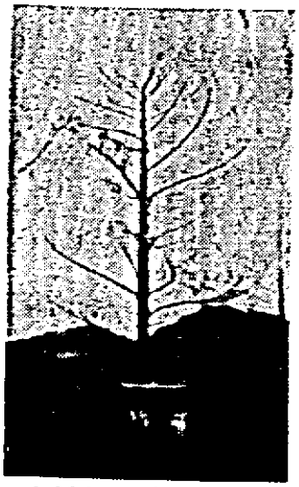

The 60 by 150-foot lot does not seem crowded, although 60 varieties of trees and numerous plants and flowers flourish there.

By appointment visitors may see his Elysian garden and forget freeway roar as they wander along tranquil paths curving through the greenery of the back yard. They may rest by a plot of peppermint geranium, gift of Julia Ellen Rogers, and dream they are in the tropics while munching sweet white sapote.

Plant Trees Now

In some places you may still be able to get fruit trees bare root. Check to see that the roots are in good condition, plump, not shriveled; prune off broken or scuffed ones before you plant.

If the bare-root season is over where you garden, you will find all the trees in cans or balled and burlapped at your California Association of Nurserymen shop and ready to set out.

A Metasequoia in China, where first one was discovered. Photos were in 1947.

4 REASONS WHY WILLBANKS SELLS CARPET FOR LESS!

1. When you buy 1000 to 5000 yards of a certain carpet you can drive a hard bargain with the mill — we save from 10% to 50% on these huge mill purchases — and pass them on to you!
2. We have only one location — a low overhead factory warehouse on Signal Hill.
3. No mood music, display windows or costly features. We put the glamour on your floor, not on ours.
4. The Willbanks Carpet Co. has a wonderful reputation for working close and doing beautiful work — in short, we always sell for less and insure you complete satisfaction on all our quality carpeting.

The Daughter of the Emperor

Sophia Loren, heading a cast that includes nine great stars in Samuel Bronston's "The Fall of the Roman Empire," portrays the daughter of the emperor, trapped in the struggle for survival of the Eternal City.

"The Fall of the Roman Empire" relives the drama and the grandeur of the world that was Rome.

There comes a time in the destiny of an empire when the first stones of a noble edifice begin to crumble. Samuel Bronston's "The Fall of the Roman Empire" tells the story of this crucial moment in history when the virtues and principles that made Rome great, typified by the Emperor Marcus Aurelius, were destroyed by his licentious and power-obsessed successor in the Second Century, A. D.

Bronston has again enlisted the services of director Anthony Mann and cinematographer Robert Krasker, the team responsible for his memorable "El Cid." Also part of the Bronston team once again are designers Colasanti and Moore, who have recreated in full scale and majesty the Roman Forum as it existed 1,800 years ago.

The pomp and pageantry of the day, the thrilling sweep of battles between Rome and its rebellious subjects, the elements of personal drama and a poignant love story are all realized with full impact in Ultra-Panavision and Technicolor on the wide screen.

Heading the roster of great stars is Sophia Loren in the moving role of Lucilla, daughter of the Emperor, with Stephen Boyd as Livius, gallant soldier and suitor. Alex Guinness is nobly cast as the wise Marcus Aurelius, with James Mason as his friend and philosopher, while Christopher Plummer portrays the infamous Commodus, heir to the Imperial throne.

Rounding out this impressive array of acting talent are Anthony Quayle, John Ireland, Mel Ferrer and Omar Sharif.

The story of "The Fall of the Roman Empire," embodying the conflicting forces of good and evil in a disordered world, is as valid today as it was in the time of ancient Rome, providing significant as well as enthralling screen entertainment.

Soup for Sunday Supper

Delicious, nutritious, Hearty Bean-Olive Soup is a good Sunday supper filler-upper.

By Mildred K. Flanary
Southland Magazine Home Economics Editor

ARE YOU looking for a Sunday evening "filler-inner"? Well, few other types of food have the "stick-to-the-ribs" quality inherent in Hearty Bean-Olive Soup.

You can make an entire meal of this nutritious and delicious mixture of white navy beans, ripe olives, onion, carrot, celery and parsley seasoned with bacon, salt pork and molasses.

Just before serving add milk and heat through to piping hot for one of the most filling soups you've ever savored. And don't forget, after the beans are cooked, mash some of them to give the soup desirable thickness.

Besides possessing popular flavor, ripe olives are noteworthy nutritionally. They contain pro-vitamin A, ascorbic acid (vitamin C), six B vitamins and essential minerals, including calcium and iron. And their fruit oil, which is readily digestible, provides much-needed food energy.

Hearty Bean-Olive Soup

1½ cups white navy beans
5 cups water
½ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon molasses
2 oz. Salt Pork, cubed
1 medium-size onion
3 slices bacon, diced
1 small carrot
1 stalk celery
3 sprigs parsley
1 cup ripe olives
2 cups milk

Place beans in large kettle. Add water, salt, molasses and salt pork. Chop onion and add half to beans. Cover, bring to boil and simmer 2½ to 3 hours, until beans are cooked. Fry bacon; add remaining onion and fry until tender and transparent. Finely dice carrot, celery and parsley (or cut coarsely and whir in blender with about 1 cup of bean mixture). Mash some beans with a spoon. Add onion, bacon, carrot, celery and parsley. Cut olives into large pieces; add to bean mixture. Simmer for 30 minutes. Add milk and heat through. Serve immediately. Makes 2 quarts soup.

Recipe of the Week

FOUR FRUITS flavor a bread recipe that wins $5 for Mrs. Cecil E. Shortridge, 12702 Monroe St., Garden Grove. The recipe:

Four Fruit Bread

2 cups sifted all-purpose flour
¾ cup beet sugar or cane
3 tsp. baking powder
½ tsp. salt
1 tsp. grated lemond rind
½ cup currants or raisins, chopped
½ cup cut-up dates
2 eggs beaten
3 tblsp. shortening—melted
1 cup mashed bananas

Sift together flour, sugar, baking powder and salt. Add lemon rind, currants and dates. Mix together lightly. Mix together eggs, melted shortening and mashed bananas. Add to dry ingredients all at once and stir just enough to blend well. Turn into greased 9½x5¼x2¾ loaf pan. Bake at 350° for 45 to 50 minutes. Yield: One loaf.

What's your favorite recipe? For each recipe published in this space, Southland will pay $5. Men are urged to submit their recipes along with the ladies. Send yours, with name and address to Recipe Contest Editor, Southland Magazine, 604 Pine Ave., Long Beach 12, Calif.

Low, sleek and efficient, this barbecue gives the chef an opportunity always to be in the midst of good times.

By Bill Meyerriecks

TIME soon for those outdoor barbecues again, and Sketchbook this week presents a unique idea to revamp and revive interest in back yard or patio barbecuing. It's an oriental style brick barbecue and the plan shows where every one of the 394 bricks sets down, both in illustrations and detailed instructions. You can't go wrong.

Designed in U-shape, the unit is about 18 inches high and covers about a 5-foot square. It is a complete unit of fire pit and serving tables—the chef can stay with the party!

The charcoal pit is one layer of brick deep in the center section. The sides, or tables, are redwood bolted to the underlying brick. Guests, six to eight, can be seated comfortably.

Or you can use the unit as a buffet to keep food handy and hot.

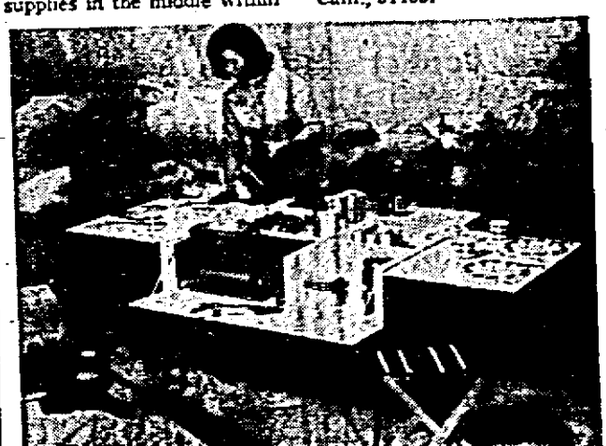

The Sketchbook plan shows an alternate for using an hibachi for barbecuing: an exact arrangement of bricks in the center section of the unit where the original type charcoal holder fits.

When ordering, specify Barbecue Plan S-154 and send 50 cents with name and address to Building Editor, Southland Magazine, 64 Pine Ave., Long Beach, Calif., 90812.

Build a Camp Kitchen

IF YOU ARE an outdoor lover and are looking forward to camping next summer, now is a good time to get into the swing by building the camp kitchen pictured below, a unit that will make meal preparation easy and will serve as camp food center. It has compartments for utensils, canned goods, food containers and camp stove. Top leaves open to make dining table space for as many as six persons, with food and supplies in the middle within everyone's reach. Handles on each end make carrying easy. Dimensions are, when folded, 28x39x9 inches. It fits easily into the car trunk.

The kitchen is easily constructed from a pattern, which also includes the "how to" of making the stools. To get it, specify Kitchen-Stool Pattern No. 336 and send $1 in currency, check or money order to Steve Ellingson, Pattern Dept., Southland Magazine, Box 2383, Van Nuys, Calif., 91409.

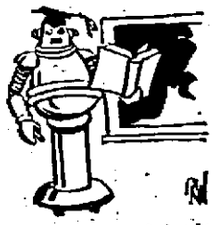

NBC's Bob Osborne and Lori Patrick enjoy outdoor kitchen.

HOW YOUR CHILD LEARNS

A Human Factor

By Howard E. Kent

QUESTION: There have been a lot of new theories and approaches introduced in recent years in our school systems—a faster rate of work, more emphasis on science and math, new ways of teaching algebra, experiments in television instruction. Students seem to adjust pretty well to the changes. But how about the teachers?

ANSWER: Teachers are human. Many of them resist change. The idea of television instruction, for example, raises fears of being replaced by the machine. Instead of accepting TV as a tool, many teachers receive it as an enemy.

As surely as students have feelings of inadequacy and insecurity on the first day of school, teachers feel inadequate and insecure when asked to change their habits and patterns of teaching.

The difficulties of educational progress are much the same as those of science, which has always had to fight ignorance and fear, not only among the public but in its own ranks.

QUESTION: Do the educational facilities of a community affect its economic development?

ANSWER: When deciding whether to locate in a community, most major companies these days inquire about the adequacy of the school system, the amount spent for education, and the number of high school and college graduates living there.

Gov. Terry Sanford of North Carolina said recently:

"I am convinced that the half a billion dollars invested in new plants in North Carolina in 1961 and 1962 could not and would not have been invested except for the support of education in our state."

Famous for its support of public education in modern times, California is today a mecca for Americans in search of better jobs and a progressive environment.

QUESTION: How much are we spending a year per pupil to send America's children to grade and high school?

ANSWER: Cost per pupil on the basis of average daily attendance is $155.

Violas Plentiful, In Prime Now

Violas are plentiful and in their prime in the nurseries as seedlings now. They differ from pansies only in being all of a color (self-color the nurserymen say), but this gives us a chance to "paint" our garden with a single color if we want to. A solid edging of yellow violas or the clear blue violas is handsome indeed. They do want moisture and protection from snails and slugs.

MEDICINE AND YOU

New Drug May Aid Virus Fight

By Ben Zinser
Southland Magazine Medical-Science Writer

A NEW DRUG now used mainly to counter virus infections in the eye may prove to be of value in the treatment of certain systemic virus infections, Yale University researchers believe.

The drug is idoxuridine.

One scientist, Dr. Paul Calabresi, thinks idoxuridine may be effective against smallpox and other viruses that have a core of DNA (deoxyribonucleic acid).

Viruses are microscopic particles with a protein overcoat and a core of either DNA or RNA (ribonucleic acid). Because of idoxuridine's mode of action, it would not be effective against RNA-type viruses. However, there are many significant DNA viruses, such as smallpox, herpes, chickenpox, some type of encephalitis and some rare but usually fatal tropical diseases.

Science has long been searching for an effective antiviral drug.

AN ACCIDENT is most apt to happen to a child between 3 and 6 p. m. on a Saturday, according to research conducted by Children's Hospital Medical Center in Boston. The Boston study discloses that hunger or fatigue, particularly during the hour before a scheduled meal, predisposes to accident.

THE TECHNIQUE of orophonics—breathing into a telephone—can be an aid in the diagnosis of respiratory ailments, four Evanston, Ill., doctors report.

The doctors have tape-recorded 50 cases of normal breathing and breathing heard in colds, asthma, bronchiolitis, pneumonia, infectious croup, whooping cough and other disorders. They also recorded the breathing of premature infants with respiratory stress and those with normal breathing.

These tapes were played over a telephone for evaluation.

In the past two years the doctors have listened to the telephone breathing of 232 patients in a study to test the effectiveness of this diagnostic aid.

The study is reported in the American Journal of Diseases of Children.

LARGE DOSES of prednisone, a cortisone-like drug, benefited nine patients with multiple sclerosis, reports an Emory University physician.

All patients began to improve within two to four days, reports Dr. R. F. Kibler. No patient relapsed less than two months after the drug was stopped.

The medication was administered after flareups of the disease had caused moderate to severe weakness in two or more extremities.

The report was made to a medical meeting jointly sponsored by the New York Academy of Sciences and the National Multiple Sclerosis Society.

A NEW ANTIBIOTIC, nalidixic acid, is proving effective against a wide variety of micro-organisms that cause urinary tract infections, according to a report in British Medical Journal. The new drug will be known as Negram when it becomes available for general use.

GIVING THE new drug Trasylol both before and after certain types of surgery may prevent fatal pancreatic inflammation, new research suggests.

Inflammation of the pancreas is not uncommon following surgery of the pancreas or the biliary tract, three researchers note in the AMA Journal. However, experiments with animals indicate that dosage with Trasylol before and after surgery may prevent development of postoperative pancreatitis.

AFTER 32 YEARS' experience of using cadaver blood for transfusions, a Soviet scientist says transfusion complications are fewer than when live-donor blood is used.

Dr. B. A. Petrov of the Sklifosovsky Institute, in a report in Medical World News, a doctors' news magazine, says the best cadaver blood is that extracted from subjects who have died of sudden heart standstill (cardiac arrest). Reason: This blood rarely clots and can be stored without adding anticlotting substances.

Shutterbug Tip

Whether you're shooting movies or still pictures, learn to be "background conscious." As you compose your subject in the camera viewfinder, be aware of distracting items to the rear, such as telephone wires, trees, buildings, or other features that can only detract from the over-all effect of the picture. An all too typical example found in many snapshots is a telephone pole seemingly growing out of a person's head. Learning to watch out for such eyesores and eliminating them by a change in camera angle or subject position will go a long way toward improving your pictures.

Who'd Succeed the President?

By Vera Williams
Southland Magazine Book Editor

WHAT happens when a President is incapacitated for a long period and unable to serve? Who succeeds him and under what circumstances?

These questions are paramount in the minds of many Americans as they realize that an aging speaker of the house and an aged president pro tem of the Senate are one and two heartbeats, respectively, from the White House.

The dark 17 months from the fall of 1919 until March 1921 when President Woodrow Wilson, a broken shell of a man, was so ill that the executive branch of the government had little or no leadership are recaptured in "WHEN THE CHEERING STOPPED" by Gene Smith (Morrow, $5.95.)

Dedicated to the cause of the League of Nations, Wilson set out on a national tour in late 1919 to "sell" the League to the American public in order to win U. S. Senate approval of it. He was stricken on the trip. Succeeding attacks of cerebral thrombosis left him half paralyzed.

His wife, his physician and his secretary sealed him off from the world. Mrs. Wilson was accused of "petticoat rule" but Smith thinks she did only what a devoted wife would do—she protected her husband from worries and cares.

What about the government?

One of the points Smith brings up is that the sick man obdurately refused to consider reservations which Sen. Henry Cabot Lodge insisted upon for League ratification.

If Wilson had been in even fair health, would he have yielded? If he had, would the Senate have ratified the League? If the Senate had, would the League have survived as a potent force for world peace? Would that have changed the history of the world?

They're good questions, in 1964.

PROBABLY because we'd all like to run away from something, a story about little runaways has a tender appeal. "WHERE DO GOLDFISH GO?" (Crown $3.95), by France's young novelist Claude Cattaert, has just such appeal. It's a story that takes one little girl, Valerie, and one little boy, Pitou, shakes them well, and produces a medicine good for whatever ails you.

Pitou is the concierge's son, a ragamuffin. Valerie, on the other hand, has an English governess (that used to be THE status mark for little French girls), a tutor of her own, and devoted parents. Valerie has a goldfish all her own, and watching the poor fish in its endless and futile circling of the bowl, Valerie wants to set it free. But non, little girls must not free little goldfish, and come to think of it, the number of things little girls mustn't do far outnumber the things allowed. So Valerie and Pitou run away; object number one is to free all the goldfish in Paris.

Their adventures, laughable and poignant at the same time, make a wonderful new book about childhood.

Twenty-seven leading scientists of the leading scientists of the Western World engaged in a symposium in London recently to consider the responsibility of medical and biological research to cope with the advent of nuclear power and other new potentialities for destruction.

Their papers, arguments, rebuttals and witticisms were edited by Gordon Wolstenholme, director of the Ciba Foundation, sponsor of the conference, and published as "MAN AND HIS FUTURE" (Little, Brown, $6).

Commentary by Sir Julian Huxley on evolutionary dangers and possible solutions launches the forum, appropriately enough. J. B. S. Haldane, the celebrated authority on genetics and biometrics, discusses the biological possibilities of the human species in the next 10,000 years, and anthropologist Carleton S. Coon explores growth and development of social groups.

Guarding the interests of religion and the world of letters is Rev. H. C. Trowell, pediatrics specialist in the Colonial Medical Services and ordained priest in the Anglican Church.

Here, indeed, is genius to lead humanity to a happier and healthier world.

PEPE ROMERO, Mexico City's most popular English-language newspaper columnist, has written a new novel, "A MILLION PESOS!" centering around Mexico's weekly National Lottery (Doubleday, $3.95).

A Monument to Community Effort

Activities of the Jewish community in Long Beach now center in this fine building, a three-quarter-million-dollar project. Organization's modest start is recalled.

By Caroline Coleman

IN 1948, some 700 Jewish families lived in Long Beach.

Needing the cohesion of a strong community effort, they formed the Jewish Community Federation, with Irving Schneider as president.

A Jewish Community Center was opened in an apartment at Third Street and Lime Avenue.

There now are 3,000 Jewish families in Long Beach, Lakewood, Rossmoor, Seal Beach and Signal Hill.

FOCAL POINT still is the Jewish Comfunity Center, but that no longer is an apartment on Lime Avenue. It is a fine, three-quarter million dollar building at 2601 Grand Ave. opened in 1960. Approximately 3,400 people belong to the Center, which has the unique policy that it is families, and not individuals who join, unless the individuals are single.

The Community Center offers an informal educational, cultural and athletic program geared to Jews of all ages. It has an Olympic-sized, 75 by 40 foot swimming pool and patio. There are seven meeting rooms for club sessions, classes, dances (round, square and what-have-you?), lectures, concerts, plays. There is a library, workout room, outdoor basketball courts, etc. There are programs for senior citizens, the middle-aged, the young marrieds, college folk, teens, tweens (between grade school and high school), and little folks.

IN THE SUMMMER, the Center offers a day camp with crafts and trips to the beach and parks. In the winter, youngsters are taken on snow trips to the mountains.

Couples, children, in-laws and parents are counseled by the Jewish Family Service, housed in the Community Center.

Also the Center houses the Jewish Community Federation, as well as the Federation News, a bi-weekly newspaper, of which Sidney Hartmann has been editor since 1947.

Morton J. Gaba is executive director and Judge Max Z. Wisot, president of the Jewish Community Federation.

EMANUEL GYLER is president of the Center, of which Gerald Bubis is executive director. Murray Greenwood is president of the Jewish Family Service, of which Bernard Miran is executive director.

Dr. Julius Robbins is chairman of the Federation Jewish Education Committee, which among other projects directs the Central Hebrew High School on Sunday mornings in the Community Center.

Gene Lentzner is chairman of the federation community relations committee, which has for its main project the development of sound intergroup relations and the protection of civil rights and liberties.

THE JEWISH Community Federation and its agencies and activities have many new and exciting projects on the drawing boards. The Jewish Community Center is considering plans for the development of country camping for children and adults and more intensive programming particularly in the cultural area. In addition plans are afoot for the development of a health club and auditorium that will provide additional recreational resources for the community.

The Jewish Family Service would like to expand its counseling program in the area of group counseling and develop placement services for children in need of foster care.

The Jewish Community Federation is establishing a Free Loan program to provide sums of money, interest free, for those who may need it for special purposes such as medical emergencies, schooling or small business opportunities.

Uncle Sam's 'Instant Navy'

Ammunition and foodstuff are also in ready reserve for fast action when emergency calls up the crews.

Photos by Sk a Shuman

Forty warships and 12,000 men, including ready gun crews such as this, can be added to the U. S. Navy in almost instant fashion from ranks of the 4-hour stand-by reserve.

By Terri Sattori

A TELEPHONE rings in the early hours of morning and a sleepy civilian Jones, college student, is abruptly jolted into an alert Seaman Jones, crew member of an antisubmarine warfare detachment of the United States Navy Selected Reserve.

The conversation is short, one sided and to the point.

"Lt. Wallace here. The President has just declared a national emergency. You are ordered to report to your ship within the next four hours. You are to discuss this with no one. You may tell your wife or parents that you have been recalled to the ship nothing else. Is this clear?"

There is nothing else to say but—

"Yes sir!"

AND ANOTHER crew member of an antisubmarine warfare detachment of the United States Navy Selected Reserve is on the way.

Admittedly, this would be a shock for Tom Jones, Seaman, USNR. Seaman Jones is in Junior College. His wife works at a downtown department store, and his mother-in-law babysits Tom Jr. while Tom finishes his college education.

Indeed, this would be disturbing to all concerned. All the way from Tom Jones to Capt. Smith, a successful lawyer who was to have presented a case at 9 a.m. tomorrow.

This is the risk men of the Selected Ready Reserve units take when they enlist. Once they are inducted into the program, the latest devised by the Navy to provide increased forces and the capability of immediate response to initial hostilities from any enemy, they are placed on a four-hour standby.

THEY DRILL one weekend a month aboard a commissioned reserve ship on which they are full fledged crew members. Usually during one of these sessions, the ships put to sea and the men are required to handle equipment and exercise at general quarters. After three years in these units, they are obliged to spend two years in the regular Navy.

There are many questions that may be asked as to why a man would choose this particular way of discharging his military obligation and the answers would vary greatly.

But the question as to why the Navy initiated this program in the first place was answered as recently as the 1961 Berlin crisis which witnessed the activation of eight ships from the West Coast. Long Beach contributed three ships and 350 men to this endeavor. The destroyer USS Colahan, and two destroyer escorts the USS Vammen and USS Marsh, all permanently based in Long Beach, served an extended tour which lasted nine months in the trouble riddled southeast Asian area.

HOW EFFECTIVE are these ships manned by the so-called "Weekend Warriors," who constitute from 70 to 75 per cent of their crews? The answer to that lies in their performance records.

All three ships' performances equalled or in the case of the Vammen, excelled the regular units with which they associated.

The Vammen, presently commanded by Cmdr. Michael Cullen, USNR, who at that time served as the ship's executive officer, is the only ship in naval history to successfully rout and "sink" three submarines in three separate exercises, which were carried out during the 1961 recall. This amazing feat ultimately led to the ship's being awarded the coveted Samuel B. Roberts trophy, an award given in recognition to the outstanding Group II Destroyer Escort of the Pacific. The Vammen was also one of the first ships of the Navy to participate in vertical assault maneuvers which landed Marines via helicopter on the coast of Thailand. This was history's first vertical envelopment.

THE VAMMEN'S record is only one of the outstanding performances by reserve ships, but it offers substantive proof for the Navy's contention that it can have a standby complement that is ready and able to provide realistic and decisive support to the regular Navy in time of national emergency.

Today, if any of these ships were suddenly called to ac-

'Guardian of Nobles'

By Eleanor Avery Price

ONLY rarely do we see the wonderful large dog, the Kuvasz, and possibly we wouldn't recognize him if we did, for he bears a resemblance to the Great Pyrenes. Altogether there are about 175 of these in America, and most of them are in the East.

The color of the Kuvasz is pure white. As the dog grows senile, his coat may take on an ivory sheen. He is strong boned, well shaped, and well muscled. He stands from 25 inches to 29 inches at the shoulder when full grown.

During World War II, Germany and Hungary lost many fine kennels of this breed, yet fanciers have turned to these countries as well as Canada for good stock.

THERE are several stories as to the origin of the Kuvasz. Most likely his ancestors came from Tibet and from there went into Russia and on into Central Europe from the Russian Steppes, carried by the Huns. Noblemen of Hungary were the first to realize what fine qualities the dog had, and so they bred them seriously. They gave him his name which means "guardian of nobles." It is said that King Matthias I, 1458-1490, depended on Kuvaszok as guards as well as companions for hunting deer, bear, and wild boar. He is supposed to have owned thousands of these dogs and only parted with them to impress other nobles and dignitaries.

After the reign of King Matthias I, the dogs became widely distributed and found popular use as plains sheepdogs to defend livestock from wild animals.

In the home the Kuvasz loves children, can be trained for all kinds of work including guiding the blind.

LAST week we mentioned the fact that the German shepherd is continuing his great rise in popularity. Please, this does not mean that everyone who has a German shepherd should try to raise puppies. Remember what happened to this fine dog after Rin Tin Tin? There were so many haphazard breedings that the dog suffered a great decline, bad tempered dogs appeared, and the problem of hip dysplasia was magnified ten-fold. Veterinarians say the dog they dread most to see is an unsound German shepherd. So, bad ones are still with us.

HARBOR LITE Dog Obedience Club will graduate a novice class at 7 p.m. Wednesday at Peck Park, San Pedro.

Climaxing a nine-week training period, the handlers will be awarded trophies. Graduation certificates will also be awarded to all handlers.

Judging the graduation will be Mrs. Lynne Farley of Torrance and Steve Molot of Los Angeles.

Harbor Lite Dog Obedience Club will be open for registration of two new novice classes April 4 at 2 p.m. and April 8 at 7 p.m. at Peck Park, 560 N. Western Ave., San Pedro. The public is invited.

Large and handsome, the Kuvasz is a rare animal in this area but rated as a fine, versatile dog.

Dogs need no pedigree to enter class. Small dogs should be at least four months old, and larger dogs should be at least three months old. It is common sense that it is easier to train a pup obedience when he is young than to let him acquire bad habits. It takes much longer to train an older dog than it does to train a young one.

'Instant Navy'

tive duty, they could be at sea within six hours after notification by the President. They stand, already armed to capacity. Foodstuffs already have been requisitioned and are stored on the Naval Base waiting for that "time." The only thing lacking is the men who carry with them at all times their mobilization orders, thereby cutting red tape to a minimum. These cards also give the men priority on all available transportation so they can get to their ships as fast as possible.

This is impressive when it is realized that nationally, the Navy's standing attack force could be bolstered by 40 warships and 12,000 men within a matter of hours.

THE MEN who serve in the program come from all walks of life. Many of the men are college or senior high school students who want to be assured of a three-year deferment in order to finish college or establish themselves in their civilian roles.

The remainder are men who have served in the regular Navy and re-enlist in the reserve program to acquire 20 years service time and its benefits. No matter what the reason for belonging, the importance is that these men are willing to sacrifice a certain amount of security to provide our nation's defenses with a relatively inexpensive combat ready naval establishment.

In the words of Winston Churchill, "These men are twice citizens."

Azaleas Can Be Problem Plants

By Joe Littlefield

AZALEAS are among problem plants of the gardening world, often failing to respond to the best of the gardener's care. Here is some information that may turn failure into success for some whose enthusiasm for azaleas far exceeds their results in growing them.

Azaleas in the ground that are sickly looking should be checked to make certain the planting medium around the root ball is firm. If you can poke your fingers out of sight below the surrounding ground level, the material is too loose! Firm thoroughly, and add more planting material, then firm well to level of the surrounding garden soil. This firmness around root ball area, holds water longer so that roots get enough moisture, and also keeps fertilizer grains from leaching down below the root area.

THE MAJORITY of wholesale azalea growers agree that azaleas should be planted in peat moss, preferably in sphagnum type or a very fine kind. The peat moss should be pre-moistened. An easy way to know whether it is of right moisture content for planting is to squeeze a handfull. If few drops drip out, this is about right.

First step to set out a plant is to dunk the pot into a pail or tub of water, the water an inch or two above top of pot. Plant should be taken out when bubbling of water stops. Now you're sure the ball of roots is thoroughly soaked.

Hole for the plant should be two or three times wider and no more than two to four inches deeper than the root ball.

No drainage hole is necessary if the soil is well drained silt or sand. Heavy, hard packed soil needs drainage. Some gardeners have found that a three-inch bore two to three feet deep down from bottom of plant hole and filled with pea size gravel provides the necessary drainage.

The plant is taken out of the pot, the root ball is scored with the point of a nail or the sharp edge of a piece of broken pot to break the tight mass of roots that form a glazed condition. This helps roots get a faster start in the new medium. If the root ball is loose, then no scoring is necessary.

PLANTING azaleas in peat moss requires patient attention to the job at hand. Peat should be packed down repeatedly until it forms a mass as solid as that of the baled moss — in other words, but firm! Water and plant food will then be held for better absorption by the roots.

There are three kinds of azaleas, evergreens for sun, shade lovers and deciduous.

The sun loving kind grow in lots of sun, excepting in the desert, yet grow quite quite well in considerable shade. The shade loving kinds grow in shade, yet tolerate about three hours of sun daily, probably would grow in desert areas where it isn't too cold. Neither sun nor shade types stand cold mountain winters.

The deciduous type in colors of white, yellow, pink and orange, grow in cold areas, and grow well here.

For some gardeners, the azalea is a problem to grow; for others, not so. See article for some helpful ideas.

Tips on Gardening

Garden tips for the week . . . Loosen soil around geraniums, pelargoniums and fuchsias that should have been pruned back by now. Start watering and feeding as new growth shows.

Feeding camellias is a post-bloom item. Liquid fish, an acid-type fertilizer, or one of the balanced commercial fertilizers and iron chelates are all used with success.

Why not try gardenias in a warm, protected spot? The big kind, whose blooms you see the florist selling, is Gardenia jasmincides and is fairly hardy. However, its smaller cousin, Gardenia jasminoides var. radicans, with smaller but equally fragrant flowers, will take more of a beating and come up laughing.

Check now with your C.A.N. nurseryman on crabgrass control. Don't wait. Get into action now before seeds germinate.

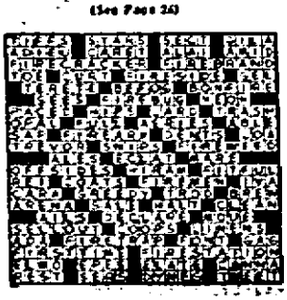

Do not delay planting your tuberous-rooted begonias. They're just too beautiful to forget—once you've planted them.

Those bare-root trees and roses which you purchased and planted earlier will demand some attention now that foliage is starting to show.

Feeder roots have started and the plants will now accept light fertilization. If you have planted trees in a lawn area you will have to be careful not to over water as they are getting some moisture from normal lawn watering. However, as the trees grow, you will have to remember to water deeper as the roots go deeper. Many tools are available at garden shops to aid in deeper watering. There is a way however to help in depth watering and fertilizing in harder soils.

A product especially for this purpose is now available at your nursery that contains a 16-4-2 fertilizer value plus chelates and trace minerals combined with a penetrating agent. Regular applications of this material should overcome any hard soil problems around new plantings. Insects often destroy tender foliage on new trees before the tree gets a good start. A good early season spray is needed.

The Lure of Surfing

until it's too late."

Surfing magazines, too, are trying to teach the wild young men. "Don't show up at the airport (going to Hawaii) looking like a bum," advises one. The author said he got dressed up and the airline agent said, "You look so respectable I won't charge you for your excess baggage."

ANOTHER helpful hint in a surfing magazine: "Stuff your surfboard into a sleeping bag when going to Hawaii so you'll be sure to have some place to stay."

Another: "Macaroni and Kool-Aid are cheap in the Islands, too," which might have been the most useful piece of information on all of the 108 pages.

As you can see, this is the sport's reconstruction period.

There are dozens of surfing beaches in Southern California which lure the golden girls and the browned boys the year around. Even now there are crowds of them on weekends. Hundreds of them flock to Huntington Beach in autos that protrude the six-foot-long slices of plastic they'll use to defy nature.

Next time take a closer look. Mostly, they're just ordinary kids from down the block. No, maybe a little bit braver than ordinary kids. Maybe a bit more cocky than the average kids, for you have to be.

And they're not all kids, either. Respected businessmen surf. Movie actors surf. Professional athletes surf. People, just people, surf.

These are the reconstruction days. They're getting the scurf out of the surf.

Camera Guild

Color contests in 35 mm slides and stereo will occupy Long Beach Camera Guild meeting at 7:45 p.m. Wednesday in Los Altos Library. A guild member, Floyd Williamson, recently won a stereo award presented by the Photographic Society of America.

Your Name

early Scotch phrase "Forseath," a beautiful description meaning "at the woodland pool." The Forsyth coat-of-arms is a silver shield emblazoned with a red, scalloped-edge chevron placed between three blue, gold-crowned griffins. The clan motto "Instaurator ruinae" deciphers from Latin as "Rebirth out of ruins." Robert Forsythe was a south Pennsylvania land owner in 1781.

DEAR MISS RULE: Would you explain DENNING.—A.D., Long Beach.

A.D.: DENNING is traced to the old Saxon English syllables "Den-Ing" translated as "home or place of the Danish family." This refers to ancestors living at a Danish settlement on England's east coast. Denning also had an Irish source, the Gaelic clan name O'Duinnin meaning "sons of the young, brown-haired one." Irish Dennings were from southwest Cork and were hereditary historians for the MacCarthys.

Herbs Are the Hardy Ones

THERE ARE distinct advantages to growing herbs.

First and foremost, very few of them demand good soil. In fact most thrive in average to poor soil. This is an advantage to the gardener who does not wish to replace his soil.

Next, a wide variety of herbs may be grown in a small area. This will delight many a gardener with a small yard who is looking for something living to create an interesting picture.

And, not only will a hot, sunny place be the perfect spot for a good many herbs, but just think of all the delightful seasonings you will have for your food if you grow herbs.

If you fear that some herbs may become invasive, one good way to confine these is to set each plant in a hollow building tile sunk in the soil.

MILES ARNOLD

An Easter Egg Tree

WITH SPRING bursting into life on trees and flower beds all around us, Easter Sunday is a perfect day for a jaunt into the Southern California countryside.

And if you should grow hungry while jaunting, Arnold's Farm House in Buena Park will be a marvelous place to stop for Easter dinner. Located at 6601 Manchester Blvd., adjacent to the Santa Ana Freeway, the Farm House is an extremely large serve-yourself restaurant with an atmosphere that recaptures much of the spirit of country dining. Owner Miles Arnold and his staff have added numerous decorative touches for Easter, including a manzanita "tree" hung with sequined eggs. Stuffed toy animals are displayed throughout the dining room.

The special Easter menu at Arnold's, which will be served from 11:30 a.m. to 8:30 p.m., will include many fresh entrees famed for their rich flavors and aromas. Topping the list will be splendid Easter ham with pineapple sauce, served for $1.95 on the dinner which includes three salads selected from 20 varieties on display; choice of two vegetables, hot rolls and butter and beverage. Other entrees on the dinner will include roast leg of spring lamb with mint jelly, $2.15; eastern round of beef, $2.15; baked breast of chicken Hawaiian with pineapple, shaved almonds and coconut, $2.25; roast prime rib of beef au jus, $2.75; Farm House fried chicken, $2.25, and potted Swiss steak, $2.10.

Skilled, courteous waitresses help the guests with their trays, escort them to their booths, serve the rolls and a la carte desserts and keep their cups filled with delicious coffee.

Easter Rabbit Goes to Sea

CY, A MARINELAND SEA LION, KISSES "BUNNY" DONNA DOUGLAS OF "HILLBILLIES" IN A WHALE OF AN EXHIBITION

By BERT RESNIK
TV and Radio Editor

THERE'S GOING to be a whale of a special on TV this Easter Sunday. It originates, of course, from Marineland.

"The Beverly Hillbillies" will be featured in the hour production airing 7 p.m. on channel 2.

Co-starred will be the bottlenose dolphins, whales and sea lions of Marineland who have been on camera so frequently they wonder why they haven't been contacted by the Screen Actors Guild.

In a two-year period, for example, Marineland was the center of attraction for 67 different television programs, according to William F. Monahan, vice president and general manager.

There was almost more TV production there than in Hollywood.

Marineland's sea life, bunch of hams, have learned to play it cool. There's almost something fishy about the way they check the TV monitors while splashing through their paces.

THERE IS JUST ONE THING they refuse to tolerate—commercials.

Unlike you and me, they can really do something.

About 25 members of Cub Scout Pack 216, San Pedro, led by Cubmaster Nick Maricich, will be seen in the audience with "The Beverly Hillbillies" during "Marineland Carnival" at 7 p.m. today, channel 2.

ADVERTISING MANAGER OFFERS

New View on Movie Commercials

By BERT RESNIK

In the screening room of the television station, the advertising manager of the manufacturing firm sat and squirmed.

The movie, "Goodbye Mr. Chips," was excellent and that was the principal reason his company had purchased it for television airing.

His job right now—it was November of 1962—was to check and see that the commercials were inserted correctly before the movie went on the air in a few weeks.

As Devid Seigel, vice president in charge of advertising for Riviera Manufacturing Co., sat and squirmed, he felt something akin to treason.

For what instigated the squirming, what irritated him, was the commercials—his commercials.

Not that the content was bad—there were just too many of them.

HE TRIED CONCENTRATING again on the movie and found himself engrossed in the drama.

Greer Garson was dying in an acting masterpiece that almost brought tears to Seigel's eyes.

Then, suddenly, like the sound of a fire alarm, another commercial was clanged onto the screen.

Greer Garson couldn't die in peace.

"Stop the camera," shouted Seigel, or words to that effect.

The lights came on in the screening room and the television station crew stared at him.

"What do you say we show the public this movie without interruptions by commercials?" asked Seigel.

They looked at him as if he were crazy. But, after all, it was his company's movie and if he wanted to throw away their money, that was his business.

And the company's business.

SEIGEL TOOK HIS IDEA to the company's other executives.

Like the television station crew, they looked at him as if he had lost his mental marbles.

"To put it mildly," said Seigel, "there was great apprehension."

They told him what he had heard many times before—the more commercials, the more business. It all worked on percentage.

Seigel didn't agree.

"The fewer commercials, the more business and the better the image," said he.

And he said it again and again and again.

The other executives finally agreed to try it "one time."

When "Goodbye Mr. Chips" went on the air, it was preceded by about a 3-minute commercial and followed by one the same length.

There was an occasional crawler, like a silent news bulletin, that quietly passed across the bottom part of the screen. It read: "Presented by Riviera Convertible Sofas."

IT WAS A 2-HOUR, 40-MINUTE MOVIE. In a movie of that length, there normally are about 35 minutes of commercials. Riviera, at Seigel's insistence, had settled for six advertising minutes.

Within 10 days the company received 3,000 letters and postcards. In essence, each piece of mail said the same thing:

"It's a pleasure to go into your living room and see a movie instead of commercials flanked by chopped bits of movies."

The "one time" try became company policy. The firm, for example, is sponsoring four movies uninterrupted by commercials today.

It still purchases spot announcements in other TV productions, but most of the company's video budget is allocated for buying outright movies to air without interfering advertisements.

There's one other thing. Under the new policy, Riviera's business has been booming.

Critic Claims Video Doesn't Learn from Own Lesson of 'Their Greatest Achievement'

By RICK DU BROW
United Press International

HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—After the significant television coverage of President Kennedy's assassination, several discerning writers took note of a devastating fact:

That, for the networks to achieve their peak performance, they had to abandon (except for news) virtually every aspect of broadcasting identified with their day-to-day product, not only in the obvious content demand, but in tone, attitude and respect for human intelligence.

As the four historic days lengthen into months the networks indicate that this lesson of their greatest achievement will continue to have little or no effect on them.

It is doubtful that a more ironic or forceful indictment could be prepared for those who do not swallow, wide-eyed, testimony of the medium's growth.

NEXT season's entertainment schedule will continue to be more of the same. And though this is to be expected, there is also no indication that there will be any significant increase in prime-time, regularly-scheduled public affairs programming.

The new human dimension the Kennedy coverage gave television will not have any experimental or special impact.

The public affairs people are the best in television; yet, with all their excellent work, even they give the impression too often that they merely let events determine their major coverage rather than using their wonderful, incomparable tool — television — to go out and create works of immediacy and humanity that become major events in themselves.

• • • •

AN EXAMPLE of this type of cerativity was last year's three-hour prime-time NBC-TV study of the desegregation situation, which, though bulky in spots and perhaps overlong, was an immense idea in the right direction.

Likewise, there was CBS-TV's live, transoceanic "Town Meeting of the World" via satellite.

The important thing is that the supreme function of television is to acquaint members of the human race with each other.

THE KEYMER TWINS are an entrant—that's right, one entry—in the Miss Los Angeles County Pageant to be televised 8:30 p. m. Tuesday, channel 13. Checking their rule book, judges found it was permissible for 17-year-old Melody and Marilyn of San Gabriel to compete as one contestant. Sound like double-talk?

Sports Today

CHALLENGE GOLF, 12 noon, in color, ch. 7, has Dave Ragan and Joe Campbell meeting Palmer and Player.

BASEBALL, 1 p.m., in color, ch. 5, from Palm Springs, has the L.A. Angels meeting the Boston Red Sox.

SPORTS SPECTACULAR, 2:30 p.m., ch. 2, has tapes of the Salton Sea 500, world's richest motorboat race, the world's pentathlon championships (Bern, Switzerland), and Los Charros, riding and roping competition (Mexico City).

NCAA SWIM Championships, 3:30 p.m., ch. 9, with tapes of last week's contest at Yale.

WONDERFUL WORLD of Golf, 4 p.m., in color, ch. 4 (also 2:30 p.m., ch. 10), has a repeat match between Sam Snead and Jack Nicklaus at Pebble Beach to wind up the series for the season.

IX WINTER OLYMPICS, 5 p.m., ch. 7, offers hour-long taped highlights of events at Innsbruck, including events in which Jean Saubert, Jim Heuga, Bill Kidd and Terry McDermott won medals for U.S.

SPECIAL

IMPRESSIONS: Vincent Price hosts a color tour of "Masterworks of Mexican Art," more than 2,000 artifacts recently at the L.A County Museum, at 4:30 p.m., ch. 9. Films will be presented to President Mateos of Mexico.

MARINELAND CARNIVAL—"Hillbillies" stars Irene Ryan, Donna Douglas and Max Baer join the Smothers Brothers, Cliff Norton, underwater swimmer Zale Parry, the Les Brown Orchestra and assorted "sea critters" in an hour-long watery spectacular at 7 p.m., ch. 2. Taped on location at Marineland, show even adds the voice of Herb Vigran so that walruses Wally and Willy can chat with Miss Ryan. Both Baer and Miss Douglas turned down doubles for their water scenes.

1964—America's power, potential and problems, with emphasis on the challenges of nuclear arms, education, old age, automation and leisure, are examined at 7:30 p.m., in color, ch. 7, during the fourth and final documentary in John H. Secondari's award-winning "Sage of the Western Man" series. Cameras capture Americans at play at Miami Beach and L.A., at work in Detroit, launching space vehicles at Cape Kennedy, gambling in Las Vegas and mourning in Dallas.

AMERICAN COMMUNISM—Richard Baschart narrates David L. Wolper's documentary of the nature of our Communist enemy at 8:30 p.m., ch. 11. Sen. Joe McCarthy, Alger Hiss, the Rosenbergs, Gus Hall and Earl Browder are recalled as we view the history of the Communist Party in the U.S., its infiltration techniques and the ambiguous tactics of its protagonists.

BREAKTHROUGH: Medicine—Shape of the Future—John Chancellor is reporter for a graphic look at the medicine and surgery of tomorrow at 10 p.m., ch. 4. The Lou Hazam-produced hour watches a kidney transplant, curing ulcers by freezing, the use of glue in skin grafts, an implant of a plastic cornea and the use of electronic devices.

DIRECTION '64, 2 p.m., ch. 7, offers a new interpretation and hour-long production of "Revelation," Earl Wild's Easter oratorio based on St. John the Divine's Book of Revelations, adapted in three parts and featuring four operatic soloists, a choir of 20 voices and the ABC Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Wild. A special filmed message from Pope Paul VI winds up the hour.

'Hazel' Leads Dog's Life in Don's Home

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—Don DeFore, the harried householder of television's "Hazel" series, has a bigger home, a larger family and more pets than he does in the show. But he doesn't have a maid to compare with Hazel.

In fact, Don and his family have no "live-in" help at all.

The only Hazel in the DeFore menage is a tiny Australian Silkie terrier by that name.

Off-screen and on, DeFore is the prototype of the American family man. He resembles the ad man's conception of the businessman debarking from a commuter train, attache case in hand, to greet his wife in the station wagon.

But that isn't the way it works in real life.

• • • •

DON DRIVES the 10 miles from the studio to his Mandeville Canyon home in a new automobile, courtesy of his sponsor (Ford).

True, there's a station wagon in the driveway, but it was purchased by the actor. And the house is such that George Baxter — DeFore's television character—couldn't begin to afford it.

A mansion by any standards, the home includes five bedrooms and five baths. DeFore had it built 18 years ago in what he calls a combination New England-Iowa farm house style. It's red with white trim and a shale roof. It nestles cozily on two acres of prime suburbia with a free-form swimming pool and a little red barn with attached silo which doubles as guest house and pool house.

The motif is carried throughout the interior, with early American decor and a scattering of antiques.

• • • •

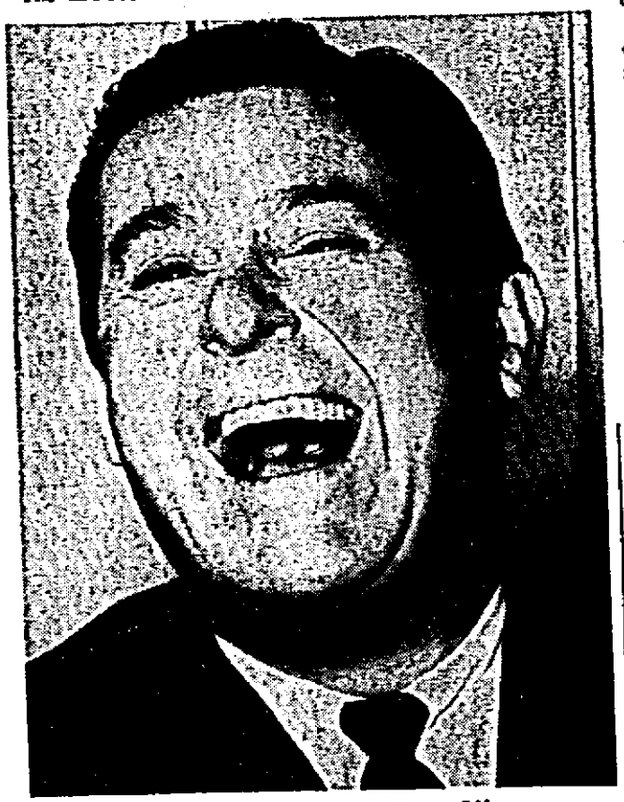

MUCH OF the furniture was turned out by Papa DeFore in his workshop. Woodworking was his hobby until three weeks after the "Hazel" show made its debut. A power saw almost lopped off one of his fingers so Don has spent less time playing cabinetmaker.

Don is particularly proud of his den. Everything in it relates to railroad lore. His father was a railroad engineer.

The coffee table is made up of old railroad ties fastened to a length of track. It took the actor a year to bleach the ties and bolt them together.

• • • •

THE DeFore clan is a large one. The children are Penny, 19; David, 18; Dawn, 15; Ronald, 13; and Amy, 4. Penny lives at a sorority house at the University of Southern California, but the others swarm all over the place.

BERT'S EYE VIEW

about them. They ignore them.

If you start the dolphins in their act, stand back, brother, until they're finished.

You're not going to interrupt them with commercials and have them resume their act from where they left off. They won't buy that.

One program that did its shooting at Marineland for four years was "Sea Hunt."

And thereby hangs a pail.

Now it seems, during these early days, that Bubbles the Whale was housed in the fish oval tank along with other briney specimens before her own special tank was constructed.

A diver periodically came down with an aluminum bucket containing food for the fish.

Bubbles compatibly followed him around and occasionally touched the diver with her snout.

This was her signal that she wanted to share the food. The diver obligingly fed her.

• • • •

DURING an early "Sea Hunt" production, a veteran underwater photographer submerged in the fish oval tank.

Bubbles started nudging him. He tried to ignore her. Nudge. Ignore. Nudge. Nudge.

In a few moments time, the photographer was being bounced off the wall like a handball. Afraid he'd be the basic element in wall-to-whale carpeting—nothing finny about that—he came up for air.

The explanation for Bubble's unusual behavior was simple.

The photographer's underwater camera was encased in aluminum. It resembled a bucket, the very same bucket that Bubbles was accustomed to being fed from. She was a little unhappy when he didn't feed her after she nudged him.

The photographer understood the simple explanation. However, he simply refused to go down again, even with the aluminum case concealed.

• • • •

THERE' NO CONCEALING Marineland's daily schedule from its paying customers so that television can have priority.

"We welcome TV," said Monahan, "but our shows go on schedule for our customers first even if there is only one person in the audience."

One rainy day there were only three persons, boys huddled under one umbrella, in the 3,000-seat Sea Arena auditorium. Following the rule — but reluctantly — the show went on as usual.

When the time came for the next show, it was still raining. Again there were three persons in the audience—the same three boys.

Like television, they came back for a repeat performance.

MISS L. A. COUNTY Beauty Pageant — Ten finalists are judged in formal gowns, swimsuits and in 3-min. talent performances for the right to vie to represent California in the Miss America contest. Bill Burrud emcees the 90-min. live telecast at 8:30 p.m., ch. 13, with Jack Bailey and Rhonda Fleming as judges, and Alan Sloane handling backstage interviews with the pretty hopefuls.

CHANGING MATILDA: The New Australia — Chet Huntley is reporter for an hour-long at the fun-loving, hard-working people making up an "enormous island of Western civilization surrounded by exploding Asia" —and not very worried about it—at 10 p.m., in color, ch. 4. We see the effects of her absorption of millions of white Europeans, a crowded Melbourne pub during the "6 o'lock swill," the vast Outback—dismissing the kangaroo (seen mainly in zoos) and boomerangs as we're reminded that the nation has more expresso bars than emus, more washing machines than wallabies, more delicatessens than dingoes and more air-conditioners than aborigines.

MICHAEL JACKSON—Premiere. The London-born KHJ-radio conversationalist hosts nightly guests talking of fields other than their own. Mort Sahl joins Jackson on the opener, 12 midnight, ch. 9.

DOES GETTING UP NIGHTS MAKE YOU FEEL OLD

After 35, common Kidney or Bladder irritations often occur and may make you tense and nervous from too frequent passages both day and night. Secondarily, you may lose sleep and suffer from Headache, Backache and feel old, tired, depressed, in such irritation. CYSTEX usually brings fast, relaxing comfort by working in 3 ways (Analgesic, Urinary Antiseptic, Germicide) to relieve pain and irritation and help flush out CYSTEX as directed. Try it better luck.

BEVERLY ADAMS, who frequently appears with "My Three Sons," takes time out to represent ABC-TV in wishing everyone a happy Easter and good hunting.

VIET NAM: The Deadly Decision — A probing, in-depth report on the military and political aspects of the war in Vietnam is anchored by Charles Collingwood at 7:30 p.m., ch. 2, with Far Eastern correspondent Peter Kalischer reporting on the military aspects of the crisis while Southeast Asia correspondent Bernard Kalb dwells on the political ones. A 13-man CBS task force, including four camera teams, flew to Saigon three weeks ago, and, in Paris, Collingwood examined the French role in the Vietnam crisis and interviewed the widowed Mme. Ngo Dinh Nhu. How America got involved there in the first place, and what we are planning to do in the weeks ahead, will be detailed in a round-table wind-up, and in interviews with Amb. Henry Cabot Lodge and Vietnam's leader Gen. Nguyen Khanh.

DICK VAN DYKE—Brainstorming for a new program idea, Rob decides to do something never before done on television—radio. For the cast, he assembles a trio of old-time radio stars to re-create their memorable roles. During the 9:30 p.m., ch. 2 show, we see Arlene Harris (The Chatterbox) and Bert Gordon (The Mad Russian) playing themselves, with Edwin Carp (The Fish Man) portrayed by actor Richard Haydn, author of "Diary of Edwin Carp."

BACK TO BUCKSKINS

FOR HIS ROLE as "Davy Crockett," Fess Parker wore buckskins and seldom got close to a razor. As a congressman in "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington," he was closely shaven and trimly attired in modern-day three-button suits. In fall, Fess goes back to buckskins and away from razors for his role in a new series, "Daniel Boone."

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—Fess Parker, who flashed to overnight stardom in a three-part "Davy Crockett" video show almost 10 years ago, will revive the character on television by changing his name to Daniel Boone.

Sound haywire? That's the way television works.

Parker and 20th Century-Fox planned to introduce a new hour-long series in the fall titled "Davy Crockett." But legal hassles and possible complications with Walt Disney (who produced the original show) forced a change of plans.

So 20th and Parker decided to keep the buckskins and 'coonskin hat but change the character to another frontiersman hero, Dan'l Boone, who happened to be a contemporary of Crockett's.

The Alamo, Jim Bowie and Sam Houston, of course, will be missing from the new series unless the producers decide to louse up history.

ACTOR PARKER is an admirable man, tall (6 feet 5), good-natured and placid. A Texan, he'd have made a formidable frontiersman himself.

Like a good many out-sized actors, Fess is more at home in western costume than in modern street clothes. Like John Wayne, the late Gary Cooper and Charlton Heston, he looks as if someone had thrown a lariat around him to get him in a dress shirt and necktie.

"I suppose it's true that big men feel uncomfortable in street clothes," he said. "But you put any male in clothes that don't suit him and he'll feel a little bit uneasy."

Such was the case a year ago when Big Fess played a modern congressman in "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington," a flop television series.

Parker explains the disaster by saying:

"I'm still living in the shadow of Davy Crockett. Now that we've changed the character to Boone I'm concerned that it may cause some confusion to viewers.

"You'd be surprised how many adults don't know the difference between the two men."

MORE COMPLICATED than his appearance would suggest, Parker is going ahead with the new series as a basis for regaining his popularity and establishing himself as a motion picture star. It's a beginning.

"I haven't worked very hard at this business," he said during lunch in the studio commissary. "I invested in real estate and went sailing instead of concentrating on an acting career. It was a mistake. I came up so fast I wasn't prepared for the success.

"After this series I'd like to play some comedy for a change. I'm an essentially comic character anyway.

"The studio agreed to put me in a picture if I accepted the series. I'm really excited about that. Right now I'm waiting to hear what movie they'll get for me."

If Parker can rekindle the old fire that made a national rage of Davy Crockett (and himself) a decade ago, he shouldn't have any trouble picking his shots in movies.

IN HER EASTER BONNET

Roberta Shore, pretty young star of NBC-TV's "The Virginian," wears an old-fashioned Easter bonnet to brighten the holiday.

The petite actress, aware that her bonnet is not currently fashionable, nevertheless believes it has a decided advantage. No one could possibly mistake it for a lampshade.

ASTHMA & SMOG

Air poisoned by smog, gas, dust and pollen aggravates recurring attacks of Bronchial Asthma and Bronchitis. At the first sign of difficult breathing, wheezing, coughing and mucus congestion from such causes, start taking MENDACO to combat allergy, loosen and help remove choking phlegm, and thus promote freer breathing and more restful sleep. Most druggists keep and recommend MENDACO.

'Twilight Zone' Fading Out

HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—Writer Rod Serling has been notified that his "Twilight Zone" series is going off television.

Next week, he jumps out of an airplane.

"There is no connection," says Serling.

The 39-year-old Serling was a World War II paratrooper. His decision to jump is based on a belief in that form of combat.

Rod is a mature man when it comes to facing a crisis in this television business. "Twilight Zone" got "booted off" once before, so he's used to it.

"The other time we were tossed off with the knowledge that we might come back in hour form," he said. "This time we have no assurances that we'll ever come back.

There was a slim chance that "Twilight Zone" might have moved over to ABC-TV next season. However, that hope was dashed in negotiations between Serling and ABC's brass.

SPECIAL

CHRYSLER THEATRE — Veteran producer-writer-director John Houseman offers his first production for this series with Anthony Franciosa starring at 8:30 p.m., ch. 4, in color, as a young man with a bitter resentment against society. Blaming his former wife for the failure of their marriage, he alienates his father, his girl friend, his work foreman and his son with his bitterness—so decides to turn to something new, robbing a filling station safe, which he's cautioned to do unarmed. Pat O'Brien, Bethel Leslie (of the Boone repertory group), Lisabeth Hush and Russell Collins are featured. (Hour is preempted next week for a Tennessee Ernie Ford variety-comedy special, with Jack Benny, Andy Williams, Annette Funicello and Dorothy Provine.)

NO PAYMENTS FOR SIX MONTHS

One confidential phone call to a Certified Loan Counselor can arrange for the money you need. Certified's Phone-A-Loan Service provides the cash to pay off all of your monthly bills now... puts off payments of any kind for six months... then gives you as long as five years to repay. Certified gives you the chance to declare a debt holiday and have the extra money for those things you've wanted and needed but couldn't afford. When you do make a payment, it probably will be less than half of all your present monthly installments put together. As a property owner you are eligible for a Certified cash loan. You may now have a 1st or 2nd mortgage... you may now be behind in monthly payments... even if you have been turned down recently... it will still pay you to talk to a Certified Loan Counselor.

SINGER Martha Tilton is featured during "Musical Years—Benny Goodman" at 7 p. m. Saturday, channel 7.

SPECIAL

THE MUSICAL YEARS — KMPC personality Dick Whittinghill, a former Pied Piper singer, hosts the second in a series of musical specials recalling the great bands of the 30's and 40's. Benny Goodman, the king of swing, will be recalled at 7 p.m., ch. 7, by liltin' Martha Tilton, former Goodman sidemen Eddie Rosa on clarinet and Babe Russin on tenor-sax, plus Bobby Hammack and the orchestra. Ziggy Ellman, Jess Stacey, Gus Bivona and Lionel Hampton will recall anecdotes of their experiences with Goodman.

Pan and Fan Mail

Seeing the clairvoyant (her lovely eyes) on the Perry Mason show March 12 "bugged" me until I decided she reminded me of a Long Beach product.

In Wilson Hi School (1937) Priscilla Moran played the co-lead in "Death Takes a Holiday"—later was hired by Paramount.

Do you know if Lori March (the clairvoyant) is Priscalla Moran?

Mrs. S. Dahl, Long Beach

Miss March, who lives in New York, is represented in Southern California by the Kumin-Olenick Agency in Beverly Hills. They're "bugged" too. Can't find a biography on Miss March. There's hope, though, if they ever finish their spring cleaning. In the meantime, will the real Priscilla Moran please step forward to answer Mrs. Dahl's question?

* * * *

There's a lovely, haunting theme song for the "Hollywood and the Stars" series. I believe it's from some old movie. Could you please find out the name of the song?

Mrs. Louise Kratky, Long Beach

The name of the song — it's new, not old—is "Hollywood and the Stars." It was composed by Elmer Bernstein especially for the program. It has not been recorded for general distribution.

* * * *

What frequency is radio station KCJA, your Long Beach city government station?

Paul Moser, Los Angeles

Paul, I hate to disillusion you, but we don't have a KCJA any more. We haven't had a KCJA since November 1949.

I know it's still listed in our phone book under the water department in the "Long Beach City of" classification. But look, Paul, you can't believe everything you read.

Anyway, we do have a KDO-236 which is on the 155-megacycle band and is used by the water department for emergency communications with the fire department.

If for some reason you want to reach KDO-236, try calling the phone number listed for KCJA. But you'll have to wait for an emergency before there's anybody there to answer.

Want the facts? Want to spike rumors? Want to learn the truth about prominent personalities? Write Walter Scott, PARADE, 733 Third Ave., New York 17, N.Y. Your full name will be used unless otherwise requested. Volume of mail received makes personal replies impossible.

Q. Is it true that Ted Sorensen is being subsidized by the Kennedy family to write his biography of the late President to counteract the Lasky book? Also is it true that the Washington Evening Star has been purchased by the Kennedy family?—Mrs. J. W. H., Washington, D.C.

A. Sorensen is under contract to the publishing house of Harper & Row, is receiving no subsidy from the Kennedy family. None of the Kennedys plans to purchase the Washington Evening Star. The late President once thought of buying a newspaper after he finished his Presidency, but he never mentioned the Star.

Q. Lynda Bird Johnson, the President's daughter—does she plan to marry a Roman Catholic? — Ben Schmidt, Wheeling, W.Va.

A. Her fiancé is of that faith.

Q. How many Russian tourists visit the U.S. each year? And how many American tourists visit Soviet Russia?—I. English, Hanover, N.H.

A. Approximately 100 Russian tourists visit the U.S. Approximately 15,000 American tourists visit Soviet Russia.

Q. Has the Garry Moore variety TV show been canceled? If so, why?—Frances Ford, Binghamton, N.Y.

A. It has been canceled. Reason: poor ratings. But there's a possibility it will be reinstated, TV program schedules being what they are.

Q. Does Jack Paar ever appear without his hairpiece? It's the most unusual triangular hairpiece I've ever seen. How much does it cost?—D. T., Denver, Colo.

A. Paar always wears his hairpiece in public. Cost estimate: $500.

Q. Is it true that 20th Century-Fox plans to pay Elizabeth Taylor no more than $2,500,000 for her stint in Cleopatra, no matter what?—Dave Stabile, Los Angeles, Calif.

A. That's the story.

Q. Will Dinah Shore return to TV next season?—Hilda Lewis, Newark, N.J.

A. In all probability.

Q. How old are the Duke and Duchess of Windsor? Have they had plastic surgery?—Dane Vinson, Atlanta, Ga.

A. The Duke is 69, the Duchess 67. She recently underwent minor facial surgery in a London clinic.

Q. Who is the Princess Royal in Great Britain?—Fred Wickersham, New York, N.Y.

A. The Princess Royal, 67, is the only daughter of King George V. Shy and sensitive, she lives quietly in a flat in St. James Palace, has a home in Yorkshire. Recently she took on some additional public duties of the Royal Family because the Queen Mother was ill, and the Queen, Princess Margaret and Princess Alexandra were all expecting.

Q. Whatever happened to the negotiations between the Vatican and the Hungarian Communist authorities for the release of Josef Cardinal Mindszenty? — K. Lyles, Washington, N.C.

A. Mindszenty, 71, may have been released by the time this sentence appears in print. In any event his release is imminent.

Q. I understand from women who have danced with him that President Johnson is a crack ballroom dancer. Is he better than Kennedy was? — Janice Drew, Washington, D.C.

A. President Johnson is an excellent ballroom dancer. President Kennedy's back gave him so much trouble he usually avoided dancing. Johnson is undoubtedly the best dancer to occupy the White House in decades. Eisenhower never danced in the White House. Truman didn't know how to dance. The late President Roosevelt was a victim of infantile paralysis.

Q. What ever happened to former screen star Jean Arthur?—George Newell, Arlington, Va.

A. Miss Arthur, 55, lives in northern California, does no screen work.

Q. Has Rosemary Clooney ever been reconciled with her former husband, Jose Ferrer?—M. L. C., Quincy, Mass.

A. Yes, for more than a year now.

Q. Who is the girl who used to dance with Fred Astaire on his TV specials?—L. Weeks, Ft. Worth, Tex.

A. Barrie Chase.

Q. Is it on the level that Eva Gabor is 15 years older than her mother-in-law?—Bertha Gersch, Miami, Fla.

A. Eva Gabor, 39, is married to Dick Brown. Brown's father, Saul, a textile manufacturer, recently married Joyce Rowley, 25, a London model.

Q. Do the Beatles have to pay income tax on the money they've earned in this country?—Amos Bartley, Seattle, Wash.

A. No. The U.S. tax treaty with Great Britain says that an employee of a British company working in the U.S. for less than 183 days a year will not be taxed in this country. Income tax rates in Great Britain, however, are much higher than in the U.S. The Beatles work for a company they own called Nems.

Q. In front of Grauman's Chinese Theatre in Hollywood, where the stars put their footprints in concrete—do they have the footprints of any child stars?—Constance Keel, Ojai, Calif.

A. Yes. Shirley Temple's and Hayley Mills' (l.).

Q. I understand that more crimes are committed in nice weather than poor weather. Is this true?—Ted Lowrie, Jacksonville, Fla.

A. True.

Q. Who said: "A husband is what is left of the lover after the nerve has been extracted"?—Evans Wylie, Abilene, Tex.

A. American humorist and writer Helen Rowland.

young Americans carry out the spirit of

CHRISTIAN PEACE

Young Samaritan, Stanford medical student Andrew Nichols, examines ailing child in church hospital in Rio Verde, Brazil. Financed by drug firm of Smith, Kline and French, Nichols spent nine weeks at hospital.

This Easter, as millions of Christians worship the world over, a red-haired, freckled girl named Ann Davison will attend Mass in Arequipa, Peru, then spend her holiday in a makeshift dispensary, examining the sick children of Indian peasants.

In a jungle clearing in New Guinea, an electrician, a carpenter and a construction superintendent from the Midwest will attend Lutheran services, then inspect the concrete-block building recently constructed by them to serve as that area's first school.

In Dar es Salaam, Tanganyika, a young Quaker couple will mark the holiday in that African capital's YMCA. Working with teenage Africans new to city life, they will discuss health, hygiene, sanitation and how to start community groups.

In other nations of Latin America, Africa, Asia and the Middle East, hundreds of other young U.S. Christians will be similarly marking Easter. They are not members of the Peace Corps, nor are they missionaries. Instead they are carrying out a message far older than that of the government agency. In the spirit of Christ and of the Good Samaritan, they are giving up a piece of their lives to serve their fellow men.

While the Peace Corps has been growing rapidly and drawing acclaim, a similar, religiously oriented "Peace Corps" has been growing quietly alongside it. In a number of Protestant denominations and in the Roman Catholic Church, organizations have been founded to send Christian men and women for short-term service in foreign lands. So far, the number of these "lay missionaries" represents a mere handful. Yet those who wish to join—mostly men and women in their 20s and 30s, but also married couples and retired people—are so numerous that directors of the programs haven't the resources to accept all comers.

Of course, there is nothing really new about churches sending people overseas. Missionaries have been spreading the gospel of Christianity ever since St. Paul. But previous missionaries made it a life's calling and were concerned primarily with saving souls. The current crop have other careers and agree only to interrupt them to give a few years to their faith. And, without theological training, they neither preach nor proselytize. Instead they concentrate on living with people, working with them and helping them to help themselves.

■ they want involvement ■

"It's the same spirit as the Peace Corps," says the Rev. Victor Fernandez, S.J., director of the Papal Volunteers for Latin America, the Catholic lay missionary group, "only more so. People today seem to want to involve themselves with the lives of other people. In our case, the people want to relate this involvement to the higher meaning of God."

Of all the groups sending laymen overseas for short-term service, the Papal Volunteers are the largest and most successful. Concentrating wholly on Latin America, they now number 282 Volunteers in 13 countries—including some working in the very shadow of the Christ the Redeemer statue in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, shown on today's cover. Among them are 96 teachers, 41 medical technicians, 27 community development experts, 20 social workers and 10 volunteers assigned to credit unions and cooperatives. Fifty are helping to train catechists to carry on grass-roots religious education programs.

The volunteers include one nurse who staffs a clinic deep in the Amazon jungle of Brazil; a number of young men who are radio technicians and whose job is to maintain the transmitters by which missioners conduct "radio schools" for Indians in the high Andes; a public-relations man who is helping to set up Latin

Easter in the CORPS

America's first Catholic Information Center. A Tulsa, Okla., couple with five children, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Farnsworth, are assigned to a village in Guatemala, where Farnsworth is helping establish a peasants' co-operative. In the same community, Dr. Joseph Trimble, 60, a Tulsa dentist, operates a public health clinic.

Actually, the Papal Volunteers predate the Peace Corps. It came about, as did so many recent Catholic innovations, at the instigation of Pope John XXIII. The first move on the part of North American bishops was to set up a Bishops' Committee for Latin America, with Richard Cardinal Cushing as chairman and the Rev. John J. Considine as director. The second was to set up the Volunteers—in September 1960.

■ 2 months' preparation ■

Today, the Volunteers are recruited through diocesan directors. They sign up for two-year terms, are given assignments as their skills are required. Local dioceses pay their expenses and transportation. Latin dioceses to which they are assigned furnish room and board. They draw about $30 to $60 a month. They get about two months' instruction in language and local customs at one of four intercultural centers in Puerto Rico, Mexico or Brazil. They also get a little religious instruction—"but for their own benefit, to give meaning to what they are doing," says Father Fernandez.

If the Papal Volunteers concentrate on Latin nations, however, Protestants are big in other areas. The Walther League of the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod has sent volunteers to New Guinea, Nigeria and Haiti. The small Church of the Brethren, a pacifist church, has assigned persons all over the world. The American Friends Service Committee, continuing a long Quaker tradition of service, has 50 volunteers, age 21 to 30, in India, Tanganyika, West Germany and Guatemala, under a new two-year program called VISA—Voluntary International Service Assignments.

The Mormons, of course, are famous for their youth-missionary program, which was a model for the Peace Corps. Under it, all young Mormons give two years to church work after completing their education. Some spend this period in the U.S., others overseas. However, the Mormon program also includes proselytizing, since every Mormon is an ordained minister. The Seventh-day Adventists, who also have a large overseas missionary program, now are considering a short-term one for laymen, according to Francis Millard, Adventist associate general secretary.

Many groups also sponsor summer work projects overseas for college and high school students. Largest of these is administered by Ecumenical Voluntary Service, an arm of the National Council of Churches, which runs overseas projects in 34 lands. Most of them are strict manual labor. A typical example is a project completed in Korea last year, in which 12 college students dug a well and constructed a community center for a peasant village. Unlike the other projects, students who go to these work camps pay for the privilege and must furnish their transportation besides.

Like the Peace Corps, these young Christians of all denominations have been welcomed and praised for their service and dedication by the leaders of other lands. But it may be that the people they work for are not the greatest beneficiaries of the Christian answer to the Peace Corps. Archbishop Romolo Carboni, apostolic delegate to Peru, may have summed it up best in speaking about the Papal Volunteers in that country. "This program has been a great help not only to the people of the countries where the missioners are working," the archbishop said. "It has been a help to the very lay missioners themselves, who are working out their salvation in a spirit of generous dedication."

Preparing for service, Papal Volunteers study Spanish, Indian dialects in class in Arequipa, Peru.

Teaching, Quaker youth gives basic literacy lessons to Tanganyikan boy (l.), while Papal Volunteer does same for Peruvian. Biggest task of Christian volunteers is teaching; some spend spare time at it.

Building, young American works alongside Japanese in construction project in Tohuku, Japan.

do you know what to do WHEN SOMEBODY'S SICK?

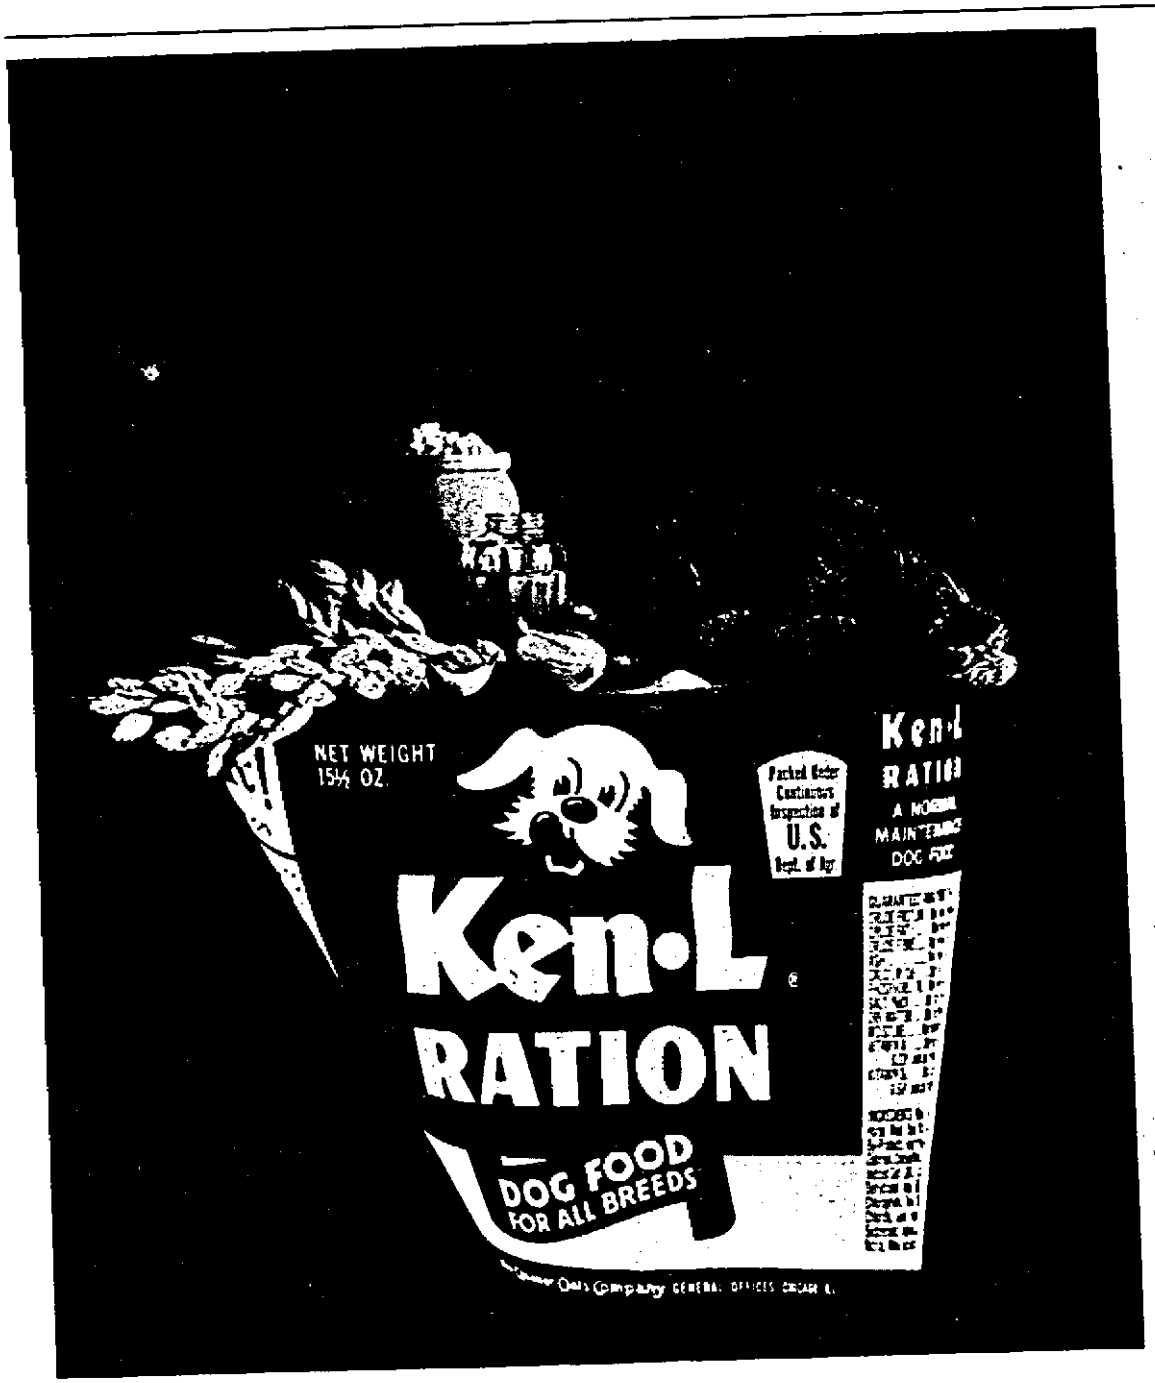

It's spring again, and those annoying days of colds that hang on and on have returned. It's time for every family to brush up on the fundamentals of home nursing care.

Do you know what to do if influenza or any one of a whole group of illnesses strikes in your home? The following quiz is based on standard nursing techniques. Write TRUE or FALSE after each statement. Then score yourself according to the answers below. A score of 8-10 means you know your way around a sickroom. If you rate 7 or below, you'd better brush up on home nursing care.

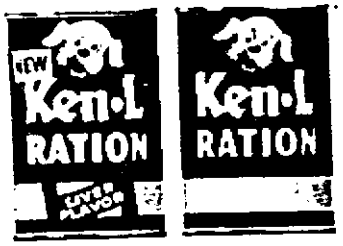

1. Always take a sick person's pulse with your thumb against the inside of his wrist. _____
2. A sickroom should be as warm as possible; temperatures should be 76°-80°. _____
3. Normal body temperature is 98.6°. Any variation is a sure sign of illness. _____
4. If a member of the family has a severe pain in the abdomen, apply a hot water bag or heating pad, then call a doctor. _____
5. During hot weather it's all right to use an electric fan in the sickroom, provided it isn't turned directly on the patient. _____
6. You can judge the severity of the illness by the amount of fever. _____
7. If a doctor says "Use dry heat," he means something like a hot water bag. _____
8. If a foreign body is lodged in someone's nose, tell him to hold one nostril shut and blow hard to get rid of it. _____
9. Respiration, or breathing rate, is a good indicator of illness. If you note that an adult, while at rest, breathes more than 30 times a minute, it may be a sign of illness. _____
10. That old saw, "Starve a fever," is no longer an accepted medical technique. _____

ANSWERS

1. FALSE. Never use your thumb, because you have a strong pulse there, which may confuse the count.
2. FALSE. A sickroom should be 68°-70°, and even this may be too warm for people used to cooler temperatures.
3. FALSE. Even a healthy person's temperature may dip in the morning to 97° and rise in the evening to 99° or slightly higher.
4. FALSE. Pain may be from an inflamed appendix, for which heat is dangerous.
5. TRUE. A sick person can be quite uncomfortable in hot weather, and a fan can help circulate the air.
6. FALSE. Don't let the thermometer influence your judgment. Some mild illnesses will produce high fevers and some of the more serious ones comparatively low fevers.
7. TRUE, even though there's water in the bag. Hot applications are either dry or moist. Baths or hot compresses provide moist heat.
8. FALSE. Have a doctor remove the object.
9. TRUE. Normal breathing rate for an adult is 16-20 inspirations per minute; for children, 20-25 per minute; and for infants, 30-35. The rate tends to increase with illness.
10. TRUE. The body uses vast amounts of protein during episodes of high fever, and this protein should have rapid replacement.

THE BOOTLES & THE BEATLES

by LLOYD SHEARER

The Bootles: Quartet of lovelies does girlie version of the Beatles.

HOLLYWOOD.

Behind many a young show business idol who shows a spark of talent there usually stalks a mastermind who fans the flame, schedules and exploits the performer.

Twenty-five years ago a razor-sharp press agent, George Evans, took under his wing a skinny, anemic-looking singer named Frank Sinatra. When the crooner was working the Paramount Theatre in New York, Evans had him dress in a suit, loosely stitched on purpose at the seams.

A small army of shrieking girls descended on Sinatra, and when the howling pack clutched at his sleeves, the sleeves came off. They grabbed at his trousers, and the trousers came apart.

The crooner had to be rescued by police, but not before Evans had phoned the press photographers. The resultant photos of Sinatra, down to his shorts, made the front pages of newspapers pretty nearly everywhere.

In the past half-dozen years we've seen Elvis Presley masterminded by Colonel Tom Parker, a former carnival pitchman and acknowledged expert in act exploitation. We've witnessed the rise and fall of two teenage favorites, Frankie Avalon and Fabian, supposedly singers, "manufactured" by Bob Marcucci, a Philadelphia recording manager. But none of these promotions compares with the publicity and exploitation job recently performed in this country for the Beatles.

No act in recent show business history has been so shrewdly paced and promoted. The man most responsible for the accomplishment is Brian Epstein, manager of the Beatles.

Epstein, whose family runs a record shop in Liverpool, England, caught the long-maned rock 'n' roll quartet playing in a local cellar called the Liverpool Cavern. "I thought they had something," he says, "so I signed on as their manager." He then proceeded to build the four boys into the most popular show biz act on both sides of the Atlantic.

Today, at 29, Brian Epstein controls seven recording groups of artists: the Beatles, Gerry and the Pacemakers, The Fourmost, Cilla Black, Billy J. Kramer, Tommy Quickly and Sounds Incorporated.

Other than the Beatles, chances are you've heard none of these. But don't worry. Epstein is currently masterminding an invasion of America by his entertainers.

In the past 10 months at least one Epstein artist has hit the top spot on the British Hit Parade, and the little Napoleon of British show business sees no reason why some of them can't do the same over here.

FROM FAINTS TO FILMS

Epstein knows all the angles—how to hire a battery of press agents, girls who scream and faint, lawyers who handle the merchandise tie-ups, publishers who print the song sheets, manufacturers who produce the records, bookers who sign the acts, film executives who make the motion pictures.

At the moment he's signed to book pop concerts every Sunday night in London's Prince of Wales Theatre. He's sending his acts out on road tours. He's supervising the Beatles in their first motion picture and expects that the Beatles alone will gross at least $10,000,000 on all their activities before 1964 ends.

The phenomenal success of the Beatles has given rise to hopeful copyists.

A few weeks ago Chet De Milo, 24, a London-born Australian bandleader who has been in Hollywood for a year and who has studiously followed the course of the Beatles, decided to try what is known in show business as the sex-switch. He formed a quartet of four attractive girls who can sing. He and his partner, Mark Royal, wrote two songs for them, "I'll Let You Hold My Hand" and "Never Till Now." He then dressed the girls in black tops, stretch pants and boots, named them the Bootles.

He took the package to Gene Norman, head of Crescendo Records, and said, "Why don't we cut a couple of sides and give these girls a publicity build-up? They're all cute kids. One of them plays a guitar. Maybe they'll catch on, and we'll have an American version of the Beatles."

Norman agreed. The records were cut and distributed to disc jockeys throughout the country. Publicity agents have been hired to plug the girls and their high-heeled boots, and a plan is under way to book the quartet in conjunction with the Beatles under the title: the Beatles and the Bootles.

Brian Epstein, of course, will have nothing to do with the idea. Insofar as he's concerned, the Bootles will have to make it on their own.

Unfortunately for the girls, most rock 'n' roll records are purchased by 11- to 16-year-old females. Somehow, girls don't cotton to other girls. They go wild about fellas, especially those who appear slightly on the feminine side by growing long manes of hair which they toss from side to side as they strum their guitars.

Teenagers being as unfathomable as they are, the Bootles might have a better chance if they'd shave their heads.

The Beatles: Wild manes of hair, unbridled spontaneity and a mastermind promoter add up to hair-shaking box-office success.

LESLIE BLANCHARD WITH INGER STEVENS, STAR OF "THE FARMER'S DAUGHTER," CLAIROL'S NEW WEDNESDAY EVENING SERIES ON ABC-TV

A famous haircoloring artist tells why you should use a special colorfast shampoo if you color or lighten your hair

"The more beautiful your haircoloring, the more important it is to keep it beautiful," says Leslie Blanchard of New York, Color Director for Antoine Salon, Saks Fifth Avenue, and originator of many exciting haircoloring effects. "We use color to achieve the utmost in flattery for a woman—to play up her best features, and add life and elegance to the simplest styling.

"With haircoloring so important, naturally I like it to stay the way I designed it, clear and fresh looking. I don't want to see it turn cloudy or change after a shampoo or two."

When asked how he handles this important shampoo problem, Mr. Blanchard explained, "Now we have a very special answer in new Clairol Shampoo. It's special because it's colorfast—that is, it won't change hair color."

Very different from other leading shampoos, new colorfast shampoo by Clairol was specifically created for women who color or lighten their hair. In two unique formulas: Clairol Blue for all light delicate blonde shades of lightened and toned hair. Clairol Green for all red, brown and black shades of tints and lasting rinses. So you see, however you color your hair, one of these two is exactly right for you! Used by leading beauty salons everywhere. Now available at fine cosmetic counters.

This 'Magic-Bar' helps cut time, strain and grass!

It mechanically increases the force of your hand squeeze on the shears. Gives the blades more bite with less effort. So you finish your grass trimming faster, without a right hand that feels like it's going to fall off. You'll find the patented 'Magic-Bar' action only in WISS/WIZZ® Grass Shears...the ones with the hardened alloy steel blades. And, if we may get a word in edgewise, those blades are hand-honed for lasting sharpness. See the WISS/WIZZ, and other Wiss garden tools, at hardware, department and garden supply stores. A MAN WHO CLAIMS to be God's Son dies on a cross . . . and then lives again. Fact . . . or fiction? You can believe it, ignore or deny it. But if it is true, can you afford not to get the facts?

LIFE AFTER DEATH...what if it's TRUE?

Can you be indifferent to such a claim? Certainly it's worth the time it takes to investigate it! The same man who painstakingly provides for his family's welfare after he's gone may fail in the greatest provision of all . . . his own life after death. What if it's true? What if it's not a possibility, but an actuality?

And it is true! You can find this out for yourself by sending for this easy-to-read, 40-page free booklet: LIFE AFTER DEATH—FACT OR FICTION?

YOU'LL LOVE THIS VEAL STEAK

by BETH MERRIMAN Parade food editor

Veal steak is a deliciously tender cut when properly cooked. Our recipe has an additional attraction—exquisite flavor in the sauce. The olive rice cones make a perfect accompaniment. Serve with sliced carrots and a tossed green salad.

VEAL STEAK SAUTERNE

¼ cup flour
1 tablespoon paprika
1 teaspoon salt
1 veal steak, cut 1½ in. thick (1½ to 2 lb.)
1 Bermuda onion
3 tablespoons vegetable oil
¾ cup water
¼ cup sauterne
¼ teaspoon oregano
1 cup dairy sour cream

Combine flour, paprika and salt; dredge veal thoroughly with this mixture. Slice onion thin; cook in vegetable oil until soft and golden brown; remove onions from pan. Brown veal steak slowly on both sides in oil remaining in pan. Place onions on veal. Add any remaining flour mixture to pan. Add water; cover; simmer until veal is tender (about 1 hour). Remove veal and onions to platter; keep warm. Add wine, oregano and sour cream to pan; blend well; heat slowly. Pour over steak. Serves 6.

OLIVE RICE CONES

2½ cups water
½ teaspoon salt
4 tablespoons butter or margarine, divided
2⅔ cups precooked rice
¼ cup chopped stuffed olives
4 tablespoons minced parsley
½ cup mayonnaise

Combine water, salt and 2 tablespoons butter in large saucepan; bring to boil; stir in rice. Cover; remove from heat. Let stand 5 minutes. Fluff with fork. Melt remaining butter; add with olives, parsley and mayonnaise. Reheat to serving temperature. Pack into well-buttered small funnel or cone-shaped ice cream scoop; invert on platter. Continue until rice mixture is all used. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

Brown Sugar! On Quaker Oatmeal! Children like it!

BROWN SUGAR on oatmeal? Yes indeed! Children call it "butterscotch oatmeal" and like it fine. Many new ideas for oatmeal toppings are catching on good, too . . . like raisins, jam or preserves, fresh fruits, syrup.

Try them all.

And you know how nutritious Quaker Oats is. Take protein for example. Whole grain oats are richer in protein than any other leading cereal . . . even though oatmeal is the most economical cereal in the store.

And that hot, substantial oatmeal lights up a nice warm glow inside . . . makes the day look brighter . . . in a minute.

Cooks in just one minute... costs less than 2 cents a serving!

PARADE'S EIGHTH ANNUAL

ALL-AMERICA HIGH SCHOOL

■ PARADE's 1964 All-America High School Basketball Team is the highest scoring and tallest in its 8-year history. Chosen by vote of hundreds of high school and college coaches, it represents the top 25 scholastic players in the country, divided into 5 squads. Among them are 1 giant of 7'1", 5 men 6'8" or better. The starting lineup averages 6'7".

Many of these stars are certain to gain greater fame in college and pro ranks, as have such former PARADE All-Americas as Tom Meschery (St. Mary's-San Francisco Warriors), Jerry Lucas (Ohio State-Cincinnati Royals), Bill McGill (Utah-New York Knicks). Here is this year's crop.

FIRST SQUAD

WESTLEY UNSELD (6'8") Seneca H.S., Louisville, Ky. Player scouts of the University of Kentucky, which regularly produces top teams, call rangy, rugged Unseld "the best high school player in the country."

MIKE LEWIS (6'8") Missoula, Mont., H.S. Lewis has set all scoring and rebounding records of his team, which holds the state championship. Every Big Ten university has offered him an athletic scholarship.

LOU ALCINDOR (7'1") Power Memorial Academy, New York, N.Y. Still only a junior, this amazing youth is a PARADE All-America for the second successive year. High-scoring Alcindor has paced his team to a new New York City consecutive game victory mark.

LARRY MILLER (6'4") Catasauqua, Pa., H.S. Temple University coach Harry Litwack says Miller is the nation's "most complete" player in his age group. Miller has offers from more than 100 colleges.

JERRY SHARMAN (6'3") Charter Oak, Calif., H.S. This boy has a good start toward duplicating the career of his father, former All-America and pro great Bill Sharman. In one stretch he hit 20 of 21 foul shots.

SECOND SQUAD

RICHARD JONES (6'7") Lester H.S., Memphis, Tenn. A high point and rebound man, Jones is considered the best all-around high school player in his state.

ROGER BOHNENSTIEHL (6'6") Collinsville, Ill., H.S. His

shooting accuracy rate is a remarkable 60-plus per cent. An All-State selection last year.

HAROLD BOOKER (6'9") Darby-Colwyn H.S., Pa. Leading rebounder in Pennsylvania. Member of Class B state champion five which defeated many Class A teams.

RON WILLIAMS (6'3") Weirton, W. Va., H.S. To his coach, Jim Carey, Williams is "the greatest I've ever coached, or seen, for that matter."

JACK BETTRIDGE (6'2") Power Memorial Academy, New York, N.Y. He and first squad selection Alcindor helped make theirs nation's No. 1 high school team.

THIRD SQUAD

GLINDOR TORAIN (6'5") Central H.S., Muncie, Ind. Leading rebounder in Indiana. Selected member of the All-State five last year, played abbreviated schedule 63-64.

DON CHANEY (6'4") McKinley H.S., Baton Rouge, La. George Ireland, coach of NCAA champion Loyola of Chicago, rates him "right at the top of the '64 talent."

DAVE NEWMARK (6'11") Lincoln H.S., Brooklyn, N.Y. He's the best rebounder in the New York City public high school system and has a 90 grade average, too!

BRENDAN McCARTHY (6'2") De Matha Catholic H.S., Hyattsville, Md. Successor to John Austin, who was an earlier PARADE All-America from De Matha.

BOB TALLENT (6'1") Maytown, Ky., H.S. Led the state of Kentucky in scoring last year and averaged 40 points a game this year for an undistinguished team.

FOURTH SQUAD

BILL HOSKET (6'6") Belmont H.S., Dayton, O. KENNETH SPAIN (6'7") Austin H.S., Houston, Tex. EMANUEL LEAKS (6'8") East H.S., Cleveland, O. JIM PHILLIPS (6'1") Bishop Barry H.S., St. Petersburg, Fla. CHRIS ELLIS (6'4") Newport News, Va., H.S.

FIFTH SQUAD

WALT SIMON (6'3") Roosevelt H.S., Los Angeles, Calif. WILLIE BETTS (6'5") River Rouge, Mich., H.S. DAVID REASER (6'6") St. Albans H.S., Charleston, W. Va. DOUG WARDLAW (6') Wilbur L. Cross H.S., New Haven, Conn. CORKY BELL (6'2") John Adams H.S., Queens, N.Y.

A college "scholarship" ahead for him?

There's one way that guarantees it!

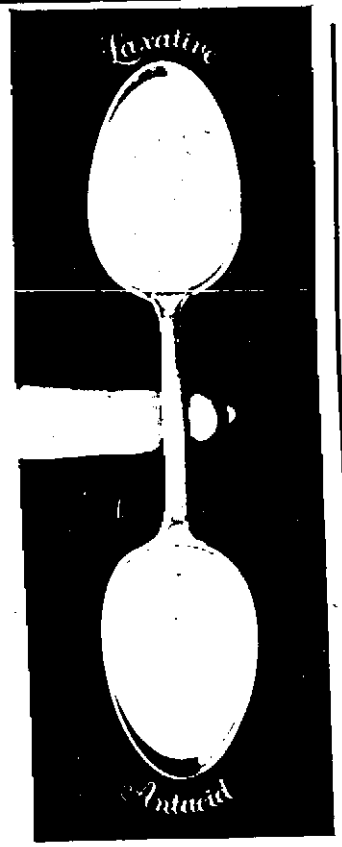

Is today's high cost of college making you uneasy about those big plans you have for your youngster?

Phillips' Milk of Magnesia is the Balanced Laxative!

Brings more complete relief than any single-purpose laxative

Phillips' Milk of Magnesia is both a laxative and an antacid. That's why it's called the balanced laxative. And that's why it brings you more complete relief than any single-purpose laxative.

As a laxative, Phillips' works thoroughly but gently, for truly comfortable relief. As an antacid, Phillips' relieves heartburn and queasiness and other acid discomforts that often accompany irregularity. No single-purpose laxative can give such complete yet gentle relief.

So, the next time you need a laxative, take Phillips' Milk of Magnesia—in regular or mint-flavored form. For more complete relief, get Phillips', the balanced laxative.

MY FAVORITE JOKES

by IRENE RYAN

EDITOR'S NOTE: Irene Ryan, who plays "Granny" on The Beverly Hillbillies, has enjoyed a notable 40-year career as a headliner in vaudeville, radio, motion pictures, night clubs and television. Born in El Paso, Tex., Miss Ryan moved to San Francisco at an early age and as a teenager became a chorus girl in a stock company show. From vaudeville she stepped into radio, making her debut in 1932. The Tim and Irene Show, one of the most popular programs in the early days of radio, served as a springboard to her motion picture career. During World War II, Miss Ryan co-starred with Bob Hope on his tours of military installations. In recent years she has confined her talents to television and personal appearances. Irene lives in Santa Monica and is renowned for her deadpan expression, her implausible voice and a delightful sense of humor, which gives birth to such jokes as these.

O'Reilly had been experiencing a run of bad luck at the track and was down to his last few bills when he sighted a priest anointing one of the horses before a race. So he placed all his money on the horse's nose to win, but the nag finished last.

A few days later O'Reilly bumped into the priest on the street and grumbled: "It's been lettin' me down, ye've done, that's what. I bet on a horse the other day because ye stopped to bless it and it finished last!"

"But, O'Reilly, me good man," answered the priest, "you don't understand. I wasn't blessing that horse—I was giving him last rites."

At the end of her first day on the job, a new secretary inquired of the bookkeeper, "Doesn't that sourpuss boss of ours ever laugh out loud?"

"Only," sighed the bookkeeper, "when we ask him for a raise."

A friend of mine was told by her doctor that she needed a costly operation. "And you needn't worry about the cost," soothed her doctor. "Just pay me $200 down and $50 a month for the next 3 years."

Slightly aghast, my friend exclaimed: "Sounds like buying a car!"

"You're right," replied the doctor. "I am."

A distinguished portrait painter stared fixedly at a lady during a Beverly Hills cocktail party, then strode to her side and confessed: "I don't recall your name, but your features certainly are familiar to me."

"They ought to be," she stated coolly. "I paid you $5,000 last year to paint them!"

A couple of marriage-conscious gals were discussing their future careers.

"It's the life of an airline hostess for me," said one. "That's the way to meet a well-heeled man of the world."

"But there must be a less wearing way of meeting men," pondered the other.

"Could be," said the first, "but you'll never find a better opportunity for looking them over than when they're strapped down!"

Definition of a reckless driver: A man who lets his wife take the wheel.

And speaking of reckless drivers, I asked a friend of mine why it is that she consistently ignores red lights.

"Why not?" she asked. "When you've seen one, you've seen them all."

I think that people in Hollywood are more weight-conscious than any place else in the world. An actress who lives across the street from me lost 190 pounds of repulsive, flabby fat in just 60 days —she divorced him!

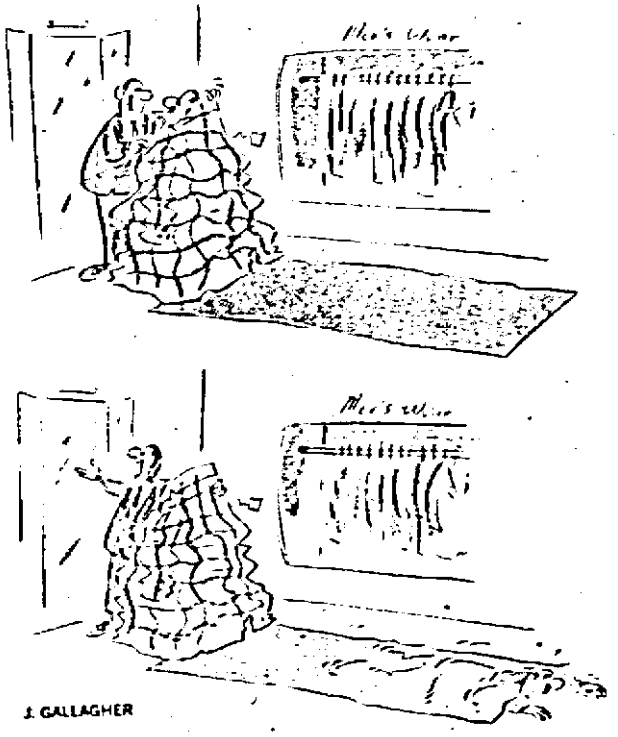

Anecdote of the Week

■ Singer Pat Boone is the father of four daughters. When these four occasionally get a little hard to handle, Pat takes over, giving Shirley the day off. Recently he sat down to eat with his youngest daughter. The little girl refused to eat her meal of steak and potatoes. Remonstrated Pat: "There are millions of starving Chinese kids who'd love to have this food."

"Okay," answered Pat's youngest. "Name two." ■

THE WORSE FOR WEAR

PARADE'S SPECIAL

INTELLIGENCE REPORT

WHIPLASH. Many insurance adjusters claim that whiplash, an acceleration injury of the neck, is frequently a phony complaint of dishonest claimees trying to get a larger settlement. Dr. Ian Macnab of the University of Toronto, who recently completed an extensive study of whiplash, says this isn't so. Of 256 patients who received insurance settlements for their injuries, he saw 145, two years or more after their litigation was settled, and 121 still complained of pain.

BIRTH RATE DROP. The birth rate in the U.S. is slowly declining. Last year the 4,137,000 births represented a rate of 21.8 per 1,000, down from the postwar 1947 peak of 26.5 per 1,000. There are now 190,810,000 people in this country.

2 SINGLES. Last year only 2 single records sold 1,000,000 or more copies: "Hey Paula," by Paul & Paula, and "Sugar Shack," by Jim Gilmer & The Fireballs. An estimated 90% of all singles are purchased by girls aged 11 to 16.

UNEMPLOYMENT SOLUTION. To help solve the nation's unemployment problem, Labor Secretary Willard Wirtz has come up with the following recommendation: add 2 years to the free education system, making education compulsory to age 18. "This move would eliminate about 2 million of the 3.5 million teenagers (14–19) currently in the working force," Wirtz declares. "I do not think most of those 3.5 million ought to be there."

TV TRAINING GROUND. There was a time, years ago, when all major film studios signed young players and cast them in a series of B pictures. Today B pix and the training ground they provided are both gone. Television is the current breeding ground for beginning actors and actresses. Revue Productions, largest producers of TV films, has more than 100 young players under contract.

THE BRITISH ARE COMING. In the last 3 years there has been a 35% increase in the number of British students coming to this country. Major reasons for the increase: (1) Shortage of higher education facilities in Great Britain; (2) Snob appeal of American universities. Prince William of Gloucester, first cousin of Queen Elizabeth, is doing graduate work in economics at Stanford. Recently the Prince took a 2-hour British civil service exam at the British consulate in San Francisco to qualify him for a British Commonwealth relations job. The Prince failed the exam for the second time, eliminating himself from any further job consideration in that service.

WILLIAM OF GLOUCESTER: HE'S GOT EXAM BLUES.

DIET DINNERS. Mead Johnson & Co., producers of Metrecal, distributed by its Edward Dalton Co. division, is test-marketing in Cincinnati, Columbus, Denver, Indianapolis, Sacramento and Seattle a new brand of diet dinners called "Good Measure." The line consists of canned beef stew, noodles and chicken, and chile con carne. The food in each can comes to 300 calories. Campaign theme is that a dieter can eat 3 meals a day and still lose 2 to 4 pounds per week.
